Holt Renews WPA Attack; Calls Inquiry Report False

West Virginia Senator Brands Investigation a 'Whitewash.'

Asserts Witnesses Ignored by Agents

Says Material Costs on Projects Excessive; Assails Hopkins.

By Felix Bruner.

Characterizing denial by Harry L. Hopkins, works relief administrator, that there is politics in the Relief Administration in West Virginia as "whitewash" and "lies," Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, made additional blistering charges of maladministration yesterday.

Just before the Senate's youngest member started his tirade in a speech from the floor, Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York presented to President Roosevelt an appeal for continuation of works relief and a proposal that $2,340,000,000 additional be appropriated for the purpose. LaGuardia was acting as president of the United States Conference of Mayors.

Mr. Roosevelt was continuing his study of the situation preliminary to sending to Congress next week recommendations for a new appropriation outside the regular budget. He is not expected to suggest a sum as large as that proposed by the mayors, but he has given no hint as to how much he will ask.

Investigation Is Indicated.

Indications were that charges and counter charges will eventually result in a Congressional investigation of the administration and form of relief. Resolutions asking such investigations are pending in the Senate.

Meanwhile, Hopkins at a press conference, insisted that politics will be kept out of relief, and, backing up his assertion, announced that two Illinois administrators had been dismissed for "collecting money on a project for political purposes."

"The investigation was a sham, a fraud, a farce," Holt shouted in the Senate, in reply to findings of the Hopkins organization, after an inquiry, that relief and politics were not intermingled in West Virginia.

"There was no intention to investigate," he said. "Albert Fall would have brought in a more honest report on Teapot Dome. There were more lies per square foot on that report than any in the history of the United States."

Charges Witnesses Ignored.

Talking loudly and rapidly, Holt read one letter after another from persons he said he had suggested to Hopkins investigators as witnesses, declaring that the investigation had been perfunctory.

"Hopkins doesn't want the facts about West Virginia known," he said. "He is even more extravagant with his words than with the people's money."

Holt charged that every WPA employe who had given damaging facts to Alan Johnstone, field representative for the WPA, who had charge of the investigation, had been subsequently dismissed.

"If I told everything that has been happening in the WPA in West Virginia, you wouldn't be able to adjourn in time for the conventions," he told the Senate. "Why, it cost the taxpayers $27 to cut down one tree."

Holt scorned the charge that money had been collected from WPA workers to pay for one of his own political broadcasts.

"That's just another of the lies Mr. Hopkins tells!" he shouted. "Do you know what that broadcast cost? Just $900."

The youthful Senator declared that "while we were investigating the WPA in Charleston, somebody was investigating my desk in Washington."

He had charged several days ago

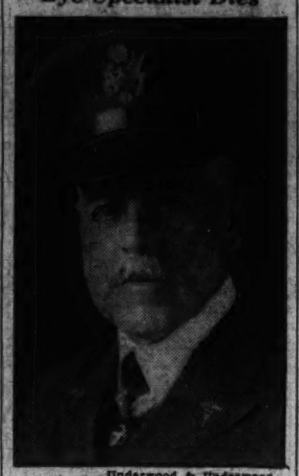
Eye Specialist Dies



Underwood & Underwood.

DR. WILLIAM H. WILMER.

Wilmer Dies At Home Here; Eye Specialist

Private Funeral Saturday; Burial in Washington Cathedral Grounds.

Dr. William Holland Wilmer, a pioneer in the study of eye diseases, and whose world-famed skill as a surgeon brought Kings and Presidents as well as hundreds of the poor to his offices in Baltimore and Washington, died yesterday of a heart attack at his home, 2101 D street northwest.

Although 72 years old, Dr. Wilmer was still in active practice. He was preparing to go to his office at 1610 I street northwest, when he felt ill and returned to bed. At 9:15 a. m. he succumbed. For several days he had been suffering from a cold which, it is believed, weakened his heart.

At his bedside were his wife, a son, Richard Hooker Wilmer, an attorney here, and his daughter, Mrs. Russell E. Sard. Another son, William Holland Wilmer, jr., of New York, and five grandchildren also survive.

The funeral, which will be private, will be held Saturday at the home with burial following in the grounds of the Washington Cathedral, of which Dr. Wilmer was a warden since 1915.

Dr. Wilmer, who began practice in this city in 1889, returned here more than two years ago when he was retired as head of the Wilmer Opthalmological Intitute of the Johns Hopkins University. One of the founders in 1897 of the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital in this city, he continued on the staff for the last two years, performing an operation there as late as a week ago Tuesday. He was the last surviving member of the original medical staff of the hospital.

Had Brilliant Career.

A week ago Wednesday he served as honorary pallbearer at the funeral of Charles C. Glover, famed Washington benefactor. One of his last professional acts was a visit to the new Supreme Court Building with Associate Justice Harlan F. Stone on Friday to inspect the lighting of the building and advise how best to ease the strain on the Justices' eyesight.

The Wilmer Opthalmological Institute in Baltimore stands as a fitting monument to Dr. Wilmer's brilliant career, for not only has it furnished American doctors and medical students with facilities and opportunities to further opthalmological research in which Dr. Wilmer was a pioneer, but the institute was erected and endowed largely through the efforts and financial aid of grateful patients whose eyesight the modest doctor had saved.

It was in 1922 that a group of friends and former patients led by Mrs. Henry Breckenridge, of New York, who had been relieved of partial blindness by the doctor's skill, formed the William Holland Wilmer Foundation. In co-operation with the Rockefeller Foundation and the Commonwealth Fund, nearly $4,000,000 was raised for the erection and endowment of the Wilmer Institute. Among the contributions was found one, sent all the way from the Pacific Coast by a man who, although an unemployed shoemaker, had been treated by Dr.

Sectional Tax Fight Begun By Two Blocs

Mine Firm Exemptions, Lower Beef, Mutton Levies Sought.

Treasury Drops Active Hostility to 'Cushion' Plan in House.

By Robert C. Albright.

Sectional sharpshooting at the Administration's tax program yesterday opened with a raking fire at a number of special items in the Treasury's revenue list, as the Ways and Means tax sub-committee struggled to reach an agreement on the broad outlines of the program.

Two strong Western blocs of House Democratic members met and formally organized to combat tax proposals they charge will seriously injure constituent interests.

They were:

Representatives from the Rocky Mountain States, which appointed Representative J. W. Robinson (Democrat), Utah, to make formal protests to the sub-committee against proposed processing taxes on beef and mutton.

Members from the Western mining States, which named Representative James G. Scrugham (Democrat), Nevada, to conduct sub-committee studies with a view of "cushioning" from taxation undistributed earnings of mining concerns.

Expected to Spread.

It was the beginning of a movement that is expected to spread to other sectional interests as the new tax program begins to take form. Members from brewery States already are eying with trepidation proposals to hike the tax on beer, while tobacco members are prepared to do battle if any movement develops to increase tobacco excises.

The Ways and Means tax subcommittee, charged with formulating the new revenue program, meanwhile was having its troubles. Having informally agreed on the general nature of the new corporation earnings tax, the group passed yesterday afternoon trying to plug possible revenue "leaks" in the proposal—with special attention to methods of reaching dividends paid to foreign stockholders in American concerns. The sub-committee agreed that such dividends must be taxed at the source, but the problem was —how to tax them.

The secrecy "lid" on sub-committee discussions was lifted yesterday by Representative Samuel B. Hill, of Washington, sub-committee chairman, after Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee withdrew his objections to full publicity. The so-called "gag" was removed following a colorful "showdown" between members and reporters in a Capitol corridor.

Hill Doubts Figures.

Representative Hill told reporters that the sub-committee is not entirely "wedded" to the $620,000,000 revenue figure which the Administration estimated the corporation earnings tax would yield.

Hill had been questioned on whether the proposed tax "cushion" on reasonable corporate reserves, and proposed exemption of banks and insurance companies from the tax (both of which propositions are favored by a majority of the sub-committee), would reduce the President's $620,000,000 revenue estimate.

"We certainly do not want to lose too much," Hill added. "Whatever money we don't get from the earnings tax we will have to get from other sources. We have never been limited to the three-point proposal (corporation, processing and 'windfall' taxes proposed in the President's message). We have the entire field before us. I don't know whether it is probable that additional sources will be brought in or not."

Discussed Tables.

The sub-committee passed much of the morning discussing the Treasury's so-called "cushion" tables, to arrange brackets and rates in the lower percentages of income which would enable the corporations to build up necessary

Locarno Pact Signers Indict Germany; Hitler Refuses to Recall Rhine Army, Threatens to Withdraw Peace Offers

Nazis Call Upon Europe to Accept Overtures or 'Lose Chance.'

Objection to Alliance of Paris and Moscow Is Explained.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Berlin, March 12.—Germany today challenged Europe to accept Chancellor Adolf Hitler's overtures for peace and new treaties "or see them withdrawn."

At the same time she made new offers in the face of adamant French and Belgian demands for withdrawal of troops in the Rhineland.

"In case Germany's proposals are not accepted the government will withdraw them. It will accept isolation rather than rejection," an official declaration said.

Asserting present military occupation of the Rhine zone to be symbolic only, the government offered to refrain from sending additional troops toward France's eastern frontier pending negotiations for settlement of the European crisis.

But Germany demanded that France and Belgium also refrain from sending additional troops to their frontiers.

Won't Yield Rights.

"The German government," the declaration said, "never will agree to permanent conditions involving renunciation of any sovereign rights."

France's military alliances with Soviet Russia and other powers make Germany's present course necessary for her own protection, the declaration said. Regarding the Franco-Soviet pact it added

"It is of a peculiar character in view of the generally admitted fact that the philosophic system now in force in Soviet Russia, not only theoretically but also practically, is aimed at world revolution, thus championing a deliberately imperial and aggressive principle."

Passing from ire over the Franco-Soviet pact, the declaration said:

"For the protection of her independence, which she claims is menaced, France has:

"1. The largest system of fortifications which ever existed along the German frontier.

"2. Legal guarantors for her protection, including Great Britain with its entire forces of the land, air and sea; Italy, Belgium, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Russia. Russia alone has over 17,000,000 soldiers. Then there is France herself.

"These states between them have a peace strength of over 3,000,000 men and a war strength of approximately 30,000,000. In the face of these enormous and historically unique guarantees, France claims, in addition, an area in Germany, which, being demilitarized, is open to attack.

Scoff at "Menace."

"France further declares that after Germany, instigated by France's recent actions, declared the Locarno pact thereby violated, and again began exercising its sovereign rights within the realm of the Reich, the 19 battalions now moved into the Rhineland constitute a menace to the French security which is guaranteed by half the world."

The declaration was designed to explain the Government's viewpoint in the face of foreign press comment and statements by foreign diplomats in connection with the remilitarization of the Rhineland. It said:

"Before the conclusion of the Locarno Treaty France concluded the following military alliances to become effective in case Germany attacked France: With Belgium, with Czechoslovakia and with Poland.

"Since these alliances, according to the French and other governments, had a purely defensive character and Germany had no aggressive intentions, they were not considered contrary to Locarno and where accepted by Germany without challenge.

"Since conclusion of the Locarno Treaty France has concentrated enormous quantities of troops on her frontier. Moreover, France has constructed along the frontier the mightiest system of fortifications known in history.

"France now has concluded a further military alliance with the Soviet Union. The functioning of this alliance no longer depends upon decision by the League of Nations, but upon decisions made by the two powers regarding their own affairs."

New England Flood Toll Now 5 In Worst Disaster Since 1927

By the United Press.

Boston, March 12.—New England's death toll from raging waters and avalanches mounted to five tonight, in the most serious flood since the $100,000,000 disaster of 1927, when 125 persons perished.

The dead are:

Henry Roy, 31, drowned in Piscataquog River, Goffstown, N. H.; Eugene Hill, 65, killed in an avalanche at Glen, N. H.; Seraphino Nardi, 8, Brockton, drowned when a raft overturned; Ezra Ober, 50, killed in an avalanche at North Jay, N. H.; Stephen Hart, 32, drowned at Groton, Vt.

More than a score were injured as ice-choked rivers and tributaries, fed by rapidly melting mountain snows and torrential rains, overflowed their banks.

Spectacular Rescues.

Authorities said spectacular rescues kept the death toll from mounting higher.

Twenty passengers on the Alouette, Montreal-Boston day train of the Canadian Pacific and Boston & Maine railroads, were marooned in a flooded area 2 miles from Plymouth, N. H. None of the passengers was reported in immediate danger.

Earlier in the day, a four-car passenger train of the New Haven Railroad was derailed by a washout 1 mile west of Great Barrington. A dozen passengers were badly shaken up, but none was seriously hurt.

The nearby Connecticut River was 12 feet above normal. Authorities said the situation was growing more serious hourly.

Wilder Dam Pounded.

Wilder Dam, at Wilder, Vt., some 2 miles from Hanover, was being pounded by ice floes. It was feared the dam would give way momentarily. The dam is but 2 miles from White River Junction, Vt., which bore the brunt of the disastrous 1927 floods.

At Woonsocket, R. I., the Blackstone River rose to within 6 inches of an all-time peak. Adjacent lowlands were flooded, causing heavy damage and endangering the lives of scores of residents.

Hundreds of marooned residents were rescued there by police in lifeboats.

Mills were seriously damaged by rising waters, forcing them to close.

PWA workers at nearby Blackstone, Mass., feverishly piled up sandbags in an effort to dike the river. The town square there was beneath several feet of water, and

French Senate Approves Pact For Soviet's Aid

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 12.—France struck back at German remilitarization of the Rhineland tonight with overwhelming Senate ratification of the mutual defensive treaty with Soviet Russia.

This pact demands, should Germany and France go to war, that Russia's army of more than 1,000,000 also shall march against the Reich.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler based his denunciation of the Locarno Treaty upon the Franco-Soviet Pact, then already ratified by the Chamber of Deputies, claiming that by it France violated terms of the Locarno agreement.

The Senate, aroused by talk of war amid the Locarno crisis, sped the ratification through by a vote of 226 to 48. Debate wa cut short.

The government made approval of the treaty a question of confidence. Promulgation of the pact tomorrow will make it effective technically, although the government had asserted it already was actually in force.

Votes Ship Funds.

The Chamber of Deputies meanwhile voted construction of three torpedo boats and one tanker as the nation girded its defenses.

Along with Soviet Russia, France counts upon other important allies in case of war with Germany. She has alliances with Poland and the Little Entente (Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia) and hopes to win over Italy by leading a campaign for the lifting of sanctions.

France estimates she and her allies have a potential army of 40,000,000 men—including reserves, of course—and that 8,000,000 could be put into the field within 48 hours.

Appealing to the Senate for ratification of the Soviet Pact, Henry Berenger, chairman of the foreign affairs committee, said "after Germany has torn up the Locarno Treaty, the French Senate cannot give the impression of giving way before the pressure of a foreign power."

"I would like to have it shown that this group is behind the government of France, now and at all times, when it is a question of defending its right to security and peace."

The pact does not mention any European power, but parliamentary debate left no doubt that the German "menace" alone was in mind.

Ratification came slowly, following the signing of the treaty here last May 5. There had been disagreement of the military value of the Soviet's 1,300,000-man army, but, now, with Franco-German tension heightened, such objections were largely forgotten.

60,000 Cheer Hitler Defiance On Rhine Move

Election Speech Reasserts Peace Policy Toward Neighbor Nations.

By the Associated Press.

Karlsruhe, Germany, March 12.—Adolf Hitler, wildly cheered by an election meeting of 60,000 persons, proclaimed tonight that "nothing will move us to renounce" Nazi sovereignty in the Rhineland, but assured France, Czechoslovakia and Poland that armed German forces will not move against them.

In a campaign speech loaded with appeals for "common sense statesmanship," he criticized sharply what he called Soviet interference with the tranquillity of other nations.

The Reichsfuehrer reaffirmed his overtures for a new European peace pact, characterizing his offer last week as the "most magnaminous ever made anywhere."

His denunciation of Russia was based on a double criticism of Soviet policy, extending even to what he declared was an "international movement to prevent the nations from coming to the Olympics."

His plea for peace, historically founded on relationships between Poland and Germany, went back to his denunciation of the Locarno Treaty last week and his offer to negotiate for new affirmation of peace in Europe.

Hitler's colorful words were broken time after time by loud salvos of applause from his listeners. He interrupted his own words with a fit of racking coughs, after he had become hoarse over a declamation of German progress against unemployment.

He said that Germany had originally subscribed to the Locarno pact "for the sake of international understanding," even though the agreement "made it necessary for 14,700,000 Germans to remain unarmed."

"Germany, because it believed others had violated the treaty, renounced that treaty," the Reichsfuehrer declared in an explanation of events of the last few days. "It drew from this fact the only logical consequence—namely, the re-establishment of its sovereignty."

The Nazi leader told his audience he had "tried to apply the same principles that guided the Polish-German relations also to our relations with France."

"Perhaps this was the first time a German Nationalist has asserted that continuation of the hereditary Powers Charge Breach, Leave Penalties Up to the League.

Der Fuehrer Deaf To British Appeal

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

London, March 12.—France demanded "the whole Rhineland be absolutely evacuated" of German troops tonight after four former World War allies, meeting in one of the gravest conferences since 1914, indicted the Nazi government as a violator of the Locarno and Versailles treaties.

The unyielding French position was proclaimed in the face of Adolf Hitler's refusal of a British plea that he withdraw all but a few of the troops.

"France will not negotiate with Germany as long as the status quo ante is not restored," a French spokesman declared. He said now that Great Britain, Italy, Belgium and France had found Germany guilty of treaty violation, it is up to the League Council to discuss punishment and steps to be taken.

He voiced the demand even as Hitler thundered from a rostrum at Karlsruhe, in the remilitarized area: "I assure you nothing, absolutely nothing, will induce us to renounce this regained sovereignty over the Rhineland zone!"

Impasse Obtains.

The French spokesman indicated diplomatic ruptures of all League powers with Germany might be the first punishment meted out if Germany refuses to accept the verdict of Locarno powers and a forthcoming one by the League of Nations Council.

An impasse in the threatening situation was apparent.

France demands that all troops be withdrawn—Hitler has refused such a proposal and threatened to withdraw the substitute peace plans he advanced last Saturday in denouncing Locarno unless Germany's sovereignty, including the right to move troops, is respected.

An authoritative British source called this threat "an absolute bombshell" making the "situation now desperately grave."

Because of the new German pronouncement, the British were reported swinging toward the French attitude and away from their middle-of-the-road conciliatory policy.

The remaining Locarno Treaty members—Britain, France, Belgium and Italy—voted that the moving of troops into the demilitarized Rhineland "constituted a clear violation of articles 42 and 43 of the Versailles Treaty and the Locarno Pact."

Another session was called for tomorrow. The Council of the League of Nations will meet here Saturday to take up Franco-Belgian appeals against the violation, and many expected France might urge punishment of the Reich by sanctions.

The diplomats, after a day-long meeting at the foreign office in a room next to the one in which the Locarno pact was signed in 1925, issued a communique saying they found Germany guilty of breaching the treaties and:

"It will be for the Council of the League of Nations, to which France and Belgium have referred the matter, to pronounce on that point."

Preparations Pushed.

In a day of tense and swift-moving development France went forward with military preparations for "any eventuality" in the Rhineland.

Although Hitler responded to Great Britain's desperate appeal to him for a "spontaneous, conciliatory gesture," his commitments fell far short of the British goal and left the British position extremely difficult.

The British obviously were disappointed bitterly in Hitler's response to their plea, which they had hoped could be used to impress France and Belgium.

It was disclosed that Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, had appealed, through the German ambassador here, to Hitler for a conciliatory gesture.

Britain suggested Germany withdraw all but a "symbolic" number of troops and promise not to fortify the zone until a treaty had been negotiated and the international situation "regularized."

Although Eden told the German Ambassador it would be difficult to exaggerate how gravely Britain views the situation, Hitler answered that Germany could not enter into

Many Traffic Tickets 'Fixed,' Crawford Charges at Hearing

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Renewed attacks on reputed immunity and special privilege abuses threw the House traffic sub-committee into a furor yesterday, when it was charged that ticket "fixing" by members of Congress, Governme..t officials and so-called influential citizens is a common practice in Washington.

Punctuated with stormy debate, the accusations came from Col. L. C. Crawford, of the Board of Trade traffic committee. He described ticket "fixing" as a "serious evil which should be punishable by fines."

"There should be a penalty for any attempts to use influence toward having traffic charges annulled, amended or dropped," declared Col. Crawford.

His charges, apparently a surprise to the traffic sub-committee, followed testimony recommending certain plans to improve local traffic conditions. Subsequent debate on ticket "fixing" activities began when he condemned efforts by "persons of influence" to quash charges.

"Will you name those persons whom you believe are responsible for this so-called 'fixing?'" interjected Representative Carpenter (Democrat), Kansas, chairman of the sub-committee.

"Certainly," responded Col. Crawford. "Members of Congress, officials of the Federal and District Governments, and influential citizens of Washington."

"Would you say this 'fixing' was an evil here?" asked Carpenter.

"A serious evil. It is common knowledge that such activities exist. There should be something done about it," was the reply.

Col. Crawford then cited figures purporting to show that 12 per cent of all tickets issued last year were either reduced to "warnings" or "fixed." This information, he said, came from "an authoritative source."

"What I mean by 'fixing,'" said Crawford, "is attempts to bring pressure to bear to have charges canceled, annulled or dropped entirely. When a policeman issues a ticket, he is promptly subjected to this pressure from influential persons. He is pestered and annoyed by telephone calls, personal visits, and all sorts of efforts to have the charges dropped."

City Funds Short; Man Found Dead

Detroit, March 12 (AP).—Mayor Frank Couzens and police officials found the body of Harry M. Tyler, chief accountant and assistant budget director of the city comptroller's office, in the basement of his home tonight, a few hours after Mayor Couzens took over the direction of an investigation of an apparent $349,000 shortage in one of the city's trust accounts. Tyler was dead of a bullet wound in the right temple.

Tyler had been missing from his office since mid-afternoon. His attorney, called by investigators tonight, had said he felt certain Tyler would be in his office tomorrow morning.

$50,000 Alienation Suit Filed Against Former U. S. Worker

A $50,000 suit for alienation of affections was filed yesterday in the Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., against Erskine Ralph Miller, of 710 Silver Spring avenue, Silver Spring, Md., until recently chief accountant of the Bureau of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture.

The suit was filed by Bird Dolby, attorney, on behalf of Walter Daniels, of Mount Rainier, Md., an accountant in the office of Comptroller General McCarl, who accused Miller of alienating the affections of his wife, Mrs. Nellie Taylor Daniels, who for years was employed as Miller's secretary.

Daniels charged that Miller sent his wife and two children, Walter, jr., 4, and Delpha, 2, to Reno, Nev., for a divorce.

Recently Miller swore out a peace warrant against Daniels, whom he accused of threatening him over the telephone. A week ago Daniels was arrested and brought before Judge Hal C. Smith, in the Montgomery County Police Court, in Rockville. When Miller refused to answer a question as to whether or not he had been going out with Daniels' wife, Judge Smith dismissed the case.

Miller has two daughters by a previous marriage. His first wife and a son were killed in a automobile accident.

Increased Fund Asked to Push Lobby Inquiry

Senate Group Expecting Tangles; Wire Seizure Fought by Hearst.

Faced by the prospect of an avalanche of legal difficulties, the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, answered its critics yesterday by asking that its appropriation be increased from $50,000 to $75,000. The request was referred to the Committee on Audit and Control.

The latest legal skirmish was brought about by a suit instituted by William Randolph Hearst to enjoin the Western Union Telegraph Co. from turning over to the committee a telegram sent by Hearst to one of his editorial writers in Washington.

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of the District Supreme Court, who Wednesday held that the committee had no right to issue a "blanket" or "drag-net" subpena for all telegrams sent by an individual or firm, refused to grant Hearst a temporary restraining order. Attorneys for the publisher are expected to move today for a temporary injunction on which a hearing will be held next week.

Meanwhile, the committee took no action pending a study of its legal situation. There were indications, however, that it would ignore orders of the court and stick to its theory that the courts have no jurisdiction over the procedure of a Senate committee. While several Senators were prepared, discussion of the situation on the floor was prevented by the pressure of other business.

Telegram Not Delivered.

Hearst charged in his suit that the committee had issued a subpena on February 8 for a single telegram sent by the publisher from Chicago to James T. Williams, jr., in Washington. The telegram has not yet been delivered to the committee.

The publisher raised the question not only of violation of the fourth amendment to the Constitution prohibiting unreasonable search and seizure but also of violation of the first amendment guaranteeing freedom of the press.

In addition, he brought into the case alleged activities of the Federal Communications Commission in obtaining messages for the Black committee. Both the telegraph company and T. B. Kingsbury, its Washington manager, were named as defendants.

Hearst charged:

"When the said defendant Kingsbury questioned the alleged authority of this subpena, the Black committee went to the Federal Communications Commission, which shortly thereafter sent its agents into the offices of the company, where said agents copied thousands of telegrams, which, after copying, they turned over to the Black committee; and that many of the telegrams which they examined and of which they made copies were of a private and personal or privileged nature and had no connection whatsoever with the subject matter of the investigation authorized by said Senate resolutions."

He alleged that the telegram in question had no reference to lobbying but that it directed Williams to prepare a series of editorials "on matters of vast public importance."

Hearst held "that no agency of the Government has the power to go on a fishing expedition into matters concerning the conduct of the press, to obtain messages exchanged between publishers and their employes, and to turn such messages over to other agencies for whatever use other agencies may desire to make of them."

In an affidavit accompanying the petition, Elisha Hanson, attorney for Hearst, charged:

"Over the course of many days the agents of the Federal Communications Commission devoted their attention to copying telegrams received in the offices of the Western Union, in Washington, or sent from the offices of the Western Union in Washington, all of these telegrams being of private character, not the property of the company, but of the senders thereof; and that when these agents had finished their work, having copied in excess of 10,000 telegrams, to-wit, in excess of 13,000 telegrams, they turned over to the Black committee such copies and/or memoranda concerning such telegrams as they had made."

Press Freedom at Stake.

In a public statement Hanson said the issue was whether the Government had a lawful right to seize messages sent by a publisher to an editorial writer pertaining to the editorial policies of the publisher.

"If Government agencies are permitted to have access to the communications which pass between publishers and their editors, between newspapers and their correspondents, the freedom of the press, as it has been known in America and as it has been upheld by the highest court, will be destroyed," Hanson said.

He added that his motion for a hearing on the injunction petition will give not only the telegraph company, but the Black committee and the Communications Commission an opportunity to be heard.

Rights Held Violated.

New York, March 12 (AP).—The American Newspaper Publishers Association tonight denounced as a violation of constitutionally guaranteed freedom of the press the reported seizure by the Black committee of a telegram from William Randolph Hearst to one of his editors.

The association advised any other editor, should he learn of similar action, to consult counsel immediately and "take vigorous steps to protect his constitutional rights."

Strawn Lauds Ruling.

Chicago, March 12 (AP).—Silas H. Strawn, Chicago attorney, said today the injunction granted by the District of Columbia Supreme Court to restrain the Black Senate committee from the wholesale seizure of private telegrams in Washington was in defense of the Constitution and the rights of all citizens.

The court yesterday restrained the Western Union Telegraph Co. from turning over to the committee all telegrams sent and received by the law firm of Winston, Strawn & Shaw during a ten-month period last year.

"We felt it our duty to commence the suit * * * because the most confidential relationship is that obtaining between attorney and client. We objected to having the private correspondence between our clients and ourselves made the subject of a fishing expedition into our private affairs."

New Deal Makes Last Stand Against National Economic Problems.

By Franklyn Waltman

DEFENDING in the Supreme Court the constitutionality of the Guffey coal conservation act, the New Deal yesterday made what in reality was its last stand under the provisions of the present Constitution for authority to regulate broad national economic problems.

Should the high tribunal declare the act unconstitutional, the New Deal would be stripped of all justification for any further efforts directly to correct evils, such as destructive competition, existing in major industries.

In the NRA-Schechter decision the Federal Government was emphatically denied authority to regulate hours, wages and trade practices in a multitude of industries and enterprises engaged chiefly in intrastate transactions. But due to the fact that the Schechter decision was based on efforts of the Government under NRA to regulate the wholesale poultry business, a doubt remained whether the authority of the Federal Government would be so completely denied when it came to a major industry serving the entire Nation with an essential commodity, such as coal.

It is true that in the Schechter decision the Supreme Court reiterated rather pointedly its previous finding in the Industrial Association decision that "building is as essentially local as mining, manufacturing or growing crops," but at the time some authorities contended that this was obiter dictum and was not to be taken too seriously.

In the Hoosac Mills case, killing the AAA, the court specifically found agriculture to be a local activity and subject only to the power of the States. It now remains for the court to reveal whether mining bituminous coal is a purely local activity—and whether the wages paid, hours worked and prices charged in that industry might so directly affect the flow of interstate commerce as to make the Guffey act valid.

When the act was pending before Congress President Roosevelt confessed his doubt as to the constitutionality of the legislation in his now famed letter to Representative Samuel B. Hill urging the Ways and Means Committee not to worry about that phase of the subject. Indeed, the President invited a Supreme Court test of the act, which he held "would be helpful as indicating with increasing clarity, the constitutional limits within which this Government must operate."

* * *

Assailants of the Guffey act relied chiefly in their arguments before the Supreme Court on the Schechter decision, in effect insisting that the coal act was but a little NRA applied to the coal industry and as violative of the Constitution as the original NRA act.

Assistant Attorney General John Dickinson, in his first appearance before the Supreme Court as the Government's representative, however, undertook to distinguish between the situation of the bituminous coal industry and that of marketing poultry. Incidentally, in doing so he was forced to throw overboard most of the contentions made by the Government in the ill-fated Schechter case.

For instance, Mr. Dickinson, in his plausible and well-spun argument, repeatedly contended for the Federal Government's authority over "commodities like bituminous coal"—not any commodity—entering interstate commerce. He said that Federal regulation over such commodities as shoes, boots, toys, candy and the like in interstate commerce would be "unthinkable"—which indicates the distance the New Deal has backed away from its philosophy of a year ago.

Mr. Dickinson in his effort to distinguish the pending case from the Schechter case contended to the court—as several of the justices tried to hide smiles—that arguments in the Schechter case regarding the effect of wages and hours in the poultry business on the flow of poultry in interstate commerce were "hypothetical" and "speculative and tenuous."

* * *

Failure of the Supreme Court justices to subject Government counsel to sharp questioning caused surprise. Only twice was Mr. Dickinson interrupted in his argument of more than two hours. In every other New Deal case that has come before the court Government counsel has been subjected to a barrage of questions from the bench. This might be an omen of something or it may be that the court was charmed into silence by Mr. Dickinson's resonant voice.

Several regular observers of the court's sessions agreed that the new Assistant Attorney General had made one of the best presentations given in any New Deal case to come before the high tribunal. But it must be remembered that the Supreme Court decides cases under the law and does not sit as judges in debating contests.

* * *

In concluding, Mr. Dickinson impressed on the court that "much may turn on the court's decision and its opinion in this case." He contended that these would be "far more momentous" than they may seem on their face and suggested that if the Federal Government were deprived of regulatory power to bring order out of chaos in the coal industry, it might have to resort to a more clearly defined power—the military power.

A decision upholding the coal conservation act might chart a course which the Federal Government could follow in solving some of the country's economic problems, without tramping on the right of the States or otherwise doing violence to the dual system of the American Government. It might give the New Deal a new breath of life without resorting to seeking to change the Constitution.

An adverse decision, it seems to many observers, would force the New Deal either to abandon its efforts to solve national economic problems through Federal regulation or to fight for constitutional changes which would give it specifically the power denied to it by the court. In either case, the decision will be momentous, vitally affecting not only the bituminous coal industry, but the future economic course of this country.

Senate Group Adopts Record War Fund Bill

By the Associated Press.

Boosting War Department appropriations to a $603,230,604 peacetime record, the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday approved an annual supply bill which would increase the enlisted strength of the Army to 165,000 men.

This action was taken after Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, told the committee that number was "absolutely essential if our system of national defense is to attain a measurable degree of success." The House had appropriated for a strength of only 147,000.

The total approved for the War Department was $58,004,286 more than provided by the House. The bulk of the increase, however, would go for new rivers and harbors projects.

The Senate Committee reported the appropriations bill after rejecting 12 to 11, an amendment setting aside $29,000,000 to continue five long-time projects started with WPA funds, including the Florida Ship Canal and the Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing project off the Maine Coast.

The committee upheld a 6-to-5 sub-committee vote refusing the money after Republicans protested the projects had not been specifically authorized by Congress.

Fletcher Threatens Fight.

Senator Fletcher (Democrat), of Florida, author of the amendment, said the Republicans voted against it in an effort to "discredit the Administration." He added he would fight on the Senate floor for $20,000,000 to carry on all the projects except Passamaquoddy.

Of the $38,004,286 increase over the House total, $90,000,000 would go toward new rivers and harbors projects already authorized by Congress. The House had approved $168,359,985 for this purpose and for flood-control projects.

The remainder of the increase would go toward pay and subsistence of new Army enlistments.

In a letter to the House Military Committee today, Gen. John J. Pershing told Congress that Army service must be made "more attractive" by offering additional inducements.

He gave "hearty indorsement" to the Thomason act, which would provide a year's annual active duty for 1,000 R. O. T. C. Reserve officers and selection of 50 of these officers for permanent active duty.

The war-time leader suggested some modification of the present methods of choosing appointees to the Military Academy "might well be considered with a view of making the most promising of these young men available for selection."

Defense Fund Cut.

The Senate committee slashed appropriations for seacoast defenses from $8,518,994 to $1,793,994 to bring this item in line with budget estimates. Of the latter amount $915,591 will go for continental coast defenses, $379,511 for insular, and $498,892 for Panama Canal.

The House had provided $3,150,973 for exclusive use in improving Pacific Coast harbor defenses, $3,141,780 for Hawaiian defenses and $1,223,892 for the Canal. The Pacific Coast and Hawaii were not specifically mentioned in the Senate change.

The committee left unchanged the House approved funds and authorizations for purchase of 565 new airplanes, and to increase the National Guard by 5,000 officers and men.

The bill, as reported, exceeded 1936-37 budget estimates by $30,531,299 and the current appropriation for the War Department by $180,334,134.

Approximately $390,000,000 of the toal would go for purely military activities and $213,000,000 for civilian work.

Opposition to any increase of armaments and armed forces was expressed to President Roosevelt yesterday by delegations of women representing the Committee for the People's Mandate to Government.

Mary Emma Woolley, president of Mount Holyoke College, the chairman of the committee, presented an appeal to the President. Miss Woolley said Mr. Roosevelt's talk to the delegation was "entirely off the record."

To Visit Canal Zone.

By the United Press.

Assistant Secretary of War Harry Woodring plans to sail from New York tomorrow night on the transport Republic for an inspection tour of the Panama Canal Zone, it was learned last night.

War Department officials said the Assistant Secretary's trip had no special significance. They explained that he had never been in Panama and wanted to familiarize himself with the Army's establishment there.

Liability of Unions For Pickets Urged

By the Associated Press.

Making labor unions responsible for damages entailed by picketing was advocated tonight by James A. Emery, general counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Emery contended in a radio speech that "whoever acts through another is liable for his acts within the scope of his employment," and that there is responsibility for an injury inflicted by negligence of an agent. Then he added:

"Not so a labor combination. It may inflict damage on one or many through its agents in furtherance of a labor dispute. But Congress has provided that a labor organization or its members shall not be liable for acts of agents of which it will be the beneficiaries, however great the damage done, unless it can be proved that the organization or the members specifically authorized the particular things done, or else, knowing what their agent did, ratified his conduct thereafter."

Foreclosures by U. S. Drop 29.3 Per Cent

The Home Loan Bank board reported yesterday that January real estate foreclosures were 29.3 per cent less than in January, 1935.

Based on reports from 894 communities, the report listed 12,340 foreclosures, the smallest number in any month since January, 1932, and a decline of 5 per cent from December.

"January thus emphasizes the steady drop in foreclosures which became pronounced in the last quarter of 1935," the board said.

Knox Stresses Responsibility Of Presidency

Illinoisan Says Race Lies Between Self, Landon; Foresees Harmony.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., March 12 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Chicago newspaper publisher, said here today that if he is given the Republican Presidential nomination "I shall have no feeling of gratification but one of overwhelming responsibility."

"At the present time," he said, "the contest lies between Gov. Landon of Kansas and me.

"We are much alike in viewpoint upon issues and agreed that no factional quarrels shall shake party harmony this year. We shall endeavor to keep it together and support whoever receives the nomination."

He prophesied "a good chance" for Republican success in Florida, North Carolina, Maryland, West Virginia and Tennessee; "a fighting chance" in Texas and victory in Arizona and New Mexico.

The Chicago publisher said three issues probably will dominate the Presidential campaign:

32 State Organizations.

Col. Knox said 32 States have definite organizations promoting him for the Presidency.

Col. Knox will devote the next four weeks to speaking in Illinois.

"Senator Borah has filed there and our first concern is to win the Illinois primary April 14."

Returning to his estimate of Republican chances in the South he said:

"A great many Democrats do not regard the New Deal as traditional Democratic policy. Democratic ranks are becoming alarmed by spending and piling up of the national debt. Moreover the old psychology of the people 'being against something' favors the Republicans. The sentiment of the people is crystallizing against the New Deal."

Topeka, Kans., March 12 (AP).—Gov. Alf M. Landon, his secretary said today, has left for an undisclosed destination where he will rest for "a week or ten days."

Smith Wins Skirmish.

New York, March 12 (AP).—Alfred E. Smith gained a preliminary victory today in his fight to carry his opposition to the Roosevelt New Deal to the Philadelphia convention as a delegate.

The board of elections, after a brief hearing, threw out the petition designating Joseph T. O'Neill, Staten Island insurance salesman, as a candidate from the Eleventh Congressional District. Smith was on the Tammany slate of delegates from this district.

The board of elections held the O'Neill petition was 300 valid signatures short of the 750 required by law.

Counsel for O'Neill said he would appeal to the courts.

Inquiry Fund Voted.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate yesterday voted $30,000 for an investigation of Senatorial and Presidential campaign expenditures.

Request for the fund was contained in a resolution by Senator Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, the majority leader, who first had asked $100,000 for the committee. Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, chairman of the Audit and Control Committee, said the $30,000 was the usual sum.

An attempt by anti-New Deal Democrats to adopt a party platform so critical of Administration policies that President Roosevelt would be forced to repudiate his policies or decline renomination was forecast yesterday by Senator Lewis (Democrat), Illinois.

Recalls Conference.

Lewis said this was the objective of such New Deal critics as former Gov. Ely of Massachusetts, former Senator Reed, of Missouri, and former Gov. Smith of New York.

Much speculation was aroused in political circles by a recent conference by these three former Democratic officials.

Senator Lewis warned party leaders many candidates for convention delegates would be "shrewd enough to stand for election as Roosevelt delegates," but if chosen would vote for a platform repudiating the New Deal, hoping in this way to defeat the President indirectly.

30-Hr. Week Law Is Urged in House

By the Associated Press.

A House Labor sub-committee yesterday urged enactment of a 30-hour week law pending a Labor Department survey of the extent to which labor-saving machinery has caused unemployment.

Approving a resolution offered by Representative Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, authorizing a survey to find out how many labor-saving devices have been put into use since 1912, the sub-committee wrote Chairman Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, of the Labor Committee:

"The question of technological unemployment is still controversial. Your sub-committee is of the opinion that the use of constantly improved mechanical and other labor-saving devices is the main cause of the ever-increasing army of unemployed and prematurely superannuated derelicts among laborers."

Uncle Sam Takes Step To Cut His Phone Bills

By the Associated Press.

Uncle Sam is planning to cut 10 per cent off his long-distance telephone bill.

A new policy outlined yesterday by the National Emergency Council instructed use of station-to-station calls as far as possible instead of the more expensive person-to-person system formerly in general use.

The recommendations, made following a survey by Lyle T. Alverson, acting NEC director, were submitted to President Roosevelt and then outlined to Administration heads.

Governor Bars New Reprieve To Hauptmann

Decision Announced as Zero Hour Passes for Second Stay.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., March 12.—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman marked the expiration of his legal right to reprieve Bruno Richard Hauptmann's death sentence by announcing he has no present intention of signing a new reprieve. Hauptmann is scheduled to die the week of March 30.

The Governor reiterated today he believed he had no legal power to grant Hauptmann a second reprieve after midnight tonight. However, through his press aid, William S. Conklin, he announced that should there be any "startling developments" which would warrant a stay of execution he would suggest to Attorney General David T. Wilentz and defense attorneys that they go with him to Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, of the Supreme Court, and ask for a stay.

But even while the announcement was being made, it was learned from an authoritative source the Governor has intensified his search for new evidence in the Lindbergh crime.

In the gloomy stillness of the death house of New Jersey State Prison, a little later, Hauptmann himself calmly expressed the opinion he would not go to the electric chair three weeks hence.

Talks to Spiritual Aid.

Hauptmann opened his mind to his chief counsel, C. Lloyd Fisher. He was glad to hear for the first time that Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, Lindbergh ransom intermediary, is on his way home from Panama and said he hoped Condon would be questioned, Fisher said.

Fisher spent three hours at the prison. During half that time he conferred with Hauptmann's spiritual adviser, the Rev. John Matthiesen, and a Trenton lawyer, Walter D. Cougle, former assistant Mercer County prosecutor.

The subject of their talk, which was carried on behind prison walls, was not disclosed. All denied it concerned the Hauptmann case, but reports took life that Cougle had been asked by Fisher to join the defense in a desperate last-minute attempt to save the Bronx carpenter from execution.

Jafsie Grilling Demanded.

Fisher said Hauptmann's manner was serene. The oppressive atmosphere of the death house and the proximity to the electric chair—his cell is only a dozen paces away—apparently have not affected him, Fisher said.

He told him nothing, though, of the constitutional clause which limits the Governor's reprieve powers to 90 days after conviction. In Hauptmann's case, the Governor said, the 90-day limit was reached today, counting the time from December 13, when a new execution date was fixed after court remedies had been exhausted.

The Governor repeated today he has never "indicated any change" from his statement of January 17, the day after his first reprieve, when he said he had no intention of again halting the execution.

"I have no intention at the present time," he said, "of granting another reprieve."

Fisher, after visiting Hauptmann, said he would write Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the State police, demanding he question Dr. Condon, who is due in New York Tuesday.

American Dictionary Completed by Craigie

Chicago, March 12 (AP).—Sir William Craigie, his monumental American dictionary at last started toward the printer, ended an 11-year stay at the University of Chicago today to take up another lexicographic labor.

He will sail for England after a brief vacation in the South, to give his attention to the editing of a historical dictionary of Middle Scottish. Sir William started work on the American dictionary in 1925 after completing the authoritative Oxford dictionary of the English language, of which he was named co-editor in 1901. That achievement won him knighthood from the late King George V.

The first section of the American dictionary will appear in two months. It is 125 pages in extent. At intervals 24 other sections of comparable size will follow.

Floods

cellars of stores and homes were inundated.

In Maine surging waters of the Penobscot River washed away five bridges in Hamden and Brewer, near Bangor.

Thirty marooned families were rescued by police and firemen on Bangor's East Side.

Washouts in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont forced suspension of railroad service on a number of branch lines.

Key highways in central and western Massachusetts were under several feet of water and washed out in some places.

At North Adams waters of the Hoosac River backed up against the retaining wall of the Union Street Dam. Families fled from lowlands as the river rose 18 feet above normal.

Northwest Snowstorm.

St. Paul, March 12 (AP).—A snowstorm, especially severe in northern Minnesota, today swept Northwest States, only a day after portions of the same area were threatened with floods.

Snow in northern Minnesota brought traffic tie-ups as serious as those experienced in midwinter, but checked most of the flood threats. Snow was general over Wisconsin and Minnesota, and covered parts of Iowa and northern Illinois.

Two boys were missing in the northern Minnesota storm area, and three persons were killed in an auto-train crash near Albert Lea, in southern Minnesota. Poor visibility was reported a contributing cause.

Hundreds of motorists were stranded, schools closed, and outside work halted in the northern Minnesota iron range area, where snow and wind continued today.

Seven-Week Baby Has Teeth

7-Week-Old Baby Has 4 Teeth; Can't Chew, Can't Eschew Milk

Little Frederick Stichweh, Something of a Curiosity in His Neighborhood, Refuses to Let Nosy Old Photographer 'Take' His Mouth.

One of these days Frederick Edwin Stichweh is going to push aside his bottle of condensed milk and whatever else it is they put in formulae for 7-week-old babies and holler for his rights, which, by the looks of things, should be beefsteak.

For what's the good of having teeth if all a fellow can eat is sickly white stuff that his elders try to pass off as his three squares a day?

And Frederick has teeth—four of them—all in his lower jaw.

All of which makes Frederick something like George Washington, except that the latter's teeth were false and could be taken out and placed in a museum for purposes of exhibition.

People are very curious about Frederick's teeth, too, and perform all manner of maneuvers to induce him to open his mouth. This very much annoys Frederick, who usually displays his displeasure by keeping his mouth shut.

Frederick is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Stichweh, 1420 Harvard street northwest. Yesterday he was supposed to have been photographed with his teeth, but, weary of being a sort of museum piece for the neighborhood, wouldn't hold still and refused to open his mouth, so the photographer took a picture of Mrs. Stchweh holding Frederick, who by that time, was beginning to make his protest audible.

Washington baby specialists were asked about Frederick's teeth last night. They said the average teething age is from five to eight months, but that frequently children are born with teeth, while many babies are without them until after their first birthday.

One of the city's leading specialists said early teething was a matter of heredity.

East Pennsylvania Menaced by Floods

Philadelphia, March 12 (U.P.).—Serious flood damage threatened eastern Pennsylvania tonight as rivers and creeks surged over their banks. Homes and factories were flooded and highways covered with several feet of water.

At Easton the gravest situation arose when the Lehigh River poured swirling torrents into the already swollen Delaware River. Water stood at the highest level since 1903 and there was little prospect of relief.

Extreme precautions were taken in the heavily populated areas near Philadelphia when both the Schuylkill and Delaware reached flood levels. An out-going tide temporarily relieved the situation here, but another crisis was expected early tomorrow morning with the high tide.

A 6-foot wall of ice and water, nearing Philadelphia in the Delaware, was expected to reach here in the morning at about the same time as the high tide.

Hundreds of acres of farmland were inundated throughout this part of the State. Almost 700 miles of improved roads were estimated to be under water, ranging in depth from several inches to 3 feet.

Law School Plans Summer Classes

The Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., regent of the Georgetown Law School, announced last night the decision to establish summer sessions of law at Georgetown, beginning this summer.

Action was taken at a meeting of the law faculty yesterday afternoon in answer to a large number of requests. There will be two terms of six and one-half weeks each. Classes for the first term will commence on June 10 and conclude July 24. Classes for the second term will begin July 27 and end September 9.

Recently the Georgetown Law School ruled that four years of college work or an A. B. degree would be necessary for admission to the September term of the school this year. The decision to hold summer sessions was taken in line with the policy of the school. All summer classes will be conducted by regular members of the law faculty, Father Lucey announced. Each course offered will be conducted by the same professor who has been in charge of it during the regular sessions of the school.

The annual convention of the United Synagogue of America, and the Women's League of the United Synagogue, will open today at the Willard Hotel.

A local committee of arrangements, consisting of members of the Adas Israel and B'nai Israel Congregations has been appointed. Among those on the committee are Morris Stein, general chairman; Mrs. George A. Levy, Mrs. Hilda Barr, Mrs. Falk Harmel, Mrs. Henry Oxenberg, Mrs. Leo Garner, Maxwell Ostrow, Albert W. Jacobson, Dr. Charles Basseches, Albert W. Kahn, Abe Coonin, David Stein and Nathan Volkman.

Special religious services for the visiting delegates will be conducted at 8 o'clock tonight at the Congregation Talmud Torah, B'nai Israel, Fourteenth and Emerson streets northwest. Rabbi Aaron Volkman will relinquish the pulpit to one of the visiting rabbis.

Bates Names Group To Seek Health Aid

Appointing himself chairman, Sanford Bates, president of the Council of Social Agencies, yesterday named a special committee to petition Congress for adequate health and public welfare appropriations. It includes Dr. William McClellan, Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, Maj. Campbell C. Johnson, Joseph D. Kaufman, H. L. Rust, jr., Mrs. William Kittle, Herbert L. Willett, jr., and John Saul.

The committee will seek to be heard by the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations when it opens hearings next week on the 1937 supply bill. It will urge restoration of health and welfare items eliminated by the House, which already has passed the bill, and support the Commissioners' supplemental request of $600,000 for relief purposes.

Willett, who is director of the Community Chest, called attention to the lack of funds in the Chest for meeting abnormal relief needs.

"While certain of our agencies," he said, "have been allotted relief funds for normal needs arising in connection with family and other cases, there is no provision made for taking care of the thousands of families that will be left without help when present District relief funds are exhausted."

Reynolds Estate Wrangle Settled By Court Order

North Carolina Ruling Approved; Libby Holman's Son Gets $7,000,000

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 12.—The long litigation over the Z. Smith Reynolds tobacco fortune was ended today as far as the rights of the heirs are concerned and two new names were added to the roster of the world's "rich children."

A final decree in the disposition of the approximately $28,000,000 estate of the deceased youngest son of the late R. J. Reynolds was handed down by Circuit Court Judge Eli Frank. The Baltimore jurist ratified a "family settlement" the courts of North Carolina had approved.

A Federal Government estate tax claim of $8,500,000 appeared likely, however, to further extend the three-year-old litigation and delay distribution of the fortunes bestowed upon the two young children of Smith Reynolds under the settlement.

Son Gets $7,000,000.

Three-year-old Christopher Smith Reynolds, born to Mrs. Libby Holman Reynolds, former Broadway "torch" singer, seven months after his father was fatally shot, was allowed approximately $7,000,000 under the settlement. His mother was given $750,000.

The boy's half-sister, Anne Cannon Reynolds, 2nd, two years older than he, was given approximately $10,000,000. She is the child of the former Anne Cannon, daughter of a North Carolina textile magnate. Trusts of $500,000 each already had been settled upon Reynolds' first wife and her daughter.

The remaining 37½ per cent of the estate, or approximately $10,000,000, was allotted under the Settlement of Smith Reynolds' brother, R. J. Reynolds and two sisters, Mrs. Charles Babcock and Mrs. Henry Walker Bagley, to create charitable trusts.

State Allowed $2,000,000.

In addition to the Government's tax claim, which must be settled before the money can be distributed to the heirs, Judge Frank allowed the state of North Carolina's claim of $2,000,000 against the estate for inheritance taxes.

The decree authorized the Safe Deposit and Trust Company, of Baltimore, trustee, to begin the division and distribution of the estate, but company officials were not prepared today to say whether this would be done immediately.

Three funds were involved, those created by trust under the will of the late R. J. Reynolds and the will and deed of trust by his wife, the late Mrs. Katherine Johnston, who remarried after her first husband died.

Capt. Nixon's Wife Is Mother of Twins

Washington heard for the first time yesterday that Anne Cooke Nixon, 22, third wife of Capt. Thomas Hay Nixon, U. S. A., is the mother of twin girls. Mrs. Nixon is in Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, where the twins were born February 17.

Mrs. Nixon is the sister of Mrs. Jane De Walden Cooke Scarlett, who eloped with George Scarlett, her father's chauffeur, and whose suit for annulment recently was dismissed in the District Supreme Court. Mrs. Nixon and Mrs. Scarlett are daughters of the socially prominent Mr. and Mrs. Howard De Walden Cooke, of Chevy Chase, Md.

Anne married Capt. Nixon four days after he obtained a Pennsylvania divorce from his second wife, Mrs. Annette Pauline Nixon, a former "Scandals" beauty. The second Mrs. Nixon has begun action to set aside the decree.

Son Informs Court Of Father's Wives

By the Associated Press.

Wong Shong Been, recently of China, asked the "Honorable Supreme Court" yesterday to look into the three marriages of his father, Wong Fook.

He informed the justices of "an untruth" told by his father back in 1916, when the father feared immigration officials might discover "he had two wives at the same time," had been used by officials to prevent him from entering this country.

Wong Shong Been wants the court to find that he is the "foreign-born blood son of a United States citizen" and so entitled to entry at Seattle, Wash.

3 Held in Plot To Take $1,000 From Merchant

One Admits Penning Note, Names 2 Others After Police Set Trap.

Three men were charged with attempted extortion yesterday when they were arrested for sending a threatening letter demanding $1,000 to James C. Davis, of 219 H street northwest.

The men arrested are Oscar Chapman Kirby, 28, of 111 Fifth street southeast; Erwin Engleberg Loeffler, 32, of 102 Thirteenth street northeast, and Hazel Vivian Swink, 23, of 220 E street northwest.

Davis, a commission merchant at Union Market, Fifth street and Florida avenue northeast, notified police when he received the letter demanding money.

One Admits Writing Letter.

Police said Loeffler admitted he composed the letter and said the other men did not know of the plot until after the letter was mailed.

The letter read:

"This letter is a warning to you. You are being watched every day, and if you don't pay off we will fix you. One thousand dollars is the payoff. Put ad in the Evening Star this week and we will get in touch with you. Advertise "fund, black ladies pocketbook. Davis phone."

Police stationed Detective Sergt. T. M. McVeary in a truck at Third and K streets northwest, the spot agreed upon. McVeary arrested Kirby when he appeared to get the package of money, that was only a blind.

After questioning at police headquarters Kirby revealed the identity of his two companions and they were arrested.

The letter was mailed March 4. Davis said he did not know the men.

To Be Arraigned Today.

The three will be arraigned in the District Attorney's office today on a charge of violating a postal regulation covering the act of sending threats through the mail.

Roosevelt Cancels Parley on Housing

By the Associated Press.

A conference to frame a Federal housing program, summoned by President Roosevelt for yesterday forenoon, later was postponed.

No explanation was advanced. Observers concluded more time was desired for conferences among the President's aids before the Chief Executive is consulted.

Those originally invited included representatives of the Treasury, Federal Reserve Board, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Housing Administration and Home Owners Loan Corporation.

So far, experts have been unable to agree on the form of a proposal by the President to provide direct Federal aid for slum clearance and some form of assistance to private industry for low-cost housing construction.

Strikers Spurn Owners' Plan In N.Y. Walkout

Service Men Refuse to Attend Parley; Mayor Is Delayed by Mishap.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 12.—A hoped-for peace before nightfall in New York's 12-day-old building service strike failed to materialize tonight when Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, flying here from Washington for another conciliation conference, was forced down by fog at Camden, N. J.

As a result, William D. Rawlins, representative of the landlords, announced his organization would send no one to City Hall for the scheduled conference.

James J. Bambrick, union leader, already had announced his group would not be represented because of landlord insistence that re-employment of strikers was a matter for arbitration.

"I wouldn't compromise that question on any basis," said Bambrick. "The proposal is un-American and contemptible."

Strike Spreads.

At the same time he announced the strike had spread to the Warwick, Gotham and Dover Hotels. Pickets, bearing placards, tramped back and forth before buildings all over the affected areas.

Rawlins, insisting upon retention of some replacement workers, did not make a flat demand that all be kept at their posts.

"We recognize that the union has an obligation in taking care of its members. The employers, too, have the problem of taking care of honest-to-goodness replacements who have been assured of permanent jobs," he said.

"We ought to work out some compromise plan whereby each would make some contribution or each bear some part of the burden."

He suggested that the landlords retain only employes who were hired at regular salary as operators, discharging men recruited at higher pay as strike replacements, and that the union limit itself "to union members in good standing who have paid their dues."

Held Out of Question.

He stipulated, however, that men guilty of sabotage or assault on replacements should not be considered for re-employment under any circumstances.

To which Bambrick replied:

"Every man must return to his former position. We cannot even discuss the question."

After an all-night conference last night, Ferdinand Silcox, chief of the Forestry Service of the United States Department of Agriculture, who has a long record as a labor conciliator, was agreed upon as an arbitrator. He cannot begin his duties, however, until the disputants agree upon a basis of arbitration.

The re-employment matter seemed the only point of difference barring the way to arbitration tonight. Both sides were agreed that Silcox could arbitrate the questions of increased pay, the 48-hour week, general working conditions and the closed shop.

The accident happened at the Alexandria end of Hunting Creek bridge. It is understood the personal damage to Mr. and Mrs. Steele has been settled out of court.

300 at Youth, Crime Parley Outline Attack on Delinquency

Six Objectives in Drive to Prevent Young People From Becoming Criminals Approved by Women Delegates at Round-Table Conference.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 12.—Six objectives in the effort to prevent young people from becoming criminals were approved today, at the conclusion of the New York Herald Tribune's round-table conference on crime and youth.

These points were unanimously approved by the meeting, which was attended by 300 women, representing 200 women's organizations:

Adoption of universal fingerprinting.

Urging women's organizations to give more attention to qualifications of candidates for public office, especially law-enforcement offices.

Work for Youth.

Urging organized women to ask that a considerable portion of public works appropriations be assigned to creating work for youth.

Urging that public schools be used as public meeting places for civic work.

Urging that women be appointed to supervise, direct and care for women prisoners and girl delinquents.

The meeting also expressed itself in favor of increased facilities in vocational schools, and proposed that a study be made of conditions in county jails.

Sanford Bates, director of the Bureau of Prisons of the Department of Justice, told the conference that constructive influences are necessary in dealing with juvenile crime.

At an earlier session of the conference a letter was read from the wife of the President, asserting that increased confidence in law enforcement and speeding of the machinery of justice were necessities for crime prevention.

Read to Conference.

Her message, read to the conference by Mrs. William Brown Meloney, chairman, said the ultimate solution to the problem "lies in the removal of the conditions which bring us so many young criminals.

"Basically these conditions are from inadequate economic security, which leads to bad housing, improper food, lack of medical care, inability to take advantage of educational opportunities and lack of recreational opportunities."

She said the best preventive of crime is not the severity of the sentence, but the growing realization that all criminals eventually will be apprehended.

"After this, if the wheels of justice can be speeded up so that the sentence follows quickly," she added, "so that no mere technicality can impede the carrying out of a just sentence, we will find, I think, a decline in crime as a whole, which will, of course, affect our young people greatly."

Police Affirm Suicide Verdict In Girl's Death

Police yesterday reopened the case of the suicide of 17-year-old Edna Trathen, who shot herself at a dinner party Monday night, long enough to take written statements from those attending the dinner. Inspector B. W. Thompson said after this action, however, he is satisfied with the coroner's verdict of suicide.

The action was taken, Inspector B. W. Thompson said, after several friends of the pretty brunette expressed doubt that she had intended to take her life. They thought it might have been an accident.

The statements were received from her host, Bernard Livingston, and his four guests, Eleanor Shearer and Anne Portell, who lived with Miss Trathen at 1418 W street northwest; Ernest Hammersla, a "traveling man," and Harry Lasoer, of the Chastleton Hotel.

Thompson also questioned John Hallett, 21 L street northeast, with whom the dead girl conversed over the telephone shortly before the shooting.

Hallett reiterated his contention that he had known Miss Trathen only casually and that she showed no signs of despondency or hysteria over the phone.

The shooting took place in the home of Livingston, a wholesale jeweler, at 3220 Walbridge place northwest. The girl used a .38 Colt revolver she took from a cabinet at the head of Livingston's bed.

Son Aids Father In Custody Suit

Chicago, March 12 (AP).—George Marshall Borg, 21, son of the head of the Borg-Warner Co., sided with his father today against his 19-year-old estranged wife in the senior Borg's legal fight for custody of his 15-months-old grandson.

Following his father to the witness stand in a habeas corpus action aimed at returning baby George Marshall Borg, jr., to the home of his millionaire grandparent, George W. Borg, the young husband said his wife, Juanita, often caressed the baby when visitors were around but made "no fuss over it" when no outsiders were present.

While his wife—who took the child from the elder Borg domicile last Wednesday—looked on, the youthful father agreed she had told him she did not want her father-in-law and his wife "running their home."

Allegany Welfare Unit Backs Casey Report

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., March 12.—The Allegany County Welfare Board has given its approval to the revised Casey committee report. It was announced that only 387 cases remain on the rolls as of March 6. A decline has been shown since the end of December.

Disbursements in February totaled $13,458.38, of which $5,440.66 was expended for aid to dependent children. About $3,500 is expected from the Federal Government for the children's fund.

There were 494 persons receiving old-age pensions on March 1, and $7,719.75 has been set aside for payments this month. A total of 913 have applied for pensions, with 104 rejected and 294 under consideration.

Hotels Are Protested At Shenandoah Park

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., March 12.—A delegation of members of the chambers o commerce from towns bordering on the Shenandoah National Park has held a conference with the Park Service in which they protested the building of too many hotels in the park until the surrounding territory had shown its inability to handle the crowds. Present plans call for the building of two hotels of approximately 1,000 rooms near Skyland.

Pro's Home Guarded; Wife Fears Kidnapers

Hollywood, Fla., March 12 (AP).—The home of Johnny Farrell, former open golf champion, was under guard today after Mrs. Farrell reported she detected prowlers about the place and feared kidnapers.

Farrell, professional at the Hollywood Country Club, was playing in a tournament at St. Augustine, leaving Mrs. Farrell and their three small children at their home on the club grounds.

Traffic Ticket 'Fixing'

has a friend who receives one, he picks up the telephone or sends his secretary to see the policeman, and have the ticket torn up?" asked Carpenter.

"It is a common practice," replied Col. Crawford.

Carpenter then called for specific cases and names.

"Do you know of any member of Congress who has 'fixed' a ticket?"

"No."

"Any Government official?"

"No."

"Any influential person?"

"No."

Such an Evil.

"If there is such an evil as ticket 'fixing' in Washington, it calls for a separate investigation. The powers of this committee are limited. We welcome such information, but we want specific instances—names and cases," said Carpenter.

"I can give you nothing from personal experience—just what is common knowledge, and what has been told to me by members of the Police Department and others," said Col. Crawford.

While he spoke, it was learned later, a man appeared at police headquarters, to have someone "take care of a ticket." He outlined the circumstances, explaining:

"I am a cousin of the Third Assistant Postmaster General."

Sergt. John Agnew, in charge of complaints and ticket adjustments, refused to "fix" the ticket.

Another opinion on Washington "fixing" problem came from Ringgold Hart, general counsel for the Merchants and Manufacturers Association. He was asked by Carpenter if such an evil existed.

"No Such Condition."

"There is no such condition in this city," said Hart. "I, myself, have done what many persons would term 'fixing'—but I don't look at it that way. I think it is wonderful that the corporation counsel's office has the opportunity to investigate cases, and judge according to facts. To send the offender away with a warning is not 'fixing' in my opinion."

Hart added that it would be a good thing to have regulations covering "dumbness" and "selfishness" on the part of motorists.

"We should be able to charge a violator with being a dumbbell as well as a traffic offender," he said.

To eliminate "fixing," it was suggested by Col. Crawford that every violator, except the overtime parker, be forced to accompany the policeman to a station house, instead of receiving a ticket."

During his testimony, Hart declared that Washington merchants, although dependent upon swift and adequate delivery service, advocate strict enforcement of the double parking rule against trucks.

"These trucks should be made to park at the curb when space is available," said Hart, adding, however, that deliveries include perishable goods, which must reach the merchant with all possible haste.

Rush-Hour Periods.

Thomas Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, testifying as a member of the Commissioners Traffic Committee, presented a series of recommendations. They included an increased number of policemen actually assigned to traffic duty, an increased appropriation for traffic lights, an increase in the "stagger-hour" system for Government workers, more playground facilities to keep children from the streets, and greater care in the issuance and revocation of driving permits.

Earlier in the hearing, William S. Canning, of the Keystone Automobile Club, opposed semiannual inspection of automobiles, on the ground it would "annoy and inconvenience" motorists.

"Mechanical defects in autos are responsible for only a small percentage of the accidents. What we need is more policemen versed in traffic matters," he said.

Yesterday's last witness was R. J. Murphy, manager of the Automotive Trade Association. He, in turn, strongly advocated semiannual inspections, to be conducted by city-owned garages.

$3,000 Given Anonymously For Orchestra

3 Clubs Also Contribute to $100,000 Campaign for Symphony.

An anonymous gift of $3,000 and new contributions from the Twentieth Century Club, the Arts Club and the Rubenstein Club were features of yesterday's National Symphony Orchestra campaign luncheon in the Hotel Carlton.

In addition to these subscriptions to the $100,000 sustaining fund, the symphony received $4,959.50 in new pledges from the metropolitan committee. The Navy committee reported a day's total of $109.60 and the Army committee $43.40.

High Schools Give $61.

Members of the high school faculties in the city gave $61 through the education committee, Mrs. Miriam Hilton, chairman, announced.

Pointing out the wide variety of sources from which the orchestra's sustaining fund is drawn, C. C. Cappell read extracts from several letters containing gifts. One from a local business firm read:

"We are naturally interested in worthwhile civic development, both material and cultural."

Another, from the Powell Junior High School Parent-Teacher Association, contained a voluntary offering; one was from the Cultus Club; another, with $2 inclosed, was from the Lucky Friday Boys Glee Club of Friendship House, an organization of boys who have been attending symphony concerts regularly.

Dimes Appreciated.

Dr. William McClellan, speaking for the board of directors, emphasized the importance of large numbers of gifts. "Although the orchestra appreciates large gifts," he said, "the multitude of small donations——even dimes and quarters—indicates clearly the esteem in which the National Symphony Orchestra and Hans Kindler, its conductor, are held by Washington citizens as a whole."

Jury Gets Case Today In 'Beef Tub' Murder

Manchester, England, March 12 (AP).—Formal evidence and appeals to the jury in the trial of Dr. Buck Ruxton for the murder of his wife and her nursemaid were concluded today with a description of the defendant by the crown as an "emotional and violent" man who turned his noble house into "an absolute shambles of blood."

Justice Singleton will charge the jury tomorrow and the case then goes to the jury. Ruxton is accused of dismembering the bodies of Mr. Ruxton and Mary Jane Rogerson, the maid, last fall and then hiding the pieces in a ravine known as "the devil's beef tub."

The glider was detached at the maximum altitude and descended independently. The flight was made March 9. The plane was piloted by Edgar Premen and the glider by P. Stephanoffsky.

Baltimore, March 12 (AP).—A leg broken above the knee, was worth $30,000 today to George Noppinger, automobile mechanic. He was awarded that sum by a jury in the Court of Common Pleas here in the court's largest verdict this year.

The jury decided against the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. Noppinger's attorneys asserted the mechanic would be unable to work as a result of the injury.

The broken leg was suffered, testimony disclosed, when Noppinger was pinned between two automobiles, jammed when a third machine drifted into them.

Senate Orders Ritter's Trial Set for April 6

Judge Given Until March 27 for Answer to Charges; Borah Protests.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate yestreday gravely ordered Halsted L. Ritter, Federal judge for the Southern District of Florida, to appear April 6 for trial on House impeachment charges.

Solemnly convened as a court, the Senate brought the slender jurist before it and gave him and his counsel until March 27 to file a response to charges of "misbehavior and high crimes and misdemeanors."

The response must be filed with the three members of the House who will act as the prosecution staff. On March 30 the Senate will again sit as a court and receive Ritter's reply.

Four Offenses Charged.

Ritter was charged by the House with four offenses:

That he accepted from A. L. Rankin, his former law partner, a payment of $4,500 after he had boosted from $15,000 to $75,000 the fee allowed Rankin in connection with receivership of the company operating the Whitehall Hotel property at West Palm Beach.

That he "wilfully failed and neglected to perform his duty to conserve the asests" of the Whitehall Building & Operating Co.

That he unlawfully engaged in private practice while a judge.

That his actions have "brought his court into scandal and disrepute."

Ritter denied the charges when they were considered by the House in voting impeachment.

Senator Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, excused himself from serving as a juror with the explanation that he and Ritter had long been personal and family friends, and had once served on the same side in a law case before Ritter moved from Denver to Florida, about 15 years ago.

Borah Objection Ruled Out.

An amended code of impeachment procedure was adopted over the protest of Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, that it would "be an obstacle to securing the real facts."

He objected particularly to a provision that no questions could be asked by Senators during the trial without first submitting them in writing to the presiding officer.

But Chairman Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, of the Senate Judiciary Committee, and Majority Leader Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, insisted that "without such a rule it would be very difficult to have orderly procedure."

The House prosecuting staff included Representatives Sumners (Democrat), Texas; Hobbs (Democrat), Alabama, and Perkins (Republican), New Jersey.

The jury agreed with him as to his uncle's claim. It deliberated five hours.

Job Insurance Tax Program Is Announced

By the Associated Press.

The long-awaited regulations governing payment of the unemployment insurance tax and defining the types of service excepted under the social security act were issued last night by Guy T. Helvering, commissioner of internal revenue.

The tax became effective January 1 and is payable January 31, 1937. Based on total wages payable, the rate of the tax is 1 per cent for the calendar year 1936, 2 per cent for 1937 and 3 per cent for 1938 and each year thereafter.

Nine States have set up unemployment insurance systems satisfactory to the social security board and employes in those States will be entitled to credit 90 per cent of what they pay into State funds against the total due the Federal Government.

Where no State insurance plan exists, the tax will be paid directly into the Federal Treasury, with no benefits for employes.

Every person who employs eight or more individuals on a total of 20 or more calendar days during a calendar year, each day being in a different calendar week, is, with certain exceptions, subject to the tax.

Professional Men Exempt.

Helvering said it was not necessary that the weeks be consecutive nor that the persons employed be the same. It is sufficient, he said, if the total number of individuals employed during the 24 hours of a calendar day is 8 or more, regardless of the period of service during that day or the basis of compensation.

Physicians, lawyers, dentists, veterinarians, contractors, sub-contractors, public stenographers, auctioneers and others who follow an independent trade, business or profession in which they offer their services to the public, were held to be independent contractors and not employers subject to the tax.

Under terms of the social security act, employers of agricultural labor, domestic servants and officers and members of a ship's crew are excepted from the tax. Also excepted are Federal, State and local governments and religious and charitable organizations. Another exception is in cases of family employment, such as where a husband employs his wife or children under 21 work for their parents.

The regulations defined agricultural labor as including all services performed by an employe on a farm in connection with cultivation and harvesting of crops or the raising, feeding or management of live stock, bees and poultry.

Farm Labor Excepted.

Services of an employe in connection with the processing of articles from materials which were produced on a farm, as well as the packing, transportation or marketing of those materials, also are excepted.

These services, however, must be performed by an employe of the owner or tenant of the farm on which the materials were produced and must be incident to ordinary farm operations as distinguished from manufacturing or commercial operations.

Domestic service excepted was ruled to be that performed in or about a private home by cooks, butlers, maids, valets, laundresses, furnace men, gardeners, footmen, grooms and chauffeurs of automobiles for family use.

Domestic service performed in boarding or rooming houses, fraternity houses, clubs, hotels or commercial offices is not excepted and employers must pay the tax.

The basis of the tax, Helvering said, is the total amount of wages payable by an employer with respect to employment during the calendar year, regardless of the time of actual payment.

The terms "wages" was held to mean all remuneration for employment, whether payable in money or something other than money.

Helvering said the tax was due and payable without assessment or demand on or before January 31, next, following the close of the taxable year. The payments may be made in four equal installments.

WPA Insignia Denied Place in N. Y. Parks

New York, March 12 (AP).—Charging the WPA insignia was a "flamboyant sign meant for no other purpose than to advertise the Federal Administration to the public," Parks Commissioner Robert Moses tonight refused to permit their erection on park projects.

WPA Administrator Victor F. Ridder at once threatened to remove 71,509 WPA workers from park projects next Monday unless Moses' order was withdrawn.

Moses, Fusion appointee to the parks post, was Republican candidate for the governorship against Gov. Herbert Lehman.

Display of the insignia, Ridder said, was ordered by National WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins on all relief projects. Moses refused permission on the ground such display violated a city ordinance.

Official Denies Blanton Charge On Assessment

Statement Law Violated Is Untrue, Says Richards as He Quits Post.

William P. Richards celebrated his retirement as District assessor yesterday with a bristling reply to Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, chariman of the House District Appropriations sub-committee, who had charged on the floor of the House that the law requiring 100 per cent assessment of District real estate for taxation, was ignored and violated.

"The record shows that the statement made by Blanton cannot be correct," Richards said, as he ended his 44 years of service to the District and witnessed the swearing in of Fred D. Allen, assistant assessor, tosucceed him.

Blanton's attack on the assessment record of Richards came somewhat of a surprise to Distric officials inasmuch as the Texan had repeatedly commended Mr. Richards for his work.

"The clear record of assessments, Blanton said, "conclusively shows figures as close to 100 per cent of that real estate here is assesed at their market value as it is humanly possible to attain.

"In some cases the assessments are higher than their market value. Evidence to this effect has been placed before the committee of Congress repeatedly and anyone who cares to study these data must be convinced."

Representative Blanton's statement that assessments had been reduced arbitrarily by $130,000,000 was not true, Richards said. Decreasing values when the bottom dropped out of the real estate market in the depression were reflected in the assessments only to the extent of $97,000,000, Richards said, adding "and more than $1,000,000 of that amount was due to exemption of property from taxation and not to a reduction in the assessment base."

Fund Fight Indorsed.

The campaign for increases in the District's health budget, restoration of the $3,000,000 cut in the Federal appropriation and repeal of the ban on teaching communism in Washington schools was indorsed last night by the Central Civic Association, meeting in Dunbar High School.

Hoover Caused Relief Burden, Robinson Says

Arkansan Sees Republicans Continuing Support to Roosevelt Plans.

In a broad frontal attack on former President Hoover's criticisms of the Roosevelt Administration, Senator Joseph T. Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, last night stated that "the cause of new taxes is the Hoover depression," predicted a continuance of Republican support of spending for relief, and stamped the Administration financial policies as sound, since "the financiers and the people have faith in the character of Mr. Roosevelt."

The Senate majority leader, speaking for half an hour over a national network of the Columbia Broadcasting System, assailed the former President's recent addresses for "using inaccurate figures to support the picture of terror which he likes to paint to an anxious public."

He opened his speechh, titled "Boondoggling and Budget Balancing in Relation to Prosperity," a companion address to his "boondoggling" speech in the Senate on Tuesday, with a citation of a list of figures showing higher business levels during early 1936 compared to 1935.

Discusses Farmers' Plight.

He continued:

"During the Hoover Administration approximately 900,000 farms were sold either for delinquent taxes or under mortgage foreclosure. . . . The American farmers, among the hardest-working men in the world, were being turned from their homes in the midst of plenty, like exiles, because a Republican administration was unable to manage properly our economic policies."

He said that "our political foes . . . have no economic plan—not even an economic theory . . . The carping spokesmen fail to agree and in most cases merely plead for a chance to administer the very policies which the New Deal has placed into effect."

"The only thing offered by the Republican Party is a return to the Pollyanna theory of economic reform. You recall how the President in the White House was declaring that 'prosperity was just around the corner' while a few of the vast army of the unemployed stood on the street corners, shivering and cold, vainly trying to sell apples and pencils to the passersby."

Passing to criticisms by the Republican National Committee and the "miscalled Liberty League" of "boondoggling," Senator Robinson said that "they were the best projects that could be devised . . . that in every instance the WPA had secured the advice and approval of local authoritie before undertaking such projects, whether those officials were Republicans or Democrats. The Administration here in Washington has tried to keep politics out of the great human and charitable work of caring for the unemployed," he said.

"Mr. Hoover takes occasion to question the financial policies of the Federal Government and to raise disturbing doubts in the minds of people who have a little money invested in worthwhile American stocks and bonds."

Quotes Hoover Speech.

In reference to Hoover's claim that the downward trend of the depression was stopped in June-July, 1932, and that the subsequent upward movement was stopped only because of the people's lack of confidence in Mr. Roosevelt," Senator Robinson quoted from an August 11, 1932, speech of Hoover's in which the latter said:

"With united effort we can and will turn the tide toward the restoration of business, employment and agriculture." Robinson added:

"Like the man who wanted to sweep back the tide with a broom, the unhappy Mr. Hoover is grasping at anything in the hope it may serve his purpose."

Senator Robinson summed up the achievements of the New Deal in restoring foreign trade, building up new markets in this country, hailed the relief program's accomplishments and ended by stating that "the Federal Government is in excellent financial condition." He asserted that while "under Mr. Hoover's administration, the budget was out of balance because people had suffered an appalling loss of income and hence could not pay taxes. * * * Under this Administration, the budget is out of balance because the Federal Government has undertaken a great constructive program which has restored industry and agriculture and put money into the pockets of the American people."

Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins during his press conference yesterday, in which he stated he would continue his attempts to keep politics out of the WPA.

Holt Calls Report 'Lies'

that his desk had been forcibly opened.

Growing more vehement and talking faster and faster, Holt read one letter after another telling of alleged political deals in connection with relief in his home State. He charged that nutrition experts in charge of feeding children were political appointees, that members of families of the Huntington city council were on relief administration pay rolls. He charged that only politically approved doctors were permitted to treat persons injured on relief jobs.

"The people of West Virginia are not so damn dumb that they won't take care of Hopkins at their first opportunity," he told the Senate.

He said that in one instance five engineers were employed on a road project costing $20,000.

He charged that the suggestion had been made at a "round-table discussion" that official records be altered or destroyed.

Then Holt came to the climax of his talk. He held aloft a short length of ordinary-looking wire.

"That is haywire," he said. "At the prices paid for it by the WPA it would cost you $93,000 to put three strands of it around an acre lot. They paid $77 for every 24 inches of that wire. I'm going to have a chemist examine it for its platinum content."

Other Overcharges Alleged.

Holt charged that in one instance $482 per cubic foot had been paid for excavating rock, that a 62-foot sewer had cost $120 a lineal foot, that there were 64 "bosses" on a job costing $94,000. He charged that on another project $45,000 had been paid for overhead, but that only $13,000 had been charged to overhead on the books.

"The cost of supervision, administration, material and equipment will exceed 55 per cent," he declared.

"I want to make these charges so plain that even Harry Hopkins can understand them," Holt continued. "There is plenty that Mr. Hopkins can see if he wants to see it. The responsibility is at his door."

Holt said that while he was investigating relief in his State an order was given to relief officials not to provide him with any information. He said he had appointed a young man to the Naval Academy and that immediately afterward the boy's father had been fired from the WPA pay roll.

Challenge to Hopkins.

"I challenge Cocky Harry Hopkins to meet these charges," he concluded:

"The people of West Virginia have to get the approval of political bosses before they can get on the relief rolls.

"People have been taken from private industry and put on the WPA pay roll at increased salaries.

"Projects have been shut down as political punishment.

"People who might talk have been intimidated and dismissed."

Many of the Republican Senators remained in their seats during the talk. Most of the Democrats, including Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, and Senator Neely (Democrat), West Virginia, political opponent of Holt, left the chamber after the Senator began to speak.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, who said that his remarks had no connection with Holt's talk, defended Hopkins and Secretary Ickes, PWA Administrator.

"If there has been misuse of funds or wrongdoing any place, it has been without their consent and against their wishes and desire," he said.

He urged passage of a bill levying penalties for use of relief funds for political purposes. He also urged a general investigation of relief conditions.

The mayors asserted that "we are anxious to put a true picture before the American people as to what has been accomplished through the WPA program." They declared the city officials of America "will never consent to the abandonment of the work principle in giving relief assistance."

The mayors' organization is made up of the chief executives of about 100 of the Nation's largest cities.

The organization asked the mayors of 100 cities these questions:

"1. Is work the proper method of meeting the unemployment problem as compared to the dole and idleness?

"2. Are we doing useful work under the WPA program?

"3. Would there be useful work yet to be done under a continued WPA program?"

The replies, the memorandum said, were almost unanimously in favor of the present arrangement.

In conclusion, the memorandum said that one of the principal criticisms was that not enough people had been put to work, and it suggested that the quotas for cities be increased. It suggested also that possibly more authority should be vested in local governments. A third suggestion wa sthat projects be planned to cover a longer period of time.

Simonds Ordered To 9th Corps Area

Maj. Gen. George S. Simonds, deputy chief of staff of the Army, was ordered to San Francisco yesterday to command the Ninth Corps Area. He will sail from New York in June and will relieve Maj. Gen. Paul Malone, present corps area commander, who soon will retire from active service.

No successor has been named for Gen. Simonds as deputy chief of staff. Prior to that assignment he served at the Army War College as commandant.

Army orders also included the assignment of Brig. Gen. Daniel Van Voorhis, chief of staff of the Hawaiian Department, to command the Seventh Mechanized Cavalry Brigade at Fort Knox, Ky.

Brig. Gen. Sherwood A. Cheney was transferred from the command of the Ninth Coast Artillery District at the Presidio of San Francisco to the command of the First Coast Artillery District at Boston. He will succeed Brig. Gen. Arthur S. Conklin, who will retire from active service this year.

Roosevelt 'Explores' Ecuador Wilds With Kin—by Armchair

His Cousin, Andre, and Companion Tell President of Plans for Trip to Amazon's Headwaters to Study Unknown Tribes There.

President Roosevelt made an "armchair exploration" into the heart of wildest South America yesterday with his cousin, Andre Roosevelt, before his adventurous kinsman set forth on an expedition to the headwaters of the Amazon River.

After tracing their proposed route into the unexplored and unmapped hinterlands of Ecuador to the President, explorer Roosevelt and his companion, Cyril Von Baumann, left last night for New York, from where they will sail on March 27.

While here the adventurers, through the President's intercession, obtained permits for their trip from Captain Eloy Alfaro, the Ecuadorian minister, and conferred with Smithsonian Institution authorities on the anthropological objectives of their expedition.

Not 'Sensational'.

"There's nothing sensational in our trip," Andre Roosevelt declared. "We are not searching for gold or buried treasure, and we're going nowhere near the regions in which Paul Redfern, the aviator, or Col. Fawcett, the explorer, disappeared. There's 180,000 square miles of territory around the Amazon's headwaters that is a mystery land. We don't know anything about the Indians that inhabit the region, who they are, or whence they came. We'd like to find out."

"At least they're wild Indians aren't they?" he was asked.

"Oh, they are savage jungle-folk certainly," Roosevelt replied, "who probably have never seen white men, although there is an unverified story floating around South America that an army of 1,200 Peruvians went in there many years ago and simply were swallowed by the jungle."

Then Von Baumann broke in:

"And you've heard of the Jivaro Indians in that section. They are headhunters, you know, who shrink their enemies' heads by some secret process. The Smithsonian has two specimens here, but they're not first-class and they want us to bring them back a nice one."

The expedition will have no military guard.

"We'll take some grenades along," Roosevelt explained, "and before we make camp, either on the river bank or on the trek across the jungle, we'll toss one or two around to scare any wild animals or savages away."

"And we'll also depend somewhat on chemicals for protection," von Baumann added. "I've used them in Sumatra quite successfully. By dropping them in the water you make it bubble, or smoke, or flame. Anyone who can set water on fire is a white magician and no one to fool with."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert by the Philadelphia Orchestra, Jose Iturbi, guest conductor and piano soloist, in Constitution Hall Thursday night. Program: Overuture to "Oberon" (Weber); Piano Concerto No. 3 in C minor (Beethoven); Funeral March from "Die Goetterdaemmerung" (Wagner); Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde" (Wagner); Two Nocturnes (Debussy; Three Dances from "El Sombrero de Tres Picos" De Falla).

Congratulatory aplaupse in most generous measure was bestowed upon Jose Iturbi last night on the occasion of his local debut as a conductor, and appreciative enthusiasm was expended in return for the splendid playing of the Philadelphia Orchestra in its third concert of the season. The conductor-pianist, for his part, was duly modest in his acknowledgment of all salvos, and punctiliously deferential to the musicians, inviting them to share with him the majority of the recalls.

On the basis of the program he presented, the ability of Senor Iturbi as a conductor cannot be assayed in fairness to his unrevealed potentialities. The selections were all from the familiar repertoire which the musicians could almost play from memory, and depended more upon their skill than upon their obedient response to direction. With the exception of the Beethoven concerto, there was nothing to bring out the interpretative subtleties and the spiritual understanding which a conductor may possess.

Because of his divided attention, Senor Iturbi did not even get beneath the surface of Beethoven's music, although this concerto is not one of the profound works. He was very adroit in his transitions from performer to director, and carried through his task with expert assurance, but the reading seemed completely objective and singularly bare of poetic implications. As a feat the performance was admirable, but as a revelation of Beethoven it was Iturbian.

That this Spanish artist has conductorial metal in him is apparent, but it has not yet been sufficiently hammered out on the anvil of experience to show its possible temper. His podium manner is as tense as a coiled spring, and as centrifugal in its suddenly released excitements. His moments of quietude have not the poise of authority, but the pose of concentrated energy ready for release.

His sense of rhythm is exact to a degree, and his control of tempi is skillful in the building of climaxes. He has a good perception of instrumental color and applies it with taste. His beat is precise and clear, and his cues are alertly, though a trifle dramatically, indicated. He has his scores in his head, and there are no falterings in his memory.

The Wagnerian excerpts were resplendently delivered with those magnificencies of tone which we have learned to expect from the Philadelphians, and the nances of Debussy shimmered in a delightful play of colors. But one was left in doubt as to how much of one's enjoyment came from the perfectly trained orchestra without the interposition of the baton.

One wonders why Senor Iturbi chose just the program he did for his Washington appearance, for it was certainly not a compliment to the intelligence of his audience. One would have greatly preferred the program he is giving in Philadelphia on Friday and Saturday, containing, as it does, the infrequently heard Mozart overture to "Der Schauspieldirektor," the second symphony of Sibelius, and a a suite from Howard Hanson's opera, "Merry Mount."

The Ship Subsidy Muddle.

There is much sympathy with the Senate's desire to bring to a head the protracted controversy over subsidies for the American merchant marine. The existing policy of granting indirect subventions camouflaged as compensation for carrying mail has proved to be unsatisfactory in practice as well as faulty in theory. It is questionable, however, whether the establishment of a new system will be aided by withholding funds to carry out present contracts, as the Senate has voted to do.

Action on the ship subsidy issue has not been delayed for want of information, expert advice or objective study of this very complicated problem. The chief obstacle to any constructive legislation seems to be the clash between two schools of thought. One group recognizes the shortcomings of the present law, and at the same time insists that substantial Government aid is essential to keep any fleet of merchant vessels operating under the American flag. The other group seems determined to punish the shipping companies for alleged abuses of the present system, without much regard for the effect its restrictive measures would have upon the future of shipping lines which have been inaugurated at considerable expense to taxpayers.

Some compromise between these two schools of thought was effected in the Copeland bill, which now has the support of both the Commerce and Postoffice Departments. This measure seems to be also reasonably satisfactory to most of the shipping operators. But it has aroused violent opposition among those legislators who would like to crack down on the merchant marine.

These critics tend to rally around the Guffey bill, which seems intended to bring about Government ownership of the merchant marine by indirection. Like the Copeland bill, it would provide direct subsidies but with the proviso that the Government could build and operate ships if private capital could not be secured. Since the benefits offered would be insufficient to make up the difference between domestic and foreign costs of building and operating vessels, the result would doubtless be another venture in Government ownership.

In no circumstances can a measure of this sort be considered satisfactory. If Federal ownership and operation are contemplated, that objective should be discussed on its merits. The country has had enough of misleading statutes in this field. Certainly the next ship-subsidy legislation should not be a disguised half-way measure that might produce a far worse muddle than now exists.

Reverse Of The Shield.

Yale University is one of many endowed institutions facing the necessity of cutting their running costs at a time when the tide is setting toward recovery.

In a letter to the alumni, President Angell has pointed out that 60 per cent of the university's income is derived from investments yielding over 5 per cent a few years ago, whereas today the average interest return is less than 4 per cent. "This circumstance alone," he concludes, "represents a heavy reduction in annual income." The recent sharp decline in interest rates is of course equivalent to the loss of a large proportion of the fixed endowment of innumerable charitable and educational institutions throughout the country.

The problems created by high interest rates cannot be satisfactorily solved by rushing from one extreme to the other. It is, of course, beneficial to scale interest charges that are beyond the ability of the debtor to pay. The deflation of the depression period necessitated extensive refinancing of this sort. But that is a very different proceeding from that followed in "beating down" interest rates in the hope of encouraging an expansion of new capital investment. Such practices tend to discourage thrift and, as the evidence shows, they do not provide a basis for investment expansion in the absence of confidence that borrowed funds can be profitably employed.

Ideally, interest rates should be adjusted with reference to the demand for and the supply of saved capital seeking long-term investment. Actually, a huge volume of unutilized deposits, lying idle in our banks, has been built up through Government borrowing and spending operations. The pressure of this fund upon restricted investment outlets has brought down interest rates both for long-term as well as for short-term employment until they are in some cases abnormally low, measured by the nature of the risk involved.

However, it is the instability of interest rates rather than their precise level at any given time that creates serious adjustment problems such as those now confronting Yale. An institution can adjust its scale of activities to its income if there is any way of forecasting the size of that income. But when interest rates begin to fluctuate widely, without regard to the volume of saved capital or the demand for such capital, institutions dependent upon incomes from invested property become the victims of chance.

Needless to say, the public which benefits by the activities of these agencies also suffers from their deprivations.

A Salutary Check.

Justice Wheat's order, restraining a telegraph company from turning over to the Black committee the messages of a Chicago law firm, is an important affirmation of the guaranteed right of the citizen to be protected from "unreasonable search and seizure" of his "effects." The decision emphasizes the fact that the court does not intend to "interfere with the powers of the Senate, or with the exercise of its legitimate discretion." The judge properly regards a wholesale seizure of telegrams, under a blanket form of subpoena, as a flagrant violation of basic constitutional rights.

The fundamental problems raised by the current controversy over lobbying investigations, however, will not be settled by justified denunciations of the high-handed methods of senatorial investigators. Still less would solution be furthered by Congressional defiance of court orders. The liberty of the citizen would be a precarious possession if Congressional investigating committees could set themselves up against the courts, as Senator Black apparently desires, and become the sole judge of their own actions.

Although Justice Wheat's decision is believed to be the first of its kind in which a court has issued an order restraining an act of Congress, that does not indicate that Congress could be trusted to use discretion if it were free from all potential judicial restraints. Quite recently, indeed, the Senate Munitions Committee was guilty of deplorable indiscretions which resulted in a State Department threat to withhold documents containing confidential information affecting other governments. This incident might also easily have become an issue calling for a judicial ruling.

No unbiased observer will be disposed to question the sound reasoning underlying the judicial rebuke now administered to the Black committee. Moreover, its action in utilizing an independent regulatory agency to investigate records in possession of a concern subject to its jurisdiction raises another important question of policy. The resultant controversy will have served an excellent purpose if it causes Congressional committees to temper zeal with a wise restraint when they set out to round up malefactors or pursue the elusive trail of the lobbyist.

Yet, as a part of the problem, it is well to realize that the numbers and activities of lobbyists tend to increase as the scope of governmental activities expands and regulatory laws multiply. Under such conditions it becomes more and more necessary for special groups to protect their interests before Congress. Indeed, the clash of opposed views, expounded by rival lobbies, sometimes provides the best possible means of giving legislators a real understanding of the problem with which they must deal.

Congress is entitled to full information as to the nature of lobbying activities and sometimes essential facts are extremely difficult to acquire. The temptation is great to fish for evidence by resort to methods that violate constitutional rights. No hard and fast rules for the guidance of Congress in such cases can therefore be laid down by the courts. But the independent judicial check means much less likelihood that legislative committees will turn useful investigations into probes that savor strongly of the inquisitorial methods of dictatorships.

William Holland Wilmer.

Not even the current flood of expressions of esteem and appreciation for the services of Dr. William Holland Wilmer is adequate to convey the widespread sense of loss which is felt at his passing. This famous eye specialist won the admiration of the public far beyond his scientific field. Long before his recent retirement from the directorship of the Wilmer Institute of Ophthalmology, at Johns Hopkins Hospital, he had become a symbol of indefatigable research for public benefit.

Perhaps too much has been said about the royal and otherwise distinguished patients who came from far and near to take advantage of Dr. Wilmer's skill. In his hour of death it is more gratifying to recall that he served with just as much devotion thousands of poor and uninfluential persons in danger of losing the precious gift of sight. It was the need of the patient, not his prestige, that called forth the best efforts of this humanitarian leader.

It is the most fitting memorial to the man that his work should go forward after his own hand is still. In the Wilmer Institute, which his genius inspired and developed, he has left facilities for extending the splendid public service which he began. Specialists trained in this institution are already spreading his influence in various parts of the country, carrying with them the knowledge, the perfected methods and the high professional ideals for which the Institute is largely indebted to Dr. Wilmer.

Through his followers' work toward the saving of human sight as well as the records of his own remarkable career, the contributions of this distinguished Washingtonian will be of lasting benefit to society.

Mr. Ramspeck's Olive Branch

Representative Ramspeck cannot deplore the "feeling of antagonism" which has grown up between Congress and the District more sincerely than the residents of this disfranchised community. And his suggestion that a "spirit of mutual sympathy and understanding" be substituted for recriminations should be enthusiastically indorsed by all who have the best interests of Washington at heart.

It would be a mistake to assume, however, that the unsatisfactory relationship between the House of Representatives and the Capital City is simply a result of criticism from newspapers and local citizens' associations. On the contrary, the efforts for improvement now being made by these agencies are a direct result of intolerable neglect by Congress in the fields of public health, education, police protection and other municipal functions in Washington. For many years Washingtonians followed a policy of resignation to inept and short-sighted rule. This has merely led to the additional abuses which are too often the reward of a servile attitude. It was only after every effort to bring about adjustments by the process of reasoning had failed that local agencies ceased to turn the other cheek.

The very fact that Representative Ramspeck has suggested negotiation of a "mutual understanding agreement" by committees representing the District and Congress indicates the effectiveness of the present community effort. Many Congressmen now realize for the first time that Washington really is confronted by serious municipal problems. If every member of the House would adopt the reasonable attitude manifested by the Congressman from Georgia, mutually advantageous adjustments could be effected without further bitterness. Unfortunately, there is no indication that the House is as yet ready for Mr. Ramspeck's lead.

According to him, members of Congress find it difficult to understand why people of the District complain inasmuch as "they pay only $1.50 a hundred in taxes when many of us pay $3 or $4 at home." The Congressman should realize that this is not a fair comparison, since Washington real estate is assessed at 100 per cent of its value, as against 40 to 60 per cent in many other cities.

Moreover, Congress has full control over taxes here. If more revenue is needed to maintain reasonable standards of community service, after Congress has made an equitable allowance to cover essentially Federal items in the budget, taxes can be readily adjusted to meet the deficiency. In fact, under the present arrangement the realty tax must be automatically adjusted whenever Congress passes a local appropriations bill calling for more money than existing taxes would raise.

If Mr. Ramspeck would support a movement for Congressional investigation of Gallinger Hospital, the District Jail, the local court buildings, the Tuberculosis Hospital, the portable shacks used as schools, Lorton Reformatory and similarly neglected institutions he would soon cease to be perplexed by the anxiety of local civic groups. Conditions in these institutions constitute an emergency that must be met. If Congress will co-operate in such an endeavor, the community leaders of Washington will be happy indeed. If no such co-operation can be secured, Washingtonians would be devoid of manhood to submit to subjection without vigorous protest.

Sing Ho For Freedom!

Two newly married Michigan couples, a quartet in the twenties, have sailed from San Francisco with the intention of passing two indeterminate honeymoons in palm-thatched huts on the edge of blue lagoons. In short, and "shorts," they plan to go native in Tahiti, or thereabouts, in order to escape the "mediocrity" of Michigan.

Other Wolverines may consider this an insult to the State which sends Senators Couzens and Vandenberg away—to Washington. The literary may see in it evidence that the South Seas vogue, begun by Stevenson, and so valorously exploited by his American imitators, still flourishes and has a widespread influence. But the episode is likely to turn the detached observer toward an inquiry into the meaning, or rather the whereabouts, of mediocrity.

If one is to accept Emerson, mediocrity comes from within. You get out of a book exactly what you give to it. Whereas, in the book of daily existence, an unusual human being will find the unusual on every page, the mediocre individual will find nothing except mediocrity anywhere. And, even if we reject this philosophic reasoning, another fear remains. Perhaps so many mediocre people have lately gone to the South Seas that those once paradisiac shores have themselves become as mediocre as poor, slandered Pontiac (Mich.).

A Gauguin will escape mediocrity while sojourning in far Pacific isles, not because they are idyllic, but because he is a Gauguin. But a Walt Whitman conquers banality while remaining in Camden (N. J.) not because that worthy city is perhaps slightly provincial, but because he is Whitman.

The Menace Of Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

J. Edgar Hoover, in charge of criminal investigation in the Department of Justice, made a talk before a crime investigation convention recently in New York which should be read in full from every pulpit in the United States.

On the agenda of every American society interested in the integrity of this Nation, Hoover's plea should be the first in order of action.

He said, among other things, that there are about 3,000,000 criminals in this country; that crime cost each American about $120 each year; that an astonishing number of the major crimes are committed by boys and girls under voting age; that the responsibility for the major crimes committed by youth is largely the fault of the parents who set a poor example themselves or do not exercise intelligent authority over their children; that our parole system in the United States is a disgrace due to "sob sisters" who give more attention to helping criminals before and after crimes are committed than they do to protecting the public against criminals; that enforcing officers could be more efficient if not hampered by criminals' lawyers—and sometimes by men in office who are supposed to prosecute criminals.

Mr. Hoover's indictment of the voting citizen was severe and frank for not electing the right kind of men to office, instead of mere politicians who seek the offices. He begged America to wake up to the menace of organized crime.

Appeal To Mr. Blanton.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As a scion of one of the seven generations of native Washingtonians, I wrote the Honorable Thomas L. Blanton over two weeks ago a very conciliatory letter, and requested an answer. I have received no reply to date.

I, therefore, appeal to The Post to help impress Mr. Blanton with the fact that it is willing to print such excerpts from all letters as it deems fair in asking him to refrain from his attacks on the politically helpless residents of this city. He, like all of us, may bow to the power of the press and thereby become a friend and not an enemy.

From my letter which I addressed to Mr. Blanton, I quote:

Our Commissioners have been beset for years by members of the Congresses for jobs for some of their constituents, and, I understand, were told to find a job for them "or else," and in order to have less opposition to District bills they had to knuckle down and comply. Threats of this kind are foreign to your nature, and we know you would not stoop so low. All our residents (we are not citizens with all the privileges that the States give) endeavor to win the friendship of the legislators and for them to become champions to our cause. I appeal to you as an able and fair-minded man and an authority on Constitutional law to have our privileges, similar to the State, restored to us. J. ALLEN BOTELER.

Six-Year Terms?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Now while the American Constitution is being so much cussed and discussed, why not amend it in some respects so as to conform with modern conditions?

The extension of suffrage and the compulsory primary system has so increased the cost of campaigns as to deter many able men who are either poor or without financial backing from offering for Congress. Their timidity is heightened by the fact that the term of office of representatives is only two years.

Why not the Constitution so as to have members of the House of Representatives elected for six instead of two years, with one-third of the representatives elected every two years.

This would eliminate to some extent pressure brought to bear by organized minority groups in a general election every two years. As members are now elected the increasing political power of such minorities will become, from year to year, an even greater menace to our democratic form of government, "for and by the people."

The Presidency of the United States is the most difficult job in the world. Why not make the presidential term six years, with provision that no president can succeed himself? This plan works well in the State of Mississippi where the Governor serves six years and cannot succeed himself.

These two amendments to our Constitution would give presidents and representatives freedom of thought and action, which they do not have now. Someone has aptly said that the Constitution was made for man and not man for the Constitution as already exemplified by 21 amendments.

Constellatory Confusion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I was somewhat astonished to see the picture of the schooner "Constellation" printed in the edition of March 5, under the caption "Historic Ship Center of Battle," and to read further that the ship in the picture was "the famous frigate, sistership of the Constitution, which has served in every American war since the Revolution, shown as she sailed up the Potomac in October, 1934. The historic vessel, built in Baltimore in 1797, is now at Newport, R. I., and patriotic Marylanders want to get her back as a naval museum."

Undoubtedly someone has already pointed out that the vessel pictured is not the one referred to in the description. The vessel in the picture is a schooner named the Constellation. The frigate Constellation is a square-rigged vessel, of entirely different constructional characteristics than those of the vessel pictured.

Proctor For Vice President.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have attended the last three Republican National Conventions as a delegate from Nebraska. I had the honor of helping nominate Coolidge and Dawes in 1924, and Hoover and Curtis in 1928 and 1932.

I have just read a little volume entitled "Pay Day," by David Milton Proctor, of Kansas City, Mo. It is the clearest, soundest, and most patriotic discussion of political problems I have ever read. It is full of wise philosophy and well-directed thrusts at and ridicule of present-day political quackery and fallacies.

As political literature I consider it a masterpiece. Any man who can write a book like "Pay Day" is qualified to be Vice President of the United States.

Since we do not have any native candidates for that high office, at this time, I humbly place in nomination the name of David M. Proctor. The national and state committees for years have availed themselves of his oratorical service on the stump.

"More Patients, Less Time."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

While the writer does not doubt the lack of hospital facilities in Washington, he is of the opinion that much sickness and many deaths could be prevented if doctors would listen to patients and take the time to study each case.

Some persons are thoughtless enough to believe that merely because a physician's office is filled with people, he, the doctor, is necessarily very competent, they not realizing that the more patients, the less time is given to each.

ONE WHO KNOWS.

As Texas Would Do It.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It seems as if where there is a lot of smoke there is nearly always at least a little fire, and it sounds as if some of the people in Washington do not appreciate Congressman Tommy Blanton, from away out in the Permian Basin, red beds and mesquite flats of west Texas.

Anyway, it's all in the way you get started off together or agin each other, and it might be that folks in Washington is bettin' wrong and on the wrong kind of stunts. Take Walter Johnson's dollar throwin' stunt just in imitation of George Washington. If they was bettin' their money on Tom Blanton bein' able to put that old Goodyear dirigible on the south or Congressional end of the Capitol and blow it across the Potomac, chances are Congressman Tom could inflate his bellows and blow that old dirigible clean over the Washington Airport first blast. He might do just that, especially some day when he is mad and bilin' over as they say down in Texas.

Besides this would do a heap of good for both sides. It would let Tom get down on the Senate end, which he tried for and missed by a wide margin, and it would make Tom feel good, too, all these people watchin' him down on the Senate end gettin' his lungs ready to blow, as some of these folks is bound to think Tom is a Senator and, boy, how good Tom would feel bein' mistook for a real Senator. At the same time, when he blowed that old dirigible across the Potomac his chest would swell out and his head rear back, his eardrums vibrate from the concussion and you wouldn't hear much from Tom for a while.

I ain't paid much attention to how mad the women folks of Washington are at Tommy, but one lady down in the mesquite and jack oak hills of west Texas sure run him ragged a few years ago when Tom was slightly younger than he is now. Mrs. R. Q. Lee, of Cisco, Tex., quietly contested Tom, and she had him worried, too, for a while, so it might be as usual that if the proud lords and masters of the households of Washington just cannot do anything about Tom Blanton, they might—as usual when men get in a fix—send for a nice quiet Texas woman to see what can be done. TEX WILLIS.

Discriminating Criticism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I was present in Constitution Hall last Sunday afternoon and, as a lyric artist, I wish to record that I agree with your music critic in reporting the recital given by Grace Moore.

I admire Mr. Brown and The Post for the candid and correct estimate of Miss Moore's vocal attainments. He is to be congratulated for discerning between artificiality and real artistic excellency. In giving your readers a just appraisal of this singer who has been rated above finer American artists, Mr. Brown showed that he was not swayed by the adulation bestowed upon Miss Moore.

Screen and radio have been the means of heaping so much acclaim on certain figures in my profession that some critics are often blinded through the illusion thus created in the public mind. It is refreshing to read what an honest critic thinks, and I feel any self-respecting singer should only command words of praise from the organs of public opinion when fundamentally sound canons of lyric art form the basis of the interpreter's favor.

The Post Impressionist

Dinner at Hollywood

Post Office, Friday.

JOHN WANAMAKER said (didn't he?) that nothing succeeds like success. We, however, have discovered that something else does—if an ability to call letters from the vasty deep of column-readers is any test. And this something is food.

* * *

For our recent Delectable Dinner—in the shape of a column—is procuring us no end of cups of after-dinner coffee—in the shape of communications both contentious and commendatory.

* * *

We'll acknowledge the latter sort with cards of thanks.

* * *

As to the former:

That dinner-column, we hope you'll remember, did not pretend to voice the Post-Impressionist's own idea of an ideal evening meal. We merely set forth the rival menus that were, respectively, considered ideal dinners by the British Wine and Food Society (wine first, you'll observe) and the British Saintsbury Club, the latter being an organization of Englishmen (native Englishmen, if not cultural) whose admiration for the late George Saintsbury's preferences in viands and the fruit of the vine is every bit as large as their admiration for the same Mr. Saintsbury's literary essays.

* * *

You see, we were, as those Englishmen would put it in their own English, "quite without prejudice." Yet those of our readers who habitually suspect us of meaning more than we say, raised immediate accusations that we were siding with either the Society or the Club. And each accuser presented some other contestant country's claims.

* * *

So far, our court-clerk has on file: French appeals, Italian pleas, Hungarian depositions, Scandinavian motions and one Irish affidavit—with Oberkoch Danziger still to be heard from.

* * *

And just now there has fought his way to the bar Mr. Norman J. Wile, brandishing a brief for columnar recognition of the Hollywood Cuisine—in the high name of patriotism.

* * *

He argues:

(1) That Hollywood is the essence of America;

(2) That, consequently, Hollywood dinners are a valid expression of the American Kitchen in its uppermost register;

(3) And that, therefore, Hollywood's best menus ought to be given as much prominence as any foreign food lists.

* * *

Q. E. D!

* * *

As to the first two of these propositions, we may reserve our opinion. With the third—which is the most important—we nevertheless heartily agree—especially since Mr. Wile appends, as a typical example, a dinner menu devised by one of our movie favorites, Miss Jeanette MacDonald.

* * *

And what is the MacDonald menu which Mr. Wile selects to whet both our Lenten appetite and our all-the-year-round patriotism? It's this:

Tomato Bouillon

Crabmeat en Coquille

Roast Duckling with Minted Apple-Rings
Wild Rice with Currants
Green Peas

Salad of Mixed Greens

Apricot Mousse

Coffee

* * *

It does rather turn one's mind's eye toward 8 o'clock p. m. The Post-Impressionist admits as much—even though his station in life happily permits him to prefer fattening food.

* * *

Moreover, we have the best of reasons to believe that Mr. Wile has given us the facts. We recently read something very like them in an article about Miss MacDonald published by a magazine called Photoplay. There the menu was the same, though the magazine's accompanying comments contained an amount of sugar dangerous to a Hollywood figure.

* * *

"Half cup of sugar, 1 cup catsup, 1 cup salad oil, half cup vinegar, the juice of 1 lemon, 1 tablespoon onion juice, 1 teaspoon salt."

* * *

And right there we must, with infinite regret, part from Miss MacDonald. Our own salad-dressing is not a bit like hers—yet we make the best salad-dressing in the world. We won't tell you how we make it—but, if Miss MacDonald ever comes to Washington and ever dines with us, we'll make it for her at any restaurant she cares to name. And, what's more, we'll guarantee to convert her.

* * *

She omits garlic.

* * *

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Young Starhemberg

Vienna, March 12.

IF you want a picture of this country under the present dictatorship just imagine that Austria is the State of New York. The nominal head man, the chancellor, is a reactionary college professor, a man with a heart full of Christian piety, who hates Socialists and throws them into prison, leaving their families to starve for the greater glory of God. His name is Kurt von Schuschnigg, and the regular army is his to command as long as Benito Mussolini of Italy comes through with the pay roll once a month. Otherwise, he doesn't amount to much, and with these words you can forget all about him.

The actual boss, though, is a reckless young aristocrat named Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, whose lineage and character correspond to that of one of our dashing young scions of the Long Island polo and pub-crawling set.

If this were New York some snobbish paper would admire young Starhemberg and run pictures of him in the Sunday brown lunching with Gene Tunney, Mrs. Harrison Williams and a couple of genuine Philadelphia Stotesburys under a striped umbrella at Palm Beach. He is that type of hero—rich, arrogant, fearless, useless and a member of one of the best families, with the supreme virtue of never having done a lick of work in his life.

• • • •

THE paper might report that Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, of Syosset, Long Island, Park avenue, New York, and White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., entertained a party of friends in private the other evening and that a pleasant time was had by all, followed by a list of prominent young scions and scionesses of families which really matter. And the gossip notes would inquire in fewer and plainer words what well-known local dictator got plastered in the Stork Club the other dawn and was carried out stiff as a stuffed horse.

The prince is one of your long-legged, flat-bellied, dashing domineering, athletic types. He used to string with Adolf Hitler in Germany and took a hand in the famous Munich putsch, but quit Hitler and came back home to start his own little dictatorship with the eventual purpose of restoring the Hapsburg monarch. Or, if it could come to that, he would be quite willing to accept the throne himself, considering that his fine family is supposed to be about 300 years older than that of the royal breed.

It really makes little difference whose family is older when they go back that far, considering that in those days they all tore meat with their fingers, wiped their hands on their whiskers, didn't smell fresh and would be regarded as a lot of frowsy bums from the present-day standard.

• • • •

IT was exciting fun to trail with Hitler in the early days of the Nazi campaign, but the prince soon perceived that Hitler intended to pinch off Austria for himself, rub out the border and attach the country to Germany. As a loyal Austrian, devoted to the monarchy, he couldn't take any part in that. Austrians of his set are Royalists, and every so often a delegation of army officers or students of the aristocracy go stomping down the cellar steps of the Capuchin Church to spank their heels together and lay wreaths on the bronze sarcophagi of Francis Joseph and Maria Theresa, with trailing ribbons lettered in gold with vows of loyalty.

There is no doubt they would gladly give their lives in the fight for the restoration. That would be their idea of a wonderful time. Moreover, although the prince is a tough guy, he is also something of a sportsman who enjoys a fight but gets comparatively little fun out of an execution. He found that he couldn't go along with Hitler in the great slow massacre of the German Jews, not so much because he pitied or admired the Jews as because they were helpless and therefore afforded no sport. The Jews have no protective coloration, so to speak.

Hitler was a grim and mirthless man, without a friend or confidant in the world, who never takes a drink, never twitches his funny mustache at a fast blonde in a hotel bar, and he doesn't even eat meat or smoke. Moreover, he has frequently been known to shoot a friend, and, adding him all up, Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg decided that Adolf Hitler wasn't the right answer.

And, finally, the position of dictator in his own country was vastly preferable to that of second string tough guy in Germany.

• • • •

VIENNA is a good-time town. The women are pretty and easy to meet, the music is good, and the public opinion, after centuries of schooling by generations of romantic Hapsburgs, is not inclined to ask a dictator, "Who was that lady I seen you with last night?"

The social life of the young dictator and his attitude toward the working classes so nearly resemble that of some of our rich and jaunty young barflies of the better element in New York that I can almost picture an American Starhemberg ruling New York with a strong-arm militia from field headquarters in the Waldorf Bar, the St. Regis Roof and the Central Park Casino.

Of course, he takes orders from Mussolini, because Mussolini pays the expense, but he enjoys the same position and privileges that Mussolini and Hitler hold and doesn't even pretend to be a clean-desk man or an early rising executive—unless you mean early in the afternoon.

Geneva and Latin America

By Bertram Pickard.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

GENEVA read of President Roosevelt's personal letter to the chiefs of state of all the Latin-American republics with great interest and much sympathy, not wholly unmixed, perhaps, with a certain anxiety.

The importance of the initiative, coming as it does in the year of the Presidential campaign, was evident at once. That importance is certainly not lessened by the entry of German troops into the Rhineland, emphasizing the precarious nature of peace in Europe and consequently the desirability of its stabilization elsewhere.

All the best friends of the League assume the ultimate universality of the League, while being under no illusions as to the changes and modifications that may be necessary in its constitution and practice. As Salvador de Madariaga once put it: "The League is by definition universal."

It is only natural, therefore, that any Pan-American conference, whether in or out of the Pan-American Union's series, should be scrutinized at Geneva to see whether the sort of regionalism at work is calculated to prosper or retard the realization of a world-wide association of states.

• • • •

SOME kinds of regionalism cut right across the guiding ideas of the League Covenant. Believers in the League and its future role in international life quite frankly deplore and combat Japan's virtual claim to establish what they style a "Japanese Monroe Doctrine" over eastern Asia. They dislike also very much those vague reservations made by the British government when signing the Kellogg-Briand pact concerning certain unspecified areas (Egypt and Suez were clearly enough indicated).

If one state claims the right to use arbitrary force outside of its own territory without reference to collective judgments of some kind, such special claims are certain to be imitated. The Japanese example is a case in point. Mr. Matsuoka, in his spirited defense of Japan's policy at Geneva, always referred to the American and British "Monroe Doctrines" with the greatest relish.

It is hardly surprising, therefore, that friends of the League have never liked Article XXI of the Covenant by which the Monroe Doctrine is given legal validity as a "regional understanding" designed for "securing the maintenance of peace."

This is not the place to discuss the interpretation given by the League to Article XXI. Suffice it to say that Costa Rico, for example, has remained out of the League because of Article XXI; while Mexico, when joining the League in 1931, and Argentine, when reentering in 1932, expressly stated their reserves regarding that article of the Covenant—as they had not been parties, so they said, to the regional understanding in question.

• • • •

BUT, if the memory of President Monroe has not always been cherished in Geneva as it should have been, there is here very sincere appreciation of President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy in Latin America, so ably seconded by Secretary Hull, and of the many evidences both President and Secretary of State have given of their wish to widen the "good neighbor" conception to cover other parts of the world as well.

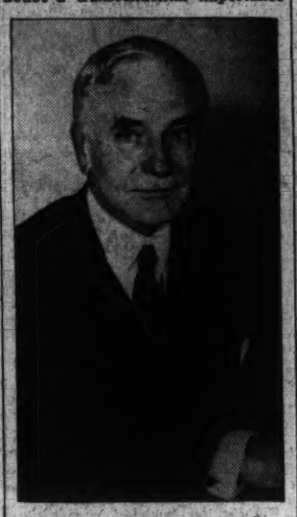
Despite the many obstacles that have hindered effective co-operation between Washington and Geneva, the responsibility for which is very widely spread, the fact remains that in some directions at least progress towards definite collaboration has been registered.

The fact that Geneva and Washington alternately supported each other's actions in the tardy settlement of the Chaco conflict is one example of changing conditions. American membership in the International Labor Organization, and the successful carrying through of the recent regional conference at Santiago de Chile, are still more significant.

• • • •

THUS, when in Geneva we read that the President believes an inter-American conference of the American republics "would advance the cause of world peace inasmuch as the agreements which might be reached would supplement and reinforce the efforts of the League of Nations" we can only add a fervent amen, being as well aware as anyone that the League's efforts sorely need such supplement and reinforcement.

This passage of the letter carries us back in memory to the seventh Pan-American Conference held in December, 1933, at Montevideo, when Secretary Hull, on more than one occasion, expressed appreciation of the activities of the League in the Chaco dispute, and willingness to co-operate with it in the maintenance of peace. This led the Foreign Minister of Argentine (Dr. Lamas) to exclaim: "This spectacle we have just witnessed of the eminent Secretary of State of the United States, standing up and offering the co-operation of his country to the representatives of the League of Nations, has without doubt a transcendental importance



"He Would Co-operate . . ."

We naturally wonder whether similar ideas of co-operation are now working in the President's mind; or whether he is thinking primarily of consolidating peace and co-operation in the Americas by American states alone? In either case constructive results would in fact "supplement and reinforce the efforts of the League." The right kind of regionalism is not inconsistent with League theory; while in practice it has characterized many of the League's actions in the past.

• • • •

WE note that the President suggests that the activities of the forthcoming conference might include the strengthening by ratification, with or without amendment, of existing peace instruments or perhaps even the negotiation of new instruments.

League experience in recent years tends to show that what is needed today is not so much new instruments as better and more effective methods of executing existing instruments, not least the Kellogg-Briand pact. There is such a thing as an inflationism of peace pacts; new signatures may be needed in some cases, but in others they only weaken old signatures by throwing doubt on their validity.

Geneva awaits with interest the publication of an agenda for the conference. Presumably economic as well as political co-operation will figure there.

Secretary Hull's cordial letter concerning freer trade, addressed to the chairman of the League Assembly's economic commission last September, is hopefully remembered here; and the point is not overlooked that a most-favored-nation clause, tending to generalize benefits, is included in each of the series of bilateral trade agreements initiated by the State Department. If such a policy be further developed at Buenos Aires, it cannot fail to promote freer trade generally—a highly desirable result.

• • • •

MOREOVER, Geneva is not blind to the fact that the question of political co-operation to promote security and peace has another aspect on the American side of the Atlantic than on this. That difference is well registered, perhaps, in the form taken by the anti-war pact sponsored at the Montevideo Conference by the Argentine government and signed at Rio de Janeiro on October 12, 1933. (The pact is not yet in force through insufficient ratifications.)

It is interesting to note, however, that although drafted with American conditions primarily in view this instrument was opened for signature to non-American states and in fact has been signed both by Spain and Italy. This is natural enough since international law is international law wherever it may be formulated; while aggressive war is aggressive war, whichever the continent.

Article XI of the League Covenant quite rightly assumes that war, or the threat of it, is a matter of concern to the whole League. But experience has taught the League that while all war is of common concern, any particular war is not of equal concern to all. The United States undoubtedly would feel one way about war in the Balkans and another about war in Central America. Nevertheless, the World War began in the Balkans. That is the origin of Articles X, XI and XVI of the Covenant, after all.

• • • •

WHEN, in April, 1935, the Council of the League unanimously condemned Germany's unilateral denunciation of Part V of the Treaty of Versailles, the three Latin-American governments on the Council (Mexico, Argentine and Chile) did not abstain as they might well have done, on the grounds that the question was a highly controversial European issue. Indeed, they added to their affirmative votes important declarations pledging their loyalty to the conception of universal law and its general application.

Argentine and Chile are still members of the Council, while Mexico has been replaced by Ecuador. Their reaction to the more acute issue now posed by Hitler will help to show whether favorable response to President Roosevelt's Pan-American proposal indicates any weakening of their ties with the Geneva system.

I.

Does a contract oft depress you?
Then don't pay!
Does your solemn pledge distress you?
Oh, I say,
If it makes you quite unhappy
And you fear you have been sappy,
Laugh it off with comment snappy——
Attaway!

II.

Do you dislike pacts on paper?
They're the junk!
Is your promise just a caper?
It's the bunk!
When you've made a pledge in writing,
Do you find it bitter fighting?
Do you find it rather blighting?
Be a punk!

III.

Does a treaty badly fret you?
Thumb your nose!
Does a signed agreement net you
Lots of woes?
When you've made a pact and signed it,
Rather boresome do you find it?
Do your people seem to mind it?
Out it goes!

IV.

Have you firmly said, "I swear it?"
Very well,
If you find you cannot bear it,
Let 'em yell!
It's a promise, but you hate it;
It is easy to abate it——
Come, my lad, repudiate it!
What the hell!

V.

Had you reached an understanding
On your word?
Payment are they now demanding?
Quick! The bird!
Did you sign when sad and busted?
Do you now feel quite disgusted?
Did they think YOU could be trusted?
How absurd?

VI.

What's a covenant explicit?
Anywhere?
We can say we didn't mean it——
If we dare.
Honor? That's a word that dates us!
Every fellow underrates us,
Only ridicule awaits us
If we're square!

Can You Remember——

Away back when the World War had just come to a close and pictures of German soldiers goose-stepping looked so funny?

Ned Barkley says that just before Earl Browder, the Communist, spoke on the radio recently, an orchestra had played "Red Tales in the Sunset."

There is a horse called Microbe running this spring and we assume the handicappers always give him a bug allowance.

"Germany no longer feels bound by the Locarno treaty."—Hitler. Oh, well, in a case like that just consider it a scrap of paper by all means.

It begins to look as if nothing is so conducive to war as peace terms.

What we can't understand is why the war clouds spreading all over the world today aren't being attributed to a capitalistic plot.

Pied Piper Wanted.

Choice Of Copeland

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

A Juvenile Court Act.

SENATOR ROYAL S. COPELAND introduced a bill in the Senate last week which is destined to stir up considerable controversy before it becomes a law. It is known as the Juvenile Court act, and it would reform the present District system of dealing with juvenile delinquents, which has been in effect without legislative change since 1906.

Yesterday Senator Copeland plumped himself down in a chair in his office in the Capitol, threw a leg over the arm of the chair, and said some things in favor of the bill, which has the backing of many of the District's liberal-minded people.

One of the last bills the Senator from New York got passed concerning District affairs was the one establishing "character education" in the public schools, and everybody knows what that led to, including the little "red" rider. His new bill is destined to evoke floods of oratory both for and against it, just as soon as it gets to that stage where public hearings are in order.

"I've been interested in crime for a good many years," the former yeast-cake salesman said, just as if that were news. "In my capacity as chairman of the Senate Crime Committee I investigated such things as kidnaping, rackets, and all sorts of major crimes. And I came to the conclusion that the greatest social problem was juvenile delinquency. And when I learned that the National Capital was operating its juvenile court under a system 30 years old, I naturally wanted to sponsor a bill for reform."

• • • •

SENATOR COPELAND told me how once in Chicago he visited his first police line-up one midnight. There a great number of alleged criminals were paraded up and down under the glaring lights, and as he sat there in the darkness looking at these victims of society he was impressed by their youth.

"D'ye know," he said, "not one of them was over 25 years old!"

That got him thinking. And his thinking led him, he said, to some facts. And the most startling fact was that the average age of all prisoners in the United States is 23. The next largest age-group is 19, and the next is 18. "That made me pretty sad," he said.

The Senator said he didn't know about conditions in Washington, but he said that from his wide experience they probably were no different here than elsewhere. It was Al Smith who first impressed him with the fact that what was needed to correct the situation was not more law but a more humane administration of the law.

"The idea was not original with him," he told me, "but I give him credit for making me see that all communities need a separate body, with a dignity equal to that of all other courts, to deal with the children who are delinquent.

"I was in Sanford Bates' office once," he said, "and I saw a map. It was stuck with pins by the hundreds. 'What are those pins?' I asked. And he told me that they represented 35,000 county jails that are in existence in this country. And do you know what he called them? 'Those pins mark 35,000 breeding places of crime.'"

• • • •

"This," he said, "is modeled on the best juvenile court setups there are in this country. The kind that wise Judge Baker started in Boston years ago, the kind that wise Judge Lindsey has sponsored and been judge in. A humane court, which takes the child who has 'erred' out of the criminal class, and gives him a chance.

"By this bill, if it were law, environment and background, physical and mental, would be taken into consideration. It would give the kid a break. It would keep him out of jail, and under wise observation, and if necessary in the hands of kindly and trained people."

I asked the Senator if he expected much opposition. A similar bill has been introduced in the House by Representative Mary Norton, of the District Committee.

"Well," he said, smiling sort of grimly, "I was told that a certain group of lawyers would oppose it, although lawyers whom I respect, and some judges, are for it. When I was investigating crime in New York, we had a lot to do with exposing and prosecuting 'ambulance chasers.' I don't suppose Washington is without them. They'll probably oppose it, for there are those who are not above profiting financially from the woes of childhood.

"But I'm going to fight for this bill. I know they'll say it gives the juvenile court judge too much power, and all that. But this system has worked elsewhere, and I'm for it, and I'm going to push it, despite what the 'ambulance chasers' and the shysters may do to stop it.

"I think it's time to bring the District's Juvenile Court up to date, and to put it on a par with the best in the country."

Soviet 'Air Train' Sets World Altitude Mark

Hongkong, March 12 (AP).—The Imperial Airways announced today air mail service would be started this month between Hongkong and Penang, British isle off the west coast of the Malay Peninsula, completing round-the-world service, now operating or planned, except for the 40 miles between Hongkong and Macao, Portuguese island colony south of China.

Chinese press reports said an agreement had been reached between the central Nanking and southern Canton authorities, by which Canton authorized operation of a link of the European air service between Canton and Hanoi, capital of French Indo-China.

Wilmer Dies At Home Here; Eye Specialist

Private Funeral Saturday; Burial in Washington Cathedral Grounds.

Wilmer several years before without charge.

At the time of its establishment the Wilmer Institute was the only institution in the world offering an opportunity for the study of every phase of ophthalmology. Previously American students had been obliged to study abroad. After the institute was opened, European ophthalmologists journeyed to this country to further their studies and research.

Inspired Young Doctors.

In the nine years that Dr. Wilmer served as director of the institute he inspired hundreds of young ophthalmologists with his own interest in research, particularly in the field of aviation eyesight, and treated thousands, both great and lowly. In 1931 he examined King Prajadhipok, of Siam, preliminary to an operation for a cataract on his eye, which later was removed by Dr. John M. Wheeler, of New York.

Among his famous patients were numbered four Presidents, Theodore Roosevelt, McKinley, Harding and Hoover; a number of Cabinet ministers, including Kellogg, McAdoo, Lansing and Mellon, and many foreign statesmen, Viscount Grey of Fallodon, former British Ambassadors James Bryce and Sir Auckland Geddes, former German Ambassador Count von Bernstorff, and Admiral Lord Beatty, the hero of Jutland, who died Wednesday.

Diplomats, kings and statesmen were not the only ones who beat a path to Dr. Wilmer's office. Stars of the baseball, theatrical and literary worlds, captains of finance and the Nation's leading flyers were also treated by the doctor.

"Ty" Cobb, perhaps the greatest of all ball players, was saved from partial blindness by Dr. Wilmer, as was Booth Tarkington.

Dr. Wilmer's interest in the effects on eyesight of aviation dated back to the World War when he was placed in charge of the medical research laboratory of the air service at Mineola, Long Island. There he devised the first standards for testing the eyes of would-be fliers to determine whether they could stand the strain. Subsequently Dr. Wilmer went overseas with the A. E. F. as surgeon in charge of the medical research laboratories.

For this service he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal in May, 1919. In 1924 the French government made him a commander of the Legion of Honor and in 1931 he was commissioned a brigadier general in the American Army Reserve Corps. He also was honored with the Angelo Secchi Academy of Science decoration from Georgetown University and with honorary degrees from Georgetown, Princeton and New York universities.

Born in Virginia.

Born in Powhatan County, Virginia, August 26, 1853, Dr. Wilmer was the the son of Margaret W. and Richard Hooker Wilmer, then Episcopal Bishop of Alabama. He did his preparatory work at the Episcopal High School in Alexandria and received his doctor's degree from the University of Virginia in 1885. He then continued his studies at New York Polyclinic and several Eureopan hospitals, returning to New York City in 1887 as an interne in Mount Sinai Hospital.

In 1889 Dr. Wilmer started practicing in this city, maintaining an office here until 1925, when he went to Johns Hopkins to head the Wilmer Institute. During most of those 36 years he was a professor of ophthalmology at Georgetown University and a surgeon on the staff of the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital.

In October, 1891, he was married to Re Lewis Smith, of Pennsylvania.

In 1911 Dr. Wilmer was made a lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps of the Army, and was a major in the corps when the United States entered the war. At the time of his death he was a brigadier general in the corps.

He served on the board of directors of the National Committee for the Prevention of Blindness, the advisory committee for the Prevention of Hereditary Blindness and several other organizations. He was a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, which he helped found, a member of the American Medical Association, the Washington Academy of Sciences and a number of other medical and scientific organizations. He wrote extensively on ophthalmological topics and medical aviation.

Ardent Churchman.

A devout Episcopalian, Dr. Wilmer was a member of the board of trustees of Washington Cathedral from 1915 to his death. Even when he directed the Wilmer Institute in Baltimore, he would travel to this city for the annual meetings of the church wardens. Only recently he remarked he had missed only one such meeting in the last ten years.

Through him the Cathedral foundation received a gift of several hundred thousand dollars. A grateful patient asked the doctor to name some "good cause" in which he was interested. The doctor replied, "The Cathedral is nearest my heart." This suggestion was followed by one of the largest gifts the cathedral has ever received.

Informed of Dr. Wilmer's death, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, telephoned his condolences from Buffalo, N. Y.

"He was more than a great surgeon," the Bishop said. "He was the exemplar of the best and noblest in citizenship and Christian character. Nothing was closer to him than the Cathedral and its interests. As a great physician he must find sepulchre within its walls, the first honored member of his profession to whom this distinction has been accorded."

Many stories were told of Dr. Wilmer's kindness and popularity among his patients, many of whom he treated without charge. Nurses in the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, in which he performed so many operations, recalled that he always had a cheery word for all members of the staff whenever he visited the hospital.

Georgetown Pays Tribute.

"The untimely death of Dr. Wilmer comes as a severe blow to Georgetown University. He was a true benefactor of humanity and a profound student of scientific research. His work with the human eye led him often to note the marvels of order and purpose in the divine plan of creation, and his own conviction of man's accountability to God manifested itself in a kind and loving disposition that endeared him to all."

When Dr. Wilmer was retired from the Wilmer Institute at Johns Hopkins because the university's rule made retirement at 70 automatic, he was given a farewell banquet at which former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker spoke. On his return to this city he was feted by the Gardner Post of the American Legion at a banquet.

Although truly a citizen of the world, with a reputation that had spread as far as Siam, Dr. Wilmer always regarded Washington as his home. On his retirement from the Wilmer Institute, he told an interviewer:

"Early in life I decided I wanted to live in Washington. I was made flattering offers when I was a young man, the acceptance of which would have involved living in New York. I declined them because I had determined that I wished to live in Washington."

Among the clubs to which he belonged were the Cosmos, Metropolitan and Chevy Chase, of this city; the Colonnade, of the University of Virginia, and the Blue Ridge Country, Maryland, and Elk Ridge Hunt clubs of Baltimore. Almost his sole form of recreation was golf, at which he broke 90.

White House Is Called 'Fire Trap' by Stefan

By the Associated Press.

After looking over the White House with the practiced eye of a volunteer fireman, Representative Karl Stefan warned yesterday that some night the Presidential family may have to flee down fire ladders.

"It's a firetrap," he said. "I saw numerous dusty cubbyholes that would burst into flame the first time a match was dropped in them."

In his home State of Nebraska, Stefan became a member of an old hand-pump crew years ago, and has been a volunteer fireman there ever since.

Supreme Court Gets Last Pleas On Guffey Act

Government, Mine Counsel Conclude Arguments; Justices Silent.

By the Associated Press.

With an assertion that the "issue of Federal power is at stake," Government counsel late yesterday entrusted the New Deal's Guffy soft coal control act to the Supreme Court.

Before the nine justices retired they heard Frederick H. Wood, attorney for mine owners, assert in a brief rebuttal statement that if the Government can regulate coal, "then Congress has been given complete power to control the economic life of the Nation."

Speaking for nearly three hours, John Dickinson, Assistant Attorney General, told the court:

"The time may come, if the Union is to be preserved and the Federal Government is to be competent to deal with subversive forces, when it may have to use other powers which we as American citizens would not want to see used.

"We believe and submit that the Government must be able to meet our national destiny by control over commernce. In our economic life we must have one rule and one law."

During the two days of arguments on the Guffey act intended to provide Federal regulation of prices, wages and hours in the soft-coal industry, the justices remained unusually silent.

Only five routine questions—two yesterday and three Wednesday—were asked by them. When other New Deal legislation has been before the court, they interrupted the attorneys time and again to discuss various legal points.

The Guffey act is the second New Deal case now awaiting decision. Argument on the 1933 securities act was completed Wednesday.

Both may be decided in conference tomorrow, but the opinions probably will not be handed down before April or May.

In addition to Dickinson's speech and Wood's rebuttal, the court heard the conclusion of an address begun Wednesday by Charles Dawson, former Kentucky Federal district judge.

Another capacity crowd was present as Dickinson asserted:

"The Government claims that the provisions of this act relating to labor relations and designed to prevent competitive wage-cutting, are a reasonable and appropriate method of remedying the condition of cut-throat competition from which the industry has been suffering, and which has burdened and obstructed interstate commerce."

Mrs. Blanchard, Wife of Veteran Of 1861, Dies

Married After 2d Battle at Bull Run, She Followed Husband on March.

A romance of the War Between the States was recalled by friends yesterday, as the body of Mrs. Harriett Ann Blanchard was sent to New Orleans, to rest beside that of her husband, Capt. Dawson A. Blanchard, former Confederate soldier.

A girl of 14, she married Capt. Blanchard in 1862, just after the second battle of Bull Run.

Their union caused much comment at the time, because the girl bride, followed him from battle to battle.

Hid Under Tarpaulins.

She was fond of telling her friends of the time she and her husband became separated from the Confederate Army, and became united with their comrades after they hid under tarpaulins in a rowboat, and floated 10 miles down the Mississippi River, near Memphis, Tenn.

Her favorite anecdote was of the burning of Columbia, S. C., when, with her mother-in-law and children, she disguised herself as a nun and forbade the children to speak anything but French.

She offered prayers in French as Gen. Logan, of the Union Army, rode up and demanded an explanation. Her mother-in-law told him the place was a convent, and Logan issued a written order to his soldiers to spare the place.

Several years after the war Blanchard invited Logan to his home in New Orleans, and showed him the paper.

"That was one time a Yankee general was taken in by a Confederate girl," he laughed.

After the war they made their home in New Orleans for several years, and came to Washington in 1885. Capt. Blanchard was a clerk in the Pension Office until 1903, when, because of ill health, he returned to New Orleans. He died there three years later.

Lived With Relatives.

Mrs. Blanchard lived with relatives in that city before returning to Washington in 1907.

In her room was the uniform of her husband, her most cherished posession among many souvenirs of war days. She donned the gray suit three years ago to parade down Constitution avenue. Mrs. Blanchard was an honored guest at all Confederate reunions in the District.

Mrs. Blanchard, whose maiden name was Harriett Talley, was born in Richmond, Va., February 29, 1848.

She is survived by a son, Dawson A. Blanchard, of New Orleans, and two daughters, Mrs. Stella Glaze, of this city, and Mrs. Blanche Williams, of New Orleans. A daughter, Josephine, born at the close of the war, died when 18 months old. A son, John, died at birth, and another, Albert, at the age of 9.

Mrs. Dorr Rites To Be Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Julian Childe Dorr, 37, wife of the United States Consul in Mexico City, who died there March 3, will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. in Arlington National Cemetery. She will be accorded military honors.

Ambassador Josephus Daniels paid tribute to Mrs. Dorr's character and charm last week at funeral services in Mexico City. Mr. Dorr, prostrated with grief, was unable to attend. Nor will he be present at the burial.

Mrs. Dorr, a former Washingtonian, was married to Mr. Dorr, then a newspaperman, here February 25, 1921.

Mrs. K. R. Prindeville Dies at Tucson, Ariz.

Maj. Campbell 'City Defender' In '64, Is Buried

Taps shrilled through the rain-laden air at Fort Stevens yesterday for Maj. Edward R. Campbell, sole known survivor of the Union Army that drove Gen. Jubal Early and his Confederate raiders from the gates of Washington almost 72 years ago.

The 92-year-old veteran, who died of pneumonia at Mount Alto Hospital Tuesday, was buried with full military honors. From rifles more deadly and modern than any of which he and his companions in blue could conceive, a squad of infantry from the Sixteenth Brigade sent three volleys cracking up into leaden skies.

Maj. Campbell was the first veteran to be buried at Fort Stevens since the night after the battle, July 12, 1864. When Gen. Early and his ragged, hungry troops had retreated toward Rockville the defenders of the fort found time to bury the 40 men killed in action in hastily dug graves.

To Maj. Campbell fell the task of assisting in the last rites for his fallen comrades. Then the President of the United States—Abraham Lincoln—issued an order declaring the fort a National Cemetery, where only veterans of the battle might be buried.

But most of the men who had fought there beneath a blazing sun that July day when President Lincoln himself was under fire were Vermont, New York and Pennsylvania residents. And when the war closed they returned to their homes. Not another defender of Fort Stevens was buried on the site of the heroic struggle until yesterday.

Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes might have been buried there after his death last year. But the justice was buried in Arlington, beside his wife.

Brief services for Maj. Campbell were held in the Speare undertaking establishment, 1009 H street, at 2 p. m., and then the funeral procession moved through the downpour to the fort, where the khaki-clad troops awaited in ponchoes.

One detachment lifted the flag-draped casket from the hearse, and another formed the guard of honor. Representatives of the G. A. R., the Sons of Union Veterans and their auxiliaries accompanied Maj. Campbell's daughter, Mrs. A. B. Goodrich, with whom he lived at 30 Elm avenue, Takoma Park, and his granddaughter, Mrs. Marion G. Nevitt.

Dr. James G. Eggleston, of the Sons of Union Veterans, who had talked at the rites at Speare's, also spoke at the grave.

Then came crisp orders from the young officer commanding the firing squad—orders as firm as those which were barked that day so long ago when Gen. Early retreated.

The salute rattled, taps sounded, and Fort Stevens had seen its first—and probably its last — military funeral since the battle that saved Washington from capture.

Durward Smith, 62, Dies in Arlington

Durward Meredith Smith, 62, a resident of Arlington County, Va., for more than 20 years, died yesterday at his home, 3806 Wilson Boulevard.

He was a member of St. George's Episcopal Church, and was active in civic affairs.

Funeral services will be conducted from the Ives chapel at Clarendon, tomorrow at 9 a. m., by the Rev. Henry J. Miller, rector of St. George's Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Thornrose Cemetery, Staunton.

Besides his wife he is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Barbara Bell Cheyney, Washington, M. Meredith Smith and Marjorie Floyd Smith, both of Clarendon.

Sergt. Citriano C. Campagna, 72, reputedly the oldest soldier in the Army, who died Tuesday, was buried yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery.

He was accorded military honors after services in Fort Myer Chapel.

In recent years, Sergt. Campagna was assistant leader of the Third Cavalry Band. He had been in various branches of the military service since 1880.

At the time of his death his home was at 1151 New Jersey avenue northwest. For years he lived at 419 Ninth street southwest, where he annually climbed to the roof Christmas Eve and played carols on his cornet for the entertainment of his neighbors.

He was a native of Genoa, Italy. As a young man he sang in the chorus at Milan.

Some men know—others are discovering why Four Roses is smoother—and always will be

DO YOU KNOW how many kinds of whiskey there are?... Only three: straight whiskey that's unblended; whiskey blended with neutral spirits; and blends of straight whiskies that contain nothing but straight whiskies.

Which kind is best? In our opinion, the last. All our 70 years of experience in making fine whiskey say it is. Moreover, Four Roses, we feel, proves that it is.

For Four Roses is not only a blend of the finest all straight, all American whiskies—every drop made in the United States—but it is, we are confident, the best whiskey in America today, regardless of age, type, or price.

We believe that one taste of Four Roses will prove this to you. And common sense confirms what your palate reveals.

For each and every straight whiskey has its own distinctive character—a certain plus in aroma, smoothness, or flavor. And to combine these merits, you must combine the whiskies.

So, to achieve Four Roses, we blend top-grade American straight whiskies—blend them with the knack handed down through four generations of the same family—blend them in such a way that the special virtues of the separate whiskies are brought out and united. The result is a liquor of matchless smoothness—Four Roses.

But don't just take our word for all this. When you try Four Roses, sip it slowly, the way great whiskey should be sipped. You'll discover what so many men know, and what others are learning—that the noblest whiskey is a blend of all straight, all American whiskies—and its name is Four Roses!

England Asks Spain to Protect Britons in Riots

Appeal Made After Threats to Foreigners; Clashes Spread Over Nation.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 12.—Threats by Extremists in the Province of Huelva against "all foreigners" brought representations by the British Embassy, it was learned tonight, to the Spanish government, requesting protection for English engineers working on the Zafra Railway in Huelva Province.

Tension increased throughout Spain as the disorders which have taken a heavy toll in life and property since the February 16 elections developed into a war of reprisals between Right and Left factions. Nuns and priests continued to flee from convents, and tonight Extremists tried to burn a church in the heart of Madrid.

The government was understood to have informed the British Embassy that British engineers will be protected.

Reprisals Feared.

There were rumors in Madrid of violent reprisals planned by Socialists as a result of the attempted assassination of the noted Socalist criminal attorney, Luis Jiminez Asua, a leader in the Chamber of Deputies.

Bullets intended for him killed his bodyguard. Jiminez was not injured.

Seven men were arrested in connection with the attempted assassination, all of them Fascists. Dolores Primo de Rivera, a cousin of the Fascist chieftain, Jose Antonio Primo de Rivera, and a son of the former dictator of Spain, also was held for a time and then released.

Extremists poured gasoline on the doors and windows of the Salvador Church. Firemen extinguished the blaze, but the Extremists escaped.

Several exchanges of shots occurred between Extremists and police at Granada, and there were clashes between Socialists and Fascists in Madrid.

Rightists Blamed.

The Socialist executive committee, in a manifesto, declared the disorders were "motivated by Rightists, who are bitter over their defeat in the general elections and are seeking to discredit the Leftists," who gained power.

One unconfirmed rumor said several prominent Fascists and Monarchists are marked for death. Another said a general strike is planned for Monday to coincide with the reopening of Parliament, but the General Workers' Union denied a strike is contemplated. A group of Fascists tried unsuccessfully to storm the office of Premier Manuel Azana.

Despite official denials, the new Left government, swept into power in the February 16 elections, was reported to be deeply concerned over the extremes to which the demonstrations have been going and to be preparing energetic measures to bring them to a halt. The disorders have taken a heavy toll in life and property damage.

Tax Exemption Plea Denial Is Forecast

Rejection of the plea of insurance companies for exemption from payment of the unemployment compensation tax on wages of their agents and salesmen in the District was forecast following a meeting of the Unemployment Compensation Commission yesterday.

The insurance companies sought to avoid payment of the tax on the ground their salesmen and agents are independent contractors and not employes within the meaning of the compensation law. Action of the commission is expected at a meeting next week, at which time Elwood Seal, assistant corporation counsel, who has been under consideration for appointment as commission counsel, is to submit a written opinion.

What is to be the status of the commission counsel was not decided by the commission. Two proposals were advanced. One placed the commission counsel under the corporation counsel. The other made him directly responsible to the commission. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen suggested postponement of action, pointing out it was not yet known who would succeed E. Barrett Prettyman, who has resigned as corporation counsel.

Pilot and Riders Alight, Plane Ascends, Crashes

Rouyn, Quebec, March 12 (AP).—Pilot S. L. Hill of General Airways landed his big monoplane at Siscoe Lake, left his motor idling and leaped to the ground.

He watched his passengers alighting—all but one, who had gone through into the pilot's cabin and was emerging from the cockpit.

As the last passenger clambered out he knocked upon the throttle. The motor roared. The plane started off slowly, increased speed as it glided over the snow and then shot upward about 200 feet.

Hill said here today the motor was about the only thing left to salvage.

'Hitler Got There First;' Shaw Doubts a War

Mexico City, March 12 (AP).—The "really important thing" in the European situation, George Bernard Shaw said today, is that Hitler "got into the Rhineland first."

"He had the gumption to see we were not going to fight for the Versailles Treaty," the Irish playwright declared.

He predicted that if France attacks Germany, other signatories to the Locarno Treaty "will be obliged to go in against France."

Shaw, who arrived here on a world tour today, asserted he would make a good president for Mexico. He hurried from his hotel shortly after his arrival, to see a cathedral "before they take the bells away."

enmities between the two nations was senseless."

He drew a colorful picture of the century-old conflict between France and Germany, and expressed his personal opinion that "dispassionate consideration of our mutual interests must lead us to understanding."

Attack on Russia.

"While Russia is not on the German border, still through pacts she has been brought, through a third state, to Germany's frontier," he said, referring apparently to the Franco-Soviet mutual military assistance treaty.

"What the Bolsheviks want is known to us," Hitler shouted. "We have seen that in our own land. Only an unintelligent child burns its fingers twice. We do not need any more experience."

"Developments today," Hitler said, "show that the first egg has been hatched.

"Let us hope the nations will not permit more cuckoo's eggs to be laid in their nests. If I turn against this power (Russia) I do it because I love my people."

He inferred that Soviet Russia was behind the movement to prevent nations from coming to the Olympics "because they don't want the world to see how well Germany is operated."

"Germany desires nothing except to do its work quietly," he asserted. "We do not tell other people what to do. It is a lie to say that national socialism wishes to impose itself on others. For my part I would far prefer to have our national socialism patented for ourselves."

Critics of Germany.

Critics of Nazi Germany have taken the appeal for mutual national equality in a questioning attitude, Hitler declared, asking "is not this too ideal?"

"I say that whatever is based on common sense is real. What I am doing is much more real than what those are doing who approach the problem with hatred.

"'But the man is a Nationalist,' cry the Frenchmen from the other side of the border. Yes, yes, mein Gott! But it lies in the hands of this Nationalist to bring understanding. He is the spokesman for 67,000,000 persons."

The Reichsfuehrer told his audience he would be happy if his "sole monument consisted in historical recognition of my peaceful labors, but I would consider myself a wretch if I did not want to protect this labor. We do not want Germany to be unarmed."

"I think," he added, "there is an incalculable number of Frenchmen who want to live in peace with Germany."

He ended his 78-minute speech with an appeal to voters to support national socialistic policies in the Reichstag election, March 29.

"Then Germany will emerge triumphantly from every test of faith that Almighty God will demand of it, and perhaps even soften the hearts of our neighbors."

Costa Rican President Demands Debts Be Paid

San Jose, Costa Rica, March 12 (AP).—President Jimenez threatened to resign today unless Congress approved payment of the first installment of Costa Rica's foreign debt.

During a heated debate in Congress yesterday some members said the government lacked funds to pay off the debt and urged a short term loan from the National City Bank of New York. President Jimenez objected, saying: "I do not wish to see my signature at the bottom of a decree repudiating our obligations. Should the funds for payment not be authorized, I will leave power."

Nations Watch Fascist Regime In Paraguay

Strict Rule Is Expected in First Totalitarianism Test in America.

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, March 12.—Paraguay's old-fashioned dictatorship with modern totalitarian trimmings adopted from the Hitler and Mussolini models was being watched closely throughout South America tonight.

The new governmental system, announced yesterday by the regime of Col. Rafael Franco—provisional president since President Eusebio Ayala was overthrown in February—is the first totalitarian experiment on American soil.

Its success or failure, and whether the government really follows its announced aims, may mean much to the embryo Fascist movements existing in several South American nations.

Government Arbiter.

The government announced it will be the supreme arbiter of social, political and labor activities.

The character of the decree, following the previous declarations of Col. Franco and the members of his government, caused observers to believe the regime plans a close-fisted dictatorship with sweeping internal economic revisions, fulfillment of the existing peace pacts between Paraguay and Bolivia, recent Chaco war combatants, and continuation of the prevailing foreign policy.

The nationalistic tendencies of the Franco regime and its announced intention of placing regulations on foreign capital were being closely watched in other nations, especially Argentina.

Interests Important.

That nation has important interests in Paraguayan cattle, shipping and quebracho (a wood which is the source of tannin).

Italians own the Asuncion Light Co. in Paraguay's capital, and Americans have a big meat-canning plant, but North American and European investments are in general unimportant in Paraguay.

The avowed intention of the Franco military regime—which overthrew Ayala as the result of the Chaco war veterans' dissatisfaction with post-war conditions—is to work out some kind of a land-distribution program, reorganize Paraguay's finances, rebuild the shattered Paraguayan peso, build up farm production, elevate living standards, improve the educational system and give aid to 40,000 war veterans.

Belgium Moves to Add To Its Border Forces

Brussels, March 12 (U.P.).—The parliamentary military commission and the defense ministry today ordered daily sessions to consider the problem of increasing Belgium's 63,000 frontier troops.

The conferees also will discuss prolonging the service periods of younger conscripts.

Gun Practice Causes Mets Frontier Panic

Metz, France, March 12 (AP).—The booming of artillery at practice on a nearby range sent the residents of this frontier city into a panic today.

Police stations and newspapers were besieged with telephone inquiries. Officials quieted the people with the explanation of the practice shooting.

Residents of the frontier region are particularly nervous since a German observation plane made a 10-minute flight over Sarraguemines early today. The plane flew low over the city, before heading back to the Rhineland.

Rhine Army Stays, Declares Goering

Koenigsberg, March 12 (U.P.).—German troops will remain on the Rhine and they are strong enough to resist any attack, Gen. Herman Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier and air minister, thundered tonight.

Here for his first visit since the Nazi ascent to power and to open the Reichstag election campaign, Goering shouted to 25,000 cheering Nazis:

"German soldiers will remain standing where they are today.

"The Rhineland occupation is a fact not to be disputed.

"A militray tramp to Berlin no longer is possible—either on the land or through the air.

"We are strong enough to resist successfully every attack by land and the soldiers of the air are steeled by the spirit of Richthofen (Germany's famous World War ace)."

Senate Favors Rehiring Of AAA Ex-Employes

The Senate late yesterday adopted a resolution introduced by Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to retain all AAA employes now on the rolls and to re-employ all those furloughed since the act was declared unconstitutional who will be needed to administer the new farm control program.

This resolution will affect 5,700 now on the rolls and 640 employes who have been furloughed.

Mexicans Vacate Land Seized From Mormons

El Paso, Tex., March 12 (AP).—Armed agrarians who seized approximately 1,000 acres of fertile Juarez Valley land two days ago vacated the property today on orders from Mexico City, Bishop A. L. Pierce, of the Church of Jesus Christ Latter Day Saints, said tonight.

Property owned by C. D. Pierce, brother of Bishop Pierce, and other members of the church, was included in the area seized.

any limitation of her sovereignty in the Rhineland, but promised not to increase the strength of certain garrisons or to move troops closer to the French and Belgian borders.

Hitler, meeting the British appeal about half-way, also appended it with a blunt indication that France and Belgium would have to take simila steps in order not to menace Germany.

Italy, cast into a strange role by the situation because of sanctions against her, was represented solely by Dino Grandi, the Italian Ambassador to London, who apparently was most passive during the talks.

The talks were continued informally tonight at a dinner given by Eden, which seven Frenchmen, six Belgians and 13 Britons attended.

Details of what occurred when Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin, of France; Premier Paul van Zeeland, of Belgium, and Grandi met Eden and Viscount Halifax, British Lord Privy Seal, alone, were not disclosed, except that they found Germany guilty and the French emphasized their original adamant position that Hitler must withdraw all his troops from the Rhineland.

There was no indication that the British are withdrawing from their position that Hitler is entitled to a hearing. This withdrawal may come swiftly, however, if Hitler's answer to Eden is his last word.

It was authoritatively stated the British position of tryins to follow the middle road and avoid action which might culminate in war becomes almost impossible unless Germany co-operates and accepts Eden's suggestions.

British cabinet ministers were understood as prepared to re-survey the situation tonight and tomorrow before the 11:30 a. m. Locarno conference is resumed in order to decide whether again to appeal to Hitler or to make the best of the present admittedly desperate situation.

Late tonight there was talk of appointment of a special League of Nations committee to examine the problem. Delegates from Denmark, Portugal, Spain, Turkey and South America were tentatively suggested as likely to form such a committee, the sessions of which probably would last a week.

Significance was attached by informed persons to the fact that the British foreign office communicated to the French, Belgian and Italian representatives here Germany's reply to Britain's appeal for some conciliatory move by Hitler.

The action was seen as an indication that Eden was acting in concert with the other Locarno powers, although they apparently had not agreed upon what action should be taken toward Germany.

Italians Launch New Offensive On South Front

'Hell on Wheels' Columns Push Toward Last Big Defending Army.

By the United Press.

Rome, March 12.—Gen. Rodolpho Graziani, commander of Italian forces in southern Ethiopia, tonight started his "hell on wheels" columns on a major offensive against the last of Emperor Haile Selassie's organized armies.

Dispatches from Mogadiscio, Italian Somaliland, reported that Graziani, Italy's foremost colonial campaigner, has started a big push against all enemy strongholds in the south.

The Italians are expected to attempt capture of Jijiga and Harar, where the Dajazmatch Nasibu, Governor of Harar, and Haile Selassie's most trusted lieutenant, has concentrated 150,000 of Ethiopia's finest warriors. Heavy fighting is anticipated.

Nasibu is supported by a crack staff of Belgian military advisers and such outstanding aids as Marshal Wahib Pasha, Turkish hero of the World War Dardanelles campaign.

While the main columns push to Ethiopian strong points at Daggah Burrh, Jijiga and Harar, Graziani's operations on the remainder of the Somaliland front will assume the nature of demonstrations to keep reinforcements from rushing to the most endangered positions.

Rome, March 12 (AP).—The Italian Senate opened a new session today and exuberantly proclaimed African victories in the presence of Premier Mussolini.

British Group Urges Boycott on Olympics

London, March 12 (AP).—The National Workers Sports Association today drafted a resolution calling on the British Amateur Athletic Association to boycott the summer Olympic games in Berlin. The B. A. A. A. will conduct its annual meeting here March 21.

"This annual general meeting of the A. A. A.," the proposed resolution reads, "is of the opinion that the spirit which prompted the organization of the Olympic games can not be forwarded by participation in the 1936 Olympics in Berlin and instructs the association to withdraw support and withhold permission from any members making application to compete."

Withdrawals at Banks In Alsace Area Curbed

Strasbourg, France, March 12 (AP).—Directors of the Strasbourg Savings Bank decided tonight to limit withdrawals to 5,000 francs every 15 days for each depositor in Alsace and Lorraine.

Long lines of persons wishing to remove funds formed at banks this afternoon, continuing to exhibit the nervousness they had shown since Germany's remilitarization of the Rhineland zone, neighboring this section of France. There was only a slight slackening in withdrawals this morning.

French Charge Hitler Invokes 'Jungle Law'

London, March 12 (AP).—"A return to the law of the jungle" was the way in which one authoritative French source here described today Germany's denunciation of the Locarno treaty.

"Hitler might try to do what he has done to Kaffir tribes," he said, "but never to France.

"What is more, Great Britain, as much as France, is interested in putting a stop to Hitler's madness right now, before he walks into Austria, Memel, and Pomorze (the Polish corridor)."

Judge, Demoted, Says Threat Preceded Shift

Los Angeles, March 12 (AP).—A Superior Court judge declared today his transfer from the criminal to the civil bench followed an anonymous threat to "yank" him unless he gave Busby Berkeley, dance director, a "break" in the latter's murder trial.

Judge Charles S. Burnell, who presided at Berkeley's second-degree murder trial last December, disclosed the threat in letters to 49 other judges.

Berkeley's trial, which grew out of an automobile accident in which three persons were killed, ended in a jury disagreement. It was reset for April 6 before Judge Burnell.

But the judge since has been transferred to the civil division.

3 Leave Civilization On Mount Everest Climb

Kalimpong, Bengal, India, March 12 (AP).—The three-man advance guard of the expedition planning the ascent of Mount Everest left the last outpost of civilization today en route to the world's highest mountain. The summit of Mount Everest, 29,141 feet high, has never been scaled by humans.

The three were F. S. Smythe, who climbed 28,100 feet to the highest point ever reached in 1933, and is now going on his fourth expedition to Mount Everest; Lieut. J. M. L. Gavin, of the royal engineers, an experienced Alpine climber, who is making his first trip to the Himalayas, and Lieut. P. R. Oliver, of the South Waziristan Scouts, another Alpine climber who led a small expedition to the Himalayas in 1933.

Supreme Court Allows Division Of Falls Church

Affirms McCarthy Ruling That Arlington Part May Withdraw.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 800. Clarendon, Va.

The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals yesterday handed down a decision affirming the judgment of the Circuit Court of Arlington County which authorized that portion of the Town of Falls Church lying within Arlington County, known as East Falls Church, to withdraw from the incorporated town.

The suit, in the name of J. B. Gould and others, against L. P. Daniel and others, was filed in the Circuit Court of Arlington County on July 7, 1932.

The case has been vigorously contested by town officials and has been the subject of numerous hearings before the court in Arlington County for nearly four years.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy handed down his decision permitting the citizens to withdraw about a year ago and the Town of Falls Church noted an appeal. The case was argued before the supreme court of appeals early in January, having been advanced on the docket.

Arlington County, a party to the suit, joined with the citizens who desired to withdraw from the town.

The decree entered by Judge McCarthy on January 17, 1935, and affirmed by the supreme court of appeals, provides that Arlington County shall pay 29.6 per cent of the amount of principal and interest due on outstanding school bonds and 18 per cent of the water bonds.

The decree further provides all white children living in East Falls Church, of school age, shall have the right to attend the public schools of the Town of Falls Church without cost until July 1, 1937. The colored children will attend colored schools in Arlington County.

The records in the case show that the portion withdrawing represents approximately 25 per cent of the population and area of Falls Church, 30 per cent of the taxable values and 60 per cent of the stores and business firms.

The estimated population of the town is 2,121, of which 1,598 are in the Fairfax County section, while the remaining 525 are in the Arlington County area.

Attorney John S. Barbour, of Fairfax, appeared in the case in the interest of the Town of Falls Church; Thomas W. Philips, of Arlington County, for the petitioners, and Lawrence W. Douglas.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Buckhannon, W. Va., March 12.—The board of trustees of West Virginia Wesleyan College, in session this week, voted to extend an invitation to Dr. Wallace B. Fleming, president of Baker University in Kansas and a former president of the college here, to return September 1, 1937, as Wesleyan's vice president.

If he accepts, Dr. Fleming will also have charge of financial solicitations for the semicentennial of the institution from 1938 to 1940. He has been president of Baker University since leaving Wesleyan in 1923, but recently tendered his resignation there.

U. S. to Aid No More Subsistence Gardens

Winchester, Va., March 12.—Subsistence gardens are an institution of the past, so far as the WPA in Winchester and Frederick County is concerned, it appeared today after an announcement that no such project is contemplated this season.

For two years, subsistence gardens were operated successfully by many persons on relief, the Government providing the seed and supervision. City officials said today that a city farm probably will be operated to take care of demands for food during the winter months.

Water Drains Burst.

Hagerstown, Md., March 12.—Apparently weakened during the subzero weather of a month ago, two large water mains in the downtown section burst last night, flooding several streets. Gloria Swanson, when giving a party, often amuses her guests by showing one of her earlier flickers . . . The big attraction at Katharine Hepburn's house, besides Hepburn, is the hugh playroom with all types of games and slot machines . . . Clifford Odets is still working on his scenario, and claims he likes Hollywood. He hasn't said a harsh word, yet . . . On the set of "Romeo and Juliet," two female fashion writers desire to look at Leslie Howard's costume . . . "All we want you to take off is your cape," they tell Howard . . . "That's all I can take off for you ladies," answers Leslie.

Fredric March is a great mimic. And when you get him to do his impressions of some of the movie stars, you're seeing one of the best shows . . . At the preview of Jolson's flicker, "The Singing Kid," Al calls to Jack Warner in the lobby and says: "Come on in. I'm ready to look at it" . . . Harold Arlen phoned the studio for tickets for the preview . . . "Who are you?" he was asked . . . "Harold Arlen," he answered . . . "And who's Harold Arlen?" . . . An executive standing in the lobby passed him in . . . Harold Arlen only wrote the entire score of the picture—which is great.

For example, Freddie Bartholomew in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and Mary Pickford in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" . . . It's fun doing it in a projection room. It should be fun in a theater.

Said Shirley: "I think children are cute on the screen."

He will pick up his writings, look at the colors, and decide that he hasn't given the villain enough to do . . . Vincent Lawrence, the playwright, prefers to write in bed with all his clothes off. And he doesn't put more than four lines of dialogue on a page.

"And besides that," said Sam, "he never opens his mouth."

Fred Astaire Salary Fight Still Deadlocked

Hollywood, Calif., March 12 (AP).—After a full day of haggling over salary terms of a new contract for Fred Astaire, dancer-actor, RKO-Radio executives said tonight they were still deadlocked.

Astaire, a New York newspaper reporter, refused an offer of $1,000,000 for four pictures.

He declined to discuss the case, beyond issuing a statement that "a new contract is being negotiated." Studio heads also were silent.

15 'Problems' Left Unsolved By Assembly

Virginia Group to Analyze Old-Age Pension Question for 1938 Legislature.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, March 12.—Some 15 major State problems will be inherited from the General Assembly, which left them unsolved, by the Governor's legislative advisory council and several special commissions.

One of the latter groups will analyze the old-age pension question and submit recommendations to the 1938 Legislature. Other matters to be given similar attention include probation, parole and indeterminate sentences; revision of the laws relating to delinquent land taxes, and redistricting House and Senate districts.

A mandatory probation bill was passed by the House, but met death in the Senate.

The council, operated heretofore on a grant from the Spelman Fund, will be continued with a $30,000 State appropriation. The council has obtained legislative approval of five of its eight major proposals. The banking code, the trial justice bill and highway safety recommendations were enacted with few changes, and suggestions for revising criminal procedure and the alcoholic beverage control act were carried out in most respects.

The commission on judicial redistricting failed to submit a report and was abolished, and the continuing commission on county government had its $3,000 appropriation eliminated from the budget.

Recommendations of the Rogers commission as to changes in State highway policies were rejected by the Assembly.

Among subjects slated for study in the next two years are salary equalization among State employes, reforms in the jail system, highway safety, automobile taxation, additional State library facilities, changes in the alcoholic beverage control system, possibly further reorganization of State and county government, and continuation of the study of State insurance laws.

Henry Waples, Central Figure In Ross Kidnap Mystery, Is 80

Henry R. Waples, a central figure in the investigation of the Charlie Ross kidnaping case in 1872, will observe his eightieth birthday tomorrow at his home, 1006 Grace Church road, Silver Spring, Md.

Waples has lived with his son, Henry H. Waples, for the past five years. He was a shipbuilder, and during the World War was chief inspector for the United States Shipping Board at Newark, N. J., supervising the launchings of 150 ships.

Memories of the Charlie Ross case were recalled as he showed reporters photographs of the shipyard.

On his way home from the shipyards at Philadelphia, where he then was employed, Waples found Walter Ross, 6, crying outside a candy store the afternoon of July 1, 1872. He stopped to aid the child.

"He told me that he and his brother, Charles, 4, were in a wagon with two men, who had told the children they were their uncles," Waples said. "The men gave Walter 15 cents to go to the candy store, but drove away with Charles and did not wait for the other child."

Walter told him his father was Christian K. Ross, and lived on Chelton avenue, near Germantown road. Police took the boy home, and later the father went to Waples for information.

Police later learned when the men let Walter Ross out of the wagon they then crossed the ferry to Cooper's Point, N. J., driving off in the direction of Trenton. That was the last definite trace of Charlie Ross, despite a Nation-wide search.

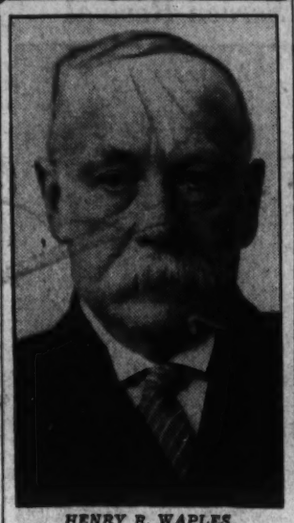
"I located several men who saw the team drive off the ferry boat, and head for Trenton," Waples said.

In the fall of the same year, two men were shot while attempting to rob a house in Long Island. One of them gasped:

"Charlie Ross is—" and died.

Waples said he was thoroughly convinced from their description that they were the abductors.

He was born in the shipyard section of Philadelphia March 14, 1856. Several of his ancestors were seamen in the days of sailing vessels.



HENRY R. WAPLES.

Brother of Judge Better After Crash

Hagerstown, Md., March 12 (AP).—John E. Wagaman, brother of Judge Frank G. Wagaman, of circuit court, was recovering tonight from injuries suffered in a collision of his automobile with a Baltimore & Ohio Railroad train at Balls Station near here.

Wagaman was hurled down an embankment in the car after it was struck by the railroad engine earlier in the day. The machine was badly damaged.

The injured man was taken to Keedysville on the train and given medical treatment. He was removed later to the Washington County Hospital here. He suffered a severe scalp wound and minor injuries.

Wagaman is a prominent Hagerstown attorney.

Course in German Sought at School

Teaching of German in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Senior High School will be requested of the board of education of Montgomery County, according to a resolution adopted at a meeting of the newly organized Parent-Teacher Association Wednesday night. This action was considered desirable on the ground that a reading knowledge of German is helpful in the study of science.

William H. Bristow, general secretary of the National Education Association, led in a panel discussion of suggested questions of interest to the community, including the question of the old-fashioned report cards as against the new methods of grading pupils and also the need of home work and the part that parents should have in such home work. Assisting in the panel were, for parents, Mrs. Wayne Bradley, Everett Greer and W. B. Stephens, and for the teachers Miss Lenore Aiken, Miss Edna Goodwin and Loris Williams. Mrs. Florence Black gave a talk on the "Social Personality Period"—teaching pupils how to live.

National Capital Hereafter Will Be Considered a Two-Week Stand for Top Hits

Variety States Managers' View In Long Report

By Nelson B. Bell.

It seems to have taken the sell-out, nine-performance engagement of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in Robert E. Sherwood's new play of "Idiot's Delight," the current attraction at the National Theater, to convince the New York producers that Mr. Stephen E. Cochran, manager of the National, this column and the others who have been bearing down on the subject for the past several years are not as crazy as we may have seemed.

No more than a week or so ago, this space enlisted the bitter animosity of the Broadway managers and bookers by suggesting that if they could not perceive the truth of the statement that Washington is the best "show town" in America, outside of New York, from their own weekly box-office reports, then they ought to be operating concessions down at Coney Island instead of dabbling in "big-time" theater. Those were strong words, but the facts seem to have borne them out.

Must Use Judgment.

There has never been any contention that every touring attraction routed out of New York is entitled to a two-week booking in the National Capital. But it has been the consistent argument of this department that every season there come along from two to half dozen touring productions of such known merit as to justify their being booked here for a fortnight rather than a single week.

When a play sells out completely for a week, before the box-office has been open 36 hours, it is a reasonable assumption that a second week would be profitable. Heretofore, the moguls have ignored any such indication of local theater interest and, more important, buying power per capita of population.

Now they seem to have reversed themselves. Yesterday's issue of Variety, the hand journal of the theatrical profession, devoted a column to the announcement that henceforth, for certain stars and attractions, Washington will be looked upon as a two-week stand.

We have gone into the details of the situation and have outlined the views of this column in the matter so often that we do not intend now to repeat the arguments to which the powers-that-be seem at last to have capitulated. I will only go so far as to say that it will be a satisfaction to the National management, if Variety reports the New York managerial attitude accurately, not to be compelled to return an average week's ticket sale in unfillable mail orders every time a really Grade A touring attraction puts in an appearance.

Old Order Changeth.

It is important to observe, in this connection, that since the depression set its devastating clutch upon the family purse in 1929, the ticket purchasing power of the local theatergoer demonstrates itself in slightly altered fashion.

In the old days, it was customary for the orchestra to sell out and the "top of the house," meaning the balconies, to be only partially filled. Now exactly the reverse is true.

The balconies are the first to sell out and whatever vacancies remain are in the orchestra, representing the highest scaled prices.

The average of gross receipts remains about the same.

But when the entire house sells out, even down to the last inch of standing room, that is something else again.

It is, at least, an encouraging sign that the Broadway powers have been fit to give Washington sufficient consideration as a real "show town" to give Variety a news basis for its current report with regard to Washington's future.

Members of the Variety Club of Washington, Tent No. 11 in the national organization, are girding themselves against the coming of Saturday night. On Saturday night, members and their wives—or "nearest of kin"—will formally dedicate the club's newly rebuilt quarters, and newly installed cocktail lounge in the Willard Hotel. Pete Macias and his Orchestra will furnish music for dancing and the Social Activities Committee, under the chairmanship of A. Julian Brylawski, will spread a buffet supper in compliment to the guests.

Variety's second function for the immediate future will be the St. Patrick Day luncheon in the Willard next Monday at 1 p. m., under the auspices of the local Warner Brothers organization, headed by Zone Manager John J. Payette, Harry Lohmeyer, Guy Wonders, George Crouch, Nat Glasser, Julian Brylawski, William C. "Bill" Ewing, Dan Terrell and the other Warnerites connected with the offices in the Earle Theater Building.

June Arrives in March!

June Knight, who begins a week of personal appearances on the stage of the Earle Theater today, is a level-headed and shrewd young woman.

This was borne in upon me during a long and frequently interrupted conversation during the course of the cocktail party that was flung in her honor in Suite 536 in the Hotel Carlton by Zone Manager John J. Payette and his associate Warner executives yesterday afternoon between the hours of 3 and 6. Not only did Miss Knight disclose a sound philosophy with regard to how best to handle "fans" who make themselves obnoxious by the insistence of their devotion; how to settle spurious claims for plagiarism, theft and whatnot, lodged by an especially pernicious type of "shake-down" artist, but in almost the identical words used by the late Will Rogers to this writer a dozen or more years ago in expressing the same ambition, she voiced a hope that her time might be equally divided between stage and screen in order that her artistry might be improved by the comment and suggestion of the theater's complete audience.

At the moment, Miss Knight is undecided as to her immediate future. She is under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for films and has just closed with the Moss Hart-Cole Porter production of "Jubilee" in New York. It is characteristic of the gifted young dancer's impetuous, but instinctively right, way of doing things that she should launch a week of personal appearances at the Earle less than a week after the closing of "Jubilee." "Jubilee" closed last Saturday night; June Knight opens on Thirteenth street today. For the time being, the Earle is her only booking.

Takes Philosophical View.

"We'll see what happens here," she says, "and then proceed accordingly. This act I am going to do, I have put together since 'Jubilee' closed last Saturday night. The photographers caught me this morning while I was rehearsing in working pajamas and I had to knock off long enough to be snapped in all sorts of poses—by the piano, in the elevator, signing autographs; in my drawing-room and everywhere else, it seemed to me, except the furnace room! It was fun, at that, but it sort of cut into my rehearsal."

If the act goes well here, it may be booked over a slightly longer route than the single Earle week, although one gathers that what June really wants to do is fly out to the Coast and see what is going on on the M-G-M lot, even if they haven't a picture for her at the moment. Her contract contains a clause to the effect that when she is not in demand in the studio she may play stage dates to her heart's content.

June Knight, although not precisely as she appears on either stage or screen, is a striking and vivacious young artiste. The reason she is not, in persona propria, precisely as she appears in her public performances, is because on both stage and screen she always is a platinum blonde of purest silver ray serene. As a matter of fact, her hair is a medium shade of brown. In view of her smile, you might never notice her hair.

Will Revive Hits.

Slightly over medium height, svelte and graceful, Miss Knight yesterday afternoon—stop me, you ladies who were present, if I am wrong—wore a stunning midnight-blue, velvet gown of floor length, with silver-entwined cord belt with long blue tassels of a lighter shade—a perfect combination to accentuate her blonde beauty, especially when set off by square-cut diamond earrings, ring and throat clip. And now, if you don't mind, we will get out of the ladies' fashion department and back into the theater!

In her act today, June will revive bits of songs and dances in which she already has appeared in both M-G-M's "Broadway Melody of 1936" and in "Jubilee."

Her enthusiasm over it, leads one to suspect that the "Beguin," a new dance creation that reflects the combined creative talents of her dancing partner in "Jubilee," Albertina Rasch, the De Marcos and herself, will be the piece de resistance of her offering. As I recall it, it is pronounced "Bay-geen," with the accent on the second syllable. Her principal song number will consist of a specially arranged medley, and, I judge a tricky one, of the most popular songs from "Broadway Melody."

Miss Knight seemed considerably impressed and amused by the competitive implications of the name of her accompanist, which happens to be Earle Fox. That name falls with complete familiarity upon the ears of those who remember the slightly gangling leading man who served a season or two for George Marshall and Monta Bell at the old Garrick Theater, at Seventh and F streets. Remember Earle Foxe?

Whether you do or not, you won't forget June Knight.

Resignation of one assistant manager and promotion of three others in his division, bringing a new face to Loew's Columbia Theater in this city, has been announced by Division Manager Carter T. Barron of Loew's, Inc. Brock Whitlock, assistant to Manager Frank Taylor, of the Columbia for the past year, is being promoted to a similar position with the Loew Theater in Richmond, where he began as an usher several years ago. Succeeding him at the Columbia will be J. Fox, who comes to Washington from the Parkway Theater in Baltimore. His position at the Parkway will be filled by Maurice Druker, chief of service at the Century in Baltimore, whose place, in turn, will be filled by William Webb. The shifts were occasioned by the resignation of Reginald Cherry, former assistant to Manager Fred Greenway of the Century. That post will go to Irving Martin, moved up from Richmond. "Time marches on," no kidding.

"Fauntleroy" Is 50.

Elaborate ceremonies will be conducted on Saturday at noon to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the writing of the story of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and permanently to mark the site on which this classic was conceived.

It was exactly 50 years ago that Frances Hodgson Burnett wrote "Little Lord Fauntleroy" in her home at 1219 I street northwest, in this city. The house still stands.

In the presence of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools; Hon. John S. McGroarty, poet laureate of California and Representative in Congress from that State, noted guests and several hundred school children, a special bronze tablet will be placed upon this birthplace of a greatly beloved story that has endured through half a century.

Presented by Producer.

The tablet comes as a gift from David O. Selznick, motion-picture producer, who has just completed a new screen version of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," starring Freddie Bartholomew and restoring Dolores Costello to an active place in pictures. Mr. Selznick's local representative, Denis Morrison, will present the tablet to the Lord Fauntleroy Literary Society, under whose direction it will be placed as an identifying mark upon the I street house.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador; Speaker of the House James W. Byrns and Vice President John Nance Garner are among the guests invited to attend the ceremonies.

Music will be furnished by the Cadet Band of the Washington public schools, and a large chorus of school children. A pageant directed by Marie Walcott also will be presented. W. P. Kennedy, local writer, will officiate as master of ceremonies.

It is expected that Reginald Birch, the 80-year-old artist, who illustrated the original Burnett volume, will arrive from New York to take part in the exercises.

Meteorological Note.

It was almost a sure bet that it would stop raining—sometime. It always has!

Star in Belasco Screen Revival

In United Artists' picturization of Sinclair Lewis' novel of "Arrowsmith," the principal roles are played by Ronald Colman, Helen Hayes and Myrna Loy. This scene from the picture, which was revived yesterday to serve as chief feature of the bill at the Belasco Theater, shows Mr. Colman and Miss Loy in one of the gentler intervals of a story that leads into melodramatic developments in the fever-stricken jungles of the tropics.

Belasco

"ARROWSMITH." United Artists picturization of the novel by Sinclair Lewis, adapted to the screen by Sidney Howard, starring Ronald Colman, with Helen Hayes and Myrna Loy, supported by Richard Bennett, A. E. Anson, James Marcus, DeWitt Jennings, Beulah Bondi, Bert Roach, David Landau, Russell Hopton, the late Alec B. Francis and Claude King. Directed by John Ford. Reviewed (revival) Thursday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

The vicissitudes of the life of a medical man do not constitute an unknown topic for screen consideration, nor are the trials of research scientists too rare subjects of motion picture activity. Throughout the roster of such pictures three stand out as most completely attesting the true spirit and aims of scientific endeavor — "Arrowsmith," released in the fall of 1931; "Nagana," issued early in 1933, and "The Story of Louis Pasteur," of current vintage.

It would be hard to evaluate these three works, yet there is no gainsaying that in "Arrowsmith," which late Wednesday evening became, locally, a current attraction, there are those qualities which set it apart from others of its ilk. Sinclair Lewis, in writing the novel, penned a story of scientific accuracy, expostulating truly on the aims and efforts of scientists working in essential, if little understood, fields.

That same story of struggle toward an ideal, whose consummation is thwarted by the intrusion of a dollars-and-cents appraisal on invaluable service, is honestly transferred to the screen, and through the persons and personalities of Ronald Colman, Helen Hayes, Myrna Loy and a company of master actors, the story and its situations live in actuality rather than as imaginings without tangible basis.

Portrayals Are Realistic.

Mr. Colman is Dr. Martin Arrowsmith. So, too, is A. E. Anson the elderly Prof. Gottlieb, Helen Hayes the self-sacrificing Leora, Russell Hopton the other revolting researcher. Indeed, there is no character in the register which does not become a dynamic entity through the delineation presented by the particular actor.

One already knows how Martin Arrowsmith was spurred by the family physician to scientific endeavor, how he attracted the attention of a great medical center through his work on vaccines as a country practitioner, how he discovered the bacteriophage only to find a prior report of the same thing, how he battled the bubonic plague in order to test the validity of his theories—all this, and more, is common knowledge. Common, too, is the knowledge and appreciation of the picture version of all this, so much so that this engagement, "by popular demand," bespeaks far greater praise than we can express in words.

"Swiss on White" is a delightful study of winter sports in St. Moritz, with Don Beddoe describing such activities as figure skating (by various national champions), hockey, bobsledding and skiing. Ancient Rome in Africa" is just that, a travelogue of Roman remains in the Dark Continent. A release of the Pathe News rounds out the program.

Drama Guild

"THE HIGH ROAD." The Drama Guild of Washington presents the comedy in three acts by Frederick Lonsdale, directed by Sylvia Lane, with settings designed by C. David Persina. At Pierce Hall March 11, 12 and 13. Reviewed Wednesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

The most difficult task to which Washington's commendable semi-professional actors set themselves would seem to be the production of a typical English drawing room comedy, with its plethora of words and relative scarcity of action. So it was with the Drama Guild on Wednesday evening when Frederic Lonsdale's "The High Road" was presented at Pierce Hall.

It seemed as though the text for the evening should have been the closing speech of "Grand Hotel"—"People come and people go, but nothing ever happens." This would have been particularly pat, for the play actually closes on the same situation upon which it opens.

Between these termini, however, Author Lonsdale wrote some excellent comedy-drama, but from a reading far from letter perfect and a slowness of direction, the inherent sparkle and zest of the comedy were lost.

The roster of players for this third Guild production is excellent. Maurice Jarvis was the father whose opinion on actresses as daughters-in-law was reversed, although it finally did not matter. Ralph H. Thayer, as a dignified Englishman, inflicted with a particularly staid wife (Edith Drake), was good in his "inebriated" moments, and Toni Sorel, as the actress in question, was the cast's most charming adornment.

Prince Georges Bloc to Submit Local Projects

Decision to Push Bills at Special Session Made by Delegation.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., March 12.—Several local bills of an important nature will be introduced in the General Assembly next week by the Prince Georges County delegation at the urgent request of various groups in the county, it was decided at a caucus of the legislators today.

The action reverses to some extent the decison reached by the county delegation on the opening day of the special session, when it was voted to introduce only local bills falling in the "relief" category.

Foremost among the bills scheduled to be introduced next week are three proposed town charter acts. Communities, which have requested the Legislature for authority to hold referendums on proposed incorporation, are District Heights, University Park and Berwyn. Sponsors of these measures claim nearly unanimous support in University Park and District Heights, while in Berwyn it is expected that a close fight may develop. Several years ago a referendum to incorporate Berwyn failed of passage by a narrow margin.

Two bills are to be introduced at the request of the Riverdale Mayor and council. The first, which is not expected to arouse controversy, provides authority for the town officials to improve Maryland avenue on the east side of the railroad from Madison avenue to Jefferson avenue, and on the west side from Lincoln avenue to Washington avenue. The cost will be assessed against owners of the abutting property, half of which is owned by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the Capital Transit Co.

Another measure backed by the Riverdale authorities is one which would extend the town line between Riverdale and Hyattsville.

A bill urged for prompt enactment by the Hyattsville mayor and council is that amending the present town road law so as to permit maintenance and repair of streets without the necessity of advertisement for bids on the work.

The delegation will introduce another bill authorizing a referendum in Colmar Manor on the question of the town issuing bonds in an amount up to 8 per cent of the total assessed property valuation, or about $93,000. The present statute limits the town's borrowing power to $80,000. Last session the Legislature authorized a referendum on this matter which was defeated.

Another measure, which would permit the levy of a tax in Laurel for maintenance of the local volunteer fire department, is likely to be placed in the legislative hopper.

Riverdale Step Settles Dispute Over Boundary

Hyattsville Proposal to Move Line Accepted; 24 Families Affected.

About 24 families were moved from Hyattsville, Md., to the adjoining town of Riverdale last night by action of the Riverdale Town Council ending a long and somewhat bitter boundary dispute between the two communities.

The council voted to move the Riverdale boundary far enough into Hyattsville to embrace 31 lots and 2 dozen families who for a number of years have been living in Hyattsville, while Calvert street in front of their homes belonged to, and was maintained by, the Town of Riverdale.

By its action the council took steps to require the families to pay taxes to the Riverdale treasury for the use of street, light and water facilities they have been utilizing without charge as residents of Hyattsville.

Some years ago the boundary between the towns was laid out so that Calvert street would be in Riverdale, while lots on the west side of the roadway remained in Hyattsville. As the communities developed, Riverdale found itself forced to pay for street maintenance and other charges with only half the usual number of abutting property owners to pay for them.

A dispute developed which became more bitter as the community development progressed. The Hyattsville Council took the first positive step toward settlement. At a special meeting several days ago 8 of the 15 members of the council voted to move the boundary back of the lots on the west side of Calvert street.

The action of the Riverdale Council last night accepted this settlement.

Members of the Riverdale Council will go to Annapolis in a few days to ask the Prince Georges County delegation to the State Legislature to support a law ratifying the agreement on the new boundary. Early action by the Legislature is expected.

A coroner's jury, sitting tonight at Bowie, Md., will hear the prosecution charge that Bernard Henry, colored, of that town, drove the hit-and-run automobile that killed Francis Chapman, colored, 16, near Bowie, last February 27.

Henry was arrested last Monday at the Glenn Dale Hospital, where he is employed, by Prince Georges County Police Sergt. Ralph Brown and Officer Albert Anderson. Damages to his automobile lead to his arrest. He will be defended by Attorney J. Wilson Ryon.

The University of Hawaii debating team, credited with winning 80 per cent of its debates, will meet the University of Maryland at College Park Monday night. They will uphold the affirmative of the question: "Resolved, that Congress by two-thirds vote should be given the power to override Supreme Court decisions declaring acts of Congress unconstitutional."

The Maryland debate team will be composed of John Jacob, of Pikesville, Md., and Richard Zimmerman, of Frederick. John A. Casstevens and Robert G. North, both formerly of Alhambra, Calif., will represent the University of Hawaii.

The meet will be preceded by a preliminary debate over Radio Station WCAO, Baltimore, and Columbia's Eastern network, at 3:30 p. m. Monday. At 6 p. m. the visitors will be given a banquet at the university dining hall, College Park.

Arrested in an alleged fight at Capitol Heights, Md., J. T. Sloan, 21, of Greenville, S. C., was being held at the Hyattsville Jail yesterday for South Carolina officials, who charged Sloan had escaped from a chain gang near Greenville.

Sloan was arrested several days ago by Prince Georges County Policemen Howard Slater, Warren Peake and A. W. Hampton, who answered the fight call at Capitol Heights. Later, as he was being fingerprinted by Sergt. Ralph Brown, Sloan is said to have admitted he escaped from the chain gang. He was serving a term for entering a jewelry store, he said.

Will Suit Settled By $200,000 Pact

New York, March 12 (AP).—A $200,000 settlement on Robert David Lion Gardiner, 25-year-old law student, and his sister, halted today his threatened contest of a will disposing of his spinster great-aunt's $15,500,000 estate.

The settlement was accepted and reported by Surrogate James A. Delehanty. Under the agreement, the grandnephew withdrew his objections to the probate of the will of the late Mary Gardiner Thompson.

The settlement to be shared by Gardiner and his sister, Alexandra Diodati Gardiner Creel, is exclusive of their bequests in the will in which they share equally in a $300,000 trust fund, receive $50,000 each and one-half of the family heirlooms.

Gardiner contended his great-aunt, who died last year, was virtually the prisoner of a hired companion and that he was prevented from seeing her.

Interviews and auditions for the young men and women who are anxious to take part in Washington's first local talent all-talking motion picture will be held today.

The picture, to be titled "It Happened in Washington," is to be produced by a Hollywood staff of directors and cameramen under the auspices of The Washington Post and Loew's Fox Theater, and upon completion will be exhibited at Loew's Fox for a full week.

Max Allentuck, casting director, who arrived here last night, announced that he will interview all applicants who desire a tryout between the hours of 3 p. m. and 6 p. m. today and 7 p. m. this evening, using the Franklin room of the Ambassador Hotel as the scene for interviews.

The scenario is being specially written for the Washington scene and will be filmed from start to finish right here in town with an all-local cast. Only those between the ages of 16 and 21 are eligible. More than 200 persons will be used, 25 of whom will be assigned to speaking parts.

The production of this motion picture offers the young men and women of the city a rare opportunity to take part and a prominent active part in the making of a talking picture—and the still more wonderful opportunity to go to the theater and see themselves and hear themselves from the screen.

Each applicant will be given a light and voice test standing before heavy motion picture lights and speaking several lines into a sound microphone. This is done to see how each aspirant photographs under lights and to determine how voices will record on film. If a voice is too strong or too weak, efforts will be made to correct it. The tests will be held under the supervision of the casting director and the director, Leonard A. De Menna.

Mr. Allentuck said: "It is not necessary to have had dramatic experience to apply. Some of the parts call for this type of experience, but there are many that require a vast assortment of types—and no experience is necessary.

"Whether you are an experienced amateur actor or not, bring your application blank to me for your light and voice test."

Casting starts today in the Franklin Room of the Hotel Ambassador at 3 p. m. and application blanks may be secured by applying to the casting director there. It won't be many days before the director is ready for the opening "shots." And then the Kleig lights will flare—the make-up artist will be busy, lines will be rehearsed and it will be time for the director to shout: "Action—Camera—"

Federation to Open Fund Drive Tonight

Opening the annual financial campaign of the Washington Federation of Churches 100 volunteers will meet tonight in the Frist Congregational Church for a send-off program.

Dr. Chesteen Smith, general chairman of the campaign committee, will have charge of the meeting. Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, pastor of the National City Christian Church, will give the principal address. Other speakers will include Frank Liggett, director of the campaign; Dr. Benjamin W. Meeks, president of the federation, and Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary.

The campaign goal will be $13,600. The fund will be used not only to maintain federation offices during the coming year, but also to carry on its hospitalization and social welfare activities. The federation has a membership of 127 Protestant churches in Washington.

Slayer of Woman Given Life; 2d Victim Sought

Redwood City, Calif., March 12 (AP).—Ralph Jerome Selz, 27, eccentric slayer of Mrs. Ada French Rice, a divorcee, pleaded guilty to first degree murder today and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

The sudden climax in the case came while authorities were seeking the body of a man Selz said he also killed to avoid blackmail in the woman's death.

The 200-pound slayer led officers to the grave of Mrs. Rice, 58, said he killed her last summer with a stove poker when he entered the darkened room he rented from her and was struck by someone.

$50,000,000 Transient Aid Sought in Bill

Problem National Rather Than Local, Says Senator Trammel, Sponsor.

Because Florida, like the National Capital, is overrun with transient unemployed, Senator Trammell (Democrat), of Florida, yesterday introduced a bill to authorize an appropriation of $50,000,000 for appropriation of $50,000,000 for apportionment among the States and the District.

The bill is in the form of an amendment to the social security act, but specifies that the funds are to be appropriated by the Federal Government without being matched by funds from the States as in other social security appropriations.

Senator Trammell explained that he believes the transient problem to be national rather than local in character and that a few localities should not have to bear the cost of providing for the transient idle of all States.

Florida and California, because of their mild winter climates, and Washington, because it is the center of governmental relief activity, have the largest proportional number of transients unemployed.

Washington's transient population has decreased somewhat, however, since Federal financial support of transient lodges was withdrawn several months ago.

'Kidnaped Queen' Back; Fight Starts

Norman, Okla., March 12 (AP).—University of Oklahoma engineering students forgot all about their traditional enemies, the lawyers, and engaged in a fight among themselves today over which queen should be crowned at tomorrow's coronation.

Miss Patricia Sewell, of Oklahoma City, was elected queen of St. Patrick's Day celebration, but she was kidnaped.

Engineers, suspecting the kidnapings were a result of collusion between queens and lawyers, passed a resolution recently that kidnaped queens should not be crowned.

So Lawrence Brock, president of the St. Pat's council, announced the crown would be placed upon the head of Miss Louise Hill, of Harlingen, Tex., the runner-up.

The announcement brought protests. Tonight a petition was passed around in Miss Sewell's behalf.

Agreement at Managua Is Eleventh Concluded by This Country.

Eleventh of the series of reciprocal trade agreements negotiated thus far, an unconditional most-favored-nation pact, was conducted yesterday by the United States and Nicaragua.

The agreement was signed last night at Managua, the State Department reported in releasing details.

Similar agreements already have been signed with Switzerland, Belgium, Colombia, Honduras, Sweden, Cuba, Brazil, Haiti, The Netherlands and Canada. Negotiations are under way with seven other countries, the most important proposed agreement being one between France and this country.

The United States obtained duty reductions on nine agricultural and industrial products. The Nicaraguan government agreed not to increase tariffs on 15 other products, while the United States retained on its free list a large number of Nicaraguan products already admitted duty-free to this country.

The agreement must be approved by the Nicaraguan legislature and by President Roosevelt.

In 1929 shipments of American merchandise to Nicaragua were valued at nearly $7,000,000. Depression sank the figures as low as about $2,000,000 during 1932, and but slight recovery has taken place since, as 1935 figures on United States exports there were valued at $2,345,000.

The United States, it was disclosed, buys about 50 per cent of Nicaragua's total exports and supplies about 59 per cent of its total imports, thus dominating Nicaraguan trade. The United States has received chiefly skins, balsams, cabinet woods, cacao, dye woods, turtles, coconuts, cane sugar and miscellaneous drugs and herbs. About 99 per cent of Nicaraguan exports have entered duty free previously.

Oil Heiress and Count Settle Alimony Case

Los Angeles, March 12 (AP).—Divorce and alimony differences between Kathryn Cornell Drohojowski oil heiress, from Dallas, Tex., and Jan Drohojowski, former Polish count, were adjusted out of court today.

By stipulation of lawyers, Superior Judge Harry Archbald dismissed Drohojowski's appeal from a recent decree giving his wife a divorce and denying him any alimony.

$6,665 in Wages Paid by Group

A total of $6,665 in wages has been paid to otherwise "unemployable" persons by Goodwill Industries, Inc., since its organization here last May, a report submitted to the advisory council by Col. William O. Tufts, president, announced yesterday.

"This amount was paid for useful services to men and women who ordinarily would not be able to obtain work because of advanced age or physical handicaps," asserted Col. Tufts, adding that most of the wage earners were paid a minimum of $1.50 a day for renovating old clothing and household articles of every description which later are sold at extremely moderate prices.

"Sales of merchandise at Goodwill Industries stores," stated Col. Tufts, "has totaled $5,510, despite prices so low that one can make a sizeable purchase of useful articles for $3.65."

The colonel concluded that the difference between the sales and the wages paid represents goods now on the shelves awaiting sale.

Farm Program Launching Set For Next Week

Davis Says AAA Substitute Will Operate Full Speed; Meetings Are Called.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 12.—The Administration's new farm program will be put into full operation next week, Agricultural Administrator Chester C. Davis said tonight.

The final blueprints of the working machinery, as drawn in rough form by the farmers themselves, will be finished by midweek, the Administration asserted.

At that time, Davis declared, the farmers would be told definitely for the first time how much money they can expect to receive under the soil conservation act and what they must do to get it.

The work of correlating the recommendations of farm leaders on how the program could best be carried out in different sections of the country will be started in Chicago tomorrow.

From four regional farm meetings—at Chicago, Memphis, Salt Lake City and New York—representatives of the United States Department of Agriculture will come here to meet Davis and begin dovetailing the sectional programs into a harmonizing whole.

Davis said the conferees would include M. L. Wilson, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture; G. B. Thorne, of the livestock division of the department; Clyde Warburton, director of extension; Prew Savoy, of the legal staff, and Claude Wickrad, director of the defunct AAA's corn-hog program.

The group will return to Washington and early next week will begin polishing up the various sectional suggestions as to terms and conditions on which farmers will receive subsidy payments.

Davis said if the Agriculture Department attained its goal of increasing the Nation's grassland from one-fourth to one-third of total acreage, farm income would be increased by $1,500,000,000 from 1935 to 1936.

Defending the program against charges that it was an application of the "economics of scarcity," Davis credited it and its predecessor, the AAA, with starting industry's swing into reactivity.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt assured the Senate Agriculture Committee yesterday he would make $13,000,000 of emergency funds available for crop production loans effective March 20 and more money up to $30,000,000 as needed.

In a letter sent the committee and read to its members by Chairman Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, the President said it was "not practicable" to make the entire $30,000,000 immediately available. He said additional money would be supplied "as rapidly as possible and in ample time to meet the needs of the Farm Credit Administration."

The assurance from the President appeared to make more unlikely than ever any action by the committee toward recommending overriding of the President's veto of the $50,000,000 seed or feed loan bill.

At the time of his veto, Mr. Roosevelt promised to set aside $30,000,000 of relief funds for 1936 loans. He already has made $7,000,000 available.

Farmers may borrow up to $200 for seed and feed. The Government takes a first lien on the crop as security.

Aid to Two First Ladies to Write Magazine Series

Mary Randolph Articles Are Eagerly Awaited by Society Here.

Washington society buzzed with pleasant comment yesterday when it was learned that Miss Mary Randolph, former social secretary to Mrs. Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Herbert Hoover at the White House, is writing a series of first-hand impressions of "Presidents and First Ladies" to appear shortly in a well-known woman's magazine.

Miss Randolph has ample equipment for this task not only as a member of a prominent Army family, but because of her social secretaryship to leading women in the official, diplomatic and social circles of Washington. Her home, which she makes with her sister, Miss Anne Randolph, social secretary to former Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, is known for its hospitality and the national and social notables who assemble there when the Misses Randolph entertain for their friends.

Mrs. Frederick R. Finkensteadt, of Georgetown, who has been in Miami, Fla., for some weeks, has returned to her home and rejoined her husband and her two daughters, Miss Sita Finkensteadt, a subdebutante, and little Sophia Finkensteadt. Frederick R. Finkensteadt, jr., only son of Mr. and Mrs. Finkensteadt, is in Chile, South America, passing the winter with his uncle and aunt, the German Minister to Chile and Baroness Von Schoen.

He will return to the United States this summer. Although only in his fifteenth year, the lad will have made the long journey to and from Chile by himself.

The marriage of Baron Von Schoen, then attached to the German Legation here, and Miss Katherine Birney, daughter of Mrs. Alice W. Birney, was an international romance of prewar days. Before going to his South American post Baron Von Schoen was German Minister to Abyssinia. En route to Chile last autumn the Baron and Baroness visited the Baroness' sister, Mrs. Harold C. Walker, at Webley, on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, one of the show places of that State.

TWO ON SAFARI

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Ballard Mallory, young American explorer, accepts a commission to find the young Honorable Laurence Morland who has disappeared in Africa. Aboard ship he meets Josephine Cascoden, enigmatic English girl, who calmly announces she is going with him. He tries to prevent her, their wills clash, she outwits him and at last he agrees. At a hotel in Lourenco Marquez she receives a cable that distresses her. They sail to Machiche and go on safari. In the shop of Ibn-ben-Dur, the name "Laurence Morland" causes her momentarily to lose her poise. Ibn-ben-Dur gives her a pearl. Mallory believes Morland has become a bandit.

Chapter XXI.

"I Thought You Were Asleep."

BUT now, with night falling and the big gray horse lagging behind through carrying double, that moment was upon him. Out of bravado or shame or blind craving for adventure he had embarked on a torrent in the spirit of a boy going to a picnic. Without bothering to check up on the Hon. Laurence Morland he had vaguely pictured himself as a hero on the way to prevent a murder.

Josephine stirred in his arms, snatching his thoughts into another channel whose rushing waters were scarcely less troubled. That trick he had played on her in Ibn-ben-Dur's scented back room—he had not planned it, it had just happened. Aware of the tensity in her pose, upon mere impulse and more to amuse himself than with any intention of betraying her, he had interjected Morland's name.

In his own manner, Ibn was honest. The name meant nothing to him; he said so and had stuck to it. But with Josephine, how different! He looked down at her bare head, fallen against his left shoulder, her face hidden. So here was the connecting link, the key to her little mystery—Laurence Morland. His brows, already clouded with anxiety, gathered in a tight knot. How had she known of his own destination?

He revived his memories of Red Lion Square, mentally ticking off Lord Morland, his white-headed chauffeur and the three members of the firm, but no sooner did he conjure a vision of the goggle-eyed clerk than he was conscious of light in darkness: William Jones, despairingly cracking all his gangling joints—rushing up and down between the exit to Southampton Row and the street leading to Lincoln's Inn Fields, panic-stricken. Then the arrival of the taxi, the face glimpsed within, a few hurriedly spoken words, the old man abruptly calmed.

Face In a Taxi.

Ballard let go a whistling breath: the face glimpsed in a taxi—Josephine! He felt proud of himself; almost wished that Andy Fox might have been present to give him a grudging nod of approval. For the moment he did not bother with the whys and wherefores. Why had the old clerk risked and lost his job for a few minutes' talk with a young girl above his class? What had been said to make her linger only until she got an identifying eyeful of himself—Ballard Mallory—and then go tearing away before he had a chance to balance the scales?

She moved again. This time half smothered from drooping against his shoulder, her whole body tensed. She threw back her head and drew a long, revivifying breath. He thought she must be awake, but studying her upturned face he saw he was wrong, even though her eyes were not quite closed. Scarcely thinking what he did he stooped and brushed her lips. For an instant they were warm against his, then cold. He straightened; she was awake, regarding him consciously through half-opened eyes.

"Why did you do that?" she asked, with a self-possession which made him feel as foolish as a boy caught in a melon patch.

"I don't know," he muttered lamely. "I—I thought you were asleep." Hastily he tried to correct himself. "I mean——"

"Of course that would make it all right!" she interrupted. "Anything you can steal while somebody's unconscious——"

With one continuous movement he raised her until she sat erect, drew her close and stopped her mouth with his. He kissed her roughly, then drew away, hurled back not by any action of hers, but by his own astonishment. A weakness came over him so genuine he almost let her fall, and the instinct of self-preservation alone made her reach up quickly to seize his shoulders. For a moment they sat staring into each other's eyes by the light of the stars, he as confused as she seemed cool. The weary horse plodded on and came to a stop within a sudden radius of brilliance. Ali's voice sounded from close at hand, waking him from his trance, summoning him back to a forgotten austerity.

A Strange Scene.

When she awoke on the following morning Josephine had only a vague recollection of having been persuaded—almost forced—to drink, bathe and eat before she went to bed. Consequently she stepped out to a scene which filled her with amazement. Gone was the nightmare of sand, wait-a-bit and cactus, while out of straggling disorder had sprung astonishing unity. Within the black shade cast by two huge cashews the camp had been set, her tent and Ballard's side by side. On her right stood the great fly, spread for a dining room; on her left, the slanting tarpaulin of the kitchen flanked by Jocko's boxes and his fireplace. Behind her, in a wide circle, the outposts of smoldering fires, each with its crouching group of carriers, sent up thin spirals of smoke within the surrounding forest. Straight ahead, just beyond the rim of shade, a sudden dip—the beginning or the end of the lovely valley of the Inhasune—carried her eyes away and away. A surge of well-being flooded her veins. She drew a long quivering breath, locked her hands behind her head, stretched and yawned.

"Sure," said Ballard, "but why soak me and your pajamas?"

"What does it matter?" she answered, striding toward him more like a boy than ever. "I'm hungry—awfully hungry. What have you got?"

"Prunes, ham and eggs, biscuits and coffee. What will you have?"

Dines in Comfort.

Mallory detested camp stools as he did all inventions of discomfort; instead his equipment consisted of collapsible chairs with straps for arms. In one of these Josephine now sat, her elbows planted expectantly upon the clean cloth of the table. She watched him finish the last of his coffee.

"You do yourself rather well, don't you? Good food, nice dishes, shiny tableware and clean linen," she said.

"Not linen," he corrected; "it's cotton."

"Well, cotton, then. Anyway—this sort of thing—it isn't what I expected."

"Why not?" The man who doesn't make himself as comfortable on safari as he would be at home is either lazy, stupid or a bungling greenhorn."

Her breakfast began to arrive; in silence she dispatched it, course after course, came to her second cup of coffee and accepted a cigarette.

"When do we have to move from this lovely place?" she asked.

"I don't know yet," he answered; "I'm waiting for definite news."

She frowned, started to say something, then changed her mind. "It's day now," she reminded him. "You ought to be working."

"Don't worry. I'll get to it in time."

"What work?"

"You mean shoot something?"

"There you go again with that nonsense," he said impatiently. "Which do you want to have die—the game or our safari? A gang like this requires a ton of meat a week."

"What about the rice we brought."

"You're like all people who ride a humanitarian hobby; it makes them either dumb or blind. If you'd think a bit you'd realize the rice is only for emergency—rations for exactly four days.

"According to you," she interjected quickly, "without a gun every native would starve."

"I withdraw the word, dumb," said Ballard respectfully, "but there's an answer to your clever question. Since a safari isn't a fixed village, it has only two ways to live: Replacements from neighboring kraals, or game. Of the two, game is generally the easier and always a lot cheaper. In our case it happens to be obligatory."

These Lovely Ladies Escaped the Barber's Shears

Abundant hair, massed softly on the head, is used by Burtis Baker, contemporary artist, as the central point of interest in the above picture, "Interior With Figure."

Latest in Rouge Will Adapt Self To Complexion

Milady May Wear Any Color and Make-up Is Sure to Match.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE VARIETY of colors invading the realm of fashion this season has made make-up a difficult problem. One well known beauty stylist comes to our aid, however, with a new rouge which she calls "Innocence." And well named it is!

It has the unique faculty of adapting itself to every complexion. You smooth a bit of it on, and lo, your cheeks look as though they were suffused with natural color. As a result, you may wear any color you choose from the veriest crimson to the palest oyster white and your make-up is sure to suit.

Frenchwomen frequently remark that American women err chiefly in make-up by over-rouging. Certainly with "Innocence" to aid them there will be small danger.

New Walking Shoe.

"CATALINA" is the name of a new walking shoe that is destined to go places this season. And no wonder! It's as smart as smart can be and oh, so comfortable.

It comes in smart bucko suede, in blue and black, with chic Cuban military-like heels.

The square toes make a woman's foot look three sizes smaller, and the square heels are the smart, built-up kind that rebound from rough roads and hard pavement with a spring.

An elastic inset over the instep and a talon fastening make it as smooth-fitting as a glove. Attractive perforations assure comfort on warm spring days. Incidentally, it is unlined and seamless. And ever so modestly priced!

Gloves Colorful.

AND IS IT a colorful spring? Just look at the gloves. We refer to those gypsy-like "picnits" shown in a down town store. They cost only a dollar (and isn't that a budgetable price?) and they come in yellow, red, green, rose, blue and whatnot.

Collar, Belt Sets.

PROOF that patent leather is coming into its own in an accessory way may be found in the smart and chic collar and belt sets shown in a downtown store.

The collars are the plain, Buster Brown type so suited to tailored frocks. They come in red and Kelly green patent leather with belts to match. Each set costs $1. For 50 cents more you can buy an attractive little bunch of patent leather flowers.

Trade Schools Often Aid Boys In Getting Jobs

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

AT 16, John finished high school. There was not enough money to send him to college, so he was sent out to get a job. There were, however, no jobs to be had, and after a discouraging period of fruitless seeking John gave up the attempt. What to do with his spare time became a problem until it occurred to his family to send him to trade school for a couple of years.

When John finally finished his course, he was two years older and wiser as well as a trained mechanic. Naturally, he found jobs easier to get after this training.

Many boys, however, are not so wisely guided, and the country is full of half grown lads hanging about streets and clubs, with nothing to do. They are fertile subjects for any temptation to seize, and many of them start on careers which land them in penitentiaries and jails.

In the long run it costs less to send boys to trade school or, if they show the ability, to find some way for them to continue scholastic work. Many parents could afford the small fees which State and municipal institutions require if they fully realized what the dangers were for these boys thrown on their own resources with nothing to do but amuse themselves.

Work is scarce, and for men and women of 35 and up would be still scarcer if all the boys and girls under 18 who are seeking jobs were to be employed.

Long Tresses, Not Bob, Favored by Painters

By Vylla Poe Wilson.

DESPITE the long and wellnigh universal popularity of the feminine bob, few artists, even the most modern, portray women as having other than long hair. Woman's crowning glory" from the artistic point of view, while its arrangement has altered from the "Psyches" of the classics to the chic coiffures of the present, has usually been flowing tresses and curls.

A study of the heads of women, as depicted in the collections of paintings in Washington art galleries, will bear this out. Two recent acquisitions to the Corcoran Gallery of Art, both the work of contemporary American artists, are particularly striking examples of how artists have handled long hair to enhance natural grace of contour and shapeliness of head. One picture is "Interior With Figure," by Burtis Baker. The other is a nude by Richard E. Miller.

"Interior With Figure" depicts a woman standing before her dressing table, the chief interest of the entire composition centering on her high-piled light brown hair. With but this "crowning glory" of beautiful hair, the balance and rhythm necessary in this modern artist's conception could not have been achieved.

Paintings of Masters.

The value of a frame of hair to a girlish face is also brought out in the small painting of Joan of Arc, by Jean Jacques Henner, an artist who was at the height of his fame in the latter part of the nineteenth century. The heart-shaped face of the "Maid of Orleans, as a Child," is framed with flowing brown hair, flecked with reddish light.

The late Gari Melchers, whose paintings on the "mother" theme are cherished in the Corcoran Gallery and elsewhere, frequently pictured the hair drawn softly back from the brow and coiled at the back of the neck as in many Madonna pictures. An example of this is his "Maternity" at the end of the south gallery of the Corcoran.

English artists of the eighteenth century, according to paintings in the W. A. Clark collection at the Corcoran, depended very much for their artistic supremacy on the long curls so popular with the women of those days.

Inspiration of Artists.

The contribution that women's hair has made to the inspiration of artists also is illustrated in the collection of St. Memin silhouettes one of the most valuable features of the Corcoran Gallery. St. Memin, who made silhouettes of gallant men and fair ladies of post Revolutionary days, preserved the style of hair dressing of that day, not only of the men but of the women as well. In these silhouettes women are depicted with elaborate headdresses of curls, puff, waves and great coils of hair. The "Pysche" at the nape of the neck, with the hair drawn back from the forehead and with rows of prim little curls, was a favorite mode of St. Memin.

"The Spinet," in the Gellatly collection in the National Gallery of Art, by Thomas W. Dewing, displays another effective treatment of a woman's hair. The back of her head is revealed, and its soft light hair glows against the rich tapestry background of the painting.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Nerves and Fatigue.

IT IS DIFFICULT to understand the meaning of fatigue. The symptoms do not depend alone upon the exhaustion of stored up sugar in the muscles or upon the accumulation of lactic acid. One may be "dead tired" and not have moved a muscle.

We have often observed the effect of a sudden, loud, unexpected noise. Most of us will involuntarily contract a large group of muscles and give evidence of a physical disturbance by starting or jumping. Sound impulses reaching the brain via the nerves of hearing are telegraphed to all parts of the body. The message reads, "Something unusual has happened: look out!" The result is forceful muscular contractions that are designed to place the body in a position of defense, ready for instant action. A sense of profound weakness may follow.

Repeated Loud Noises.

If loud noises are repeated the nervous system after a time will compensate for their effects, inasmuch as the body expects them and is thus prepared. In other words, nature constructs her own shock absorbers. The fear of thunder is essentially a fatigue symptom and is ascribed to the nerve and muscle tension maintained by some persons. We can thus account for shell shock, which was relatively common during the World War, due to the incessant roar of artillery fire. It follows as a natural corollary that one whose nervous system is consistently subjected to bombardments of any sort (noise, inconsequential chatter, scoldings, etc.), may become less stable and less able to control all of his faculties.

Motor car manufacturers have vied with each other in an effort to provide adequate springs and shock absorbers so that the fatigue of automobile travel will be reduced. Lurching and bouncing over rough roads plus the vibration of the machinery subject the passenger to a stream of nervous shocks. One can become exhausted by an hour's ride in an automobile, although no single voluntary movement may be made. Furthermore, if one is riding with a careless or reckless driver who takes chances, fatigue will greatly increase, because the passenger is fighting constant apprehension.

Refuse to Contract.

Of course, one can exercise muscles to the point where they refuse to contract. But this is not what we mean ordinarily when we speak of fatigue. It is that the person has become so nervously exhausted that the accurate performance of accustomed tasks proves impossible.

We frequently hear such expressions as: "I have never had such a day," or "I'm all in; everything went wrong." The implication is not that we have been going through tiring muscular activity. What we refer to are annoyances, disturbing, vexing problems and fault finding with every one "on edge." The feeling is accentuated by the fact that satisfaction is lacking and in lieu thereof a sense of futility, of inefficiency dominates thinking. One may become so fatigued after such a day that he cannot properly evaluate events and judgment is lost.

Visitors Like Famous Dishes Available Here

House Guests Will Enjoy Traditional Foods of Nearby Areas.

By Elizabeth E. Poe.

WASHINGTON homemakers, perhaps more than those of any other region, are often confronted with the problem of the house guest. It is wise for them to utilize the food traditions of their section, because such dishes are often a novelty to their guests.

Visitors to Washington from other parts of the country usually know "Terrapin A la Maryland" only as a name, and have never tasted it properly prepared. A simple recipe for this dish follows:

Terrapin a la Maryland.

Cooked meat of one terrapin, 1 tablespoon flour, 3 hard boiled egg yolks, 6 tablespoons butter, ¼ cup sherry, ½ cup cream, salt and pepper.

Maryland cooks melt the butter into the saucepan, stir in flour until smooth, add meat and heat. Then rub the egg yolks to a paste and add with the cream and seasonings. Bring to boiling point, stir in wine, and serve at once.

However, not every homemaker can afford to serve terrapin. But if the food budget permits, the hostess may serve at east one of the special dishes traditionally identified with Maryland or Virginia. There are many such dishes, less expensive than terrapin and equally tempting.

One of these is "Crab Flacks Baltimore," a Maryland dish particularly appropriate in these Lenten days. There are many ways of preparing the cakes, though some called Crab Cakes Baltimore do not resemble very closely the genuine article. This recipe, taken from a book entitled "Eat Drink and Be Merry in Maryland," by Frederick Philip Stieff, of a family long identified with the State, can be trusted by those wishing to surprise their guests with a memorable meal.

Crab Cakes Baltimore.

Take one pound of crab meat for each four crab cakes. Put crab meat into mixing bowl, add 1½ teaspoons salt, 1 teaspoon white pepper, 1 teaspoon English dry mustard, and 2 teaspoons of Worcestershire sauce, 1 yolk of egg and 1 soupspoon cream sauce or mayonnaise, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley. Mix well, making four crab cakes, press hard together, dip into flour, then into beaten eggs, then into bread crumbs. Fry them in hot, greased pan.

Virginia housewives pride themselves upon the tempting quality of layer cake, especially a kind which has earned for itself the privilege of being called Virginia Layer Cake. It is the type that can be served either as a luncheon or dinner dessert, and goes well with ice creams of all kinds.

Virginia Layer Cake.

1 cup sugar
1 whole egg
2 egg yolks
2 cups cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon mace
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk

Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually and then drop in one unbeaten egg yolk and beat the mixture vigorously; then add another egg yolk and beat well, and last of all the whole egg unbeaten, and again beat well. Then fold in, alternately with the milk, the flour, which has been sifted three times with the mace, baking powder and salt. Divide the mixture into two layer-cake pans and bake in a 350 degree F oven about 30 minutes.

When the cake is cool spread the lower layer with brown sugar icing, place the upper layer, and cover top and sides with icing, then sprinkle over the entire surface one-third cup of Jordan almonds which have been blanched, cut lengthwise into shreds and lightly browned.

"Where QUALITY comes FIRST"

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Woman Calls It Delightful Impetuosity When Man Makes Fool of Himself Over Her, But When Another Woman Is Object, She Considers It Vulgar Display of Emotion.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem is a common one—a problem which makes one miserable most of the time—love. I am deeply in love with a man whom many people think is not good enough for me. He is of a different nationality, has a good position and associates with the best people. We've had many good times together and he has told me repeatedly that he cares. I am old enough to know that most men have a line with them and so I merely smile when he begins to get serious.

Mary Haworth.

* * * *

As you know, there are always persons who come running to tell you some bit of scandal about the person you care for. I know he goes with other women and yet he says none of them mean a thing to him. A friend of mine recently told me she had seen him dining with another woman. She said he was showering attentions upon her and even went so far as to kiss her on the dance floor.

* * * *

I do not claim him as my own, for we are not engaged, but then I have known him for two years and people have seen us frequently together and I do think he should have some regard for my feelings, don't you? What he does in private is none of my business, but to make a public display of his feelings is going a little too far, I think.

* * * *

This is not the only thing I have heard about him. I have heard various other tales, but then he does have his good points. He's sweet, fun loving, gracious, etc. I have been tempted to tell him what I have heard about him, but feel that would drive most any man away. I know men do not want to be nagged at continually, and questioned about other women.

* * * *

My problem seems most distressing to me and so I am turning to you for some solution. Please bear in mind the fact that I love him and that he has equally as many good points as bad—and yet those bad qualities fill me with despair. I will appreciate anything you can do toward righting this problem of the heart. BLUE BELL.

* * * *

Process of Defining Problem Often Brings Answer.

DEAR BLUE BELL: Very often the orderly process of defining one's problem in writing brings one close to the answer or solution. Because in clarifying one's problem to others, one is forced to think about it in order to present it as truthfully and as objectively as possible. And I am hopeful that you, in re-reading your own letter, now that it is reduced to detached newsprint, will be led to see the answer as I see it.

* * * *

Can't you see you have no claim whatsoever on this man's consideration except such claim as he chooses to invest you with; and that he hasn't chosen to invest you with any significant claim? Clearly, you are but one of many women in his life, a fact he has made no effort to conceal from you; probably a fact he has endeavored to make plain to you, so that you won't make the mistake of believing and acting on the belief that he belongs to you in any special way.

* * * *

Notwithstanding the fact you stoutly disclaim any feeling of proprietorship toward this man and that unquestionably he violates precepts of good taste in making a public display of his feelings, I still believe it is very largely your sense of ownership which is outraged at hearing he showered another woman with attentions which all the world might see—even going "so far as to kiss her on the dance floor." Let's put it to the test: Wouldn't you have found it fairly easy to forgive him his public display of feeling, so called, if you had been the woman who received the kiss? I'm sure the incident, in that event, would have lingered in your memory and appealed to your imagination only as a delightfully impetuous if, perchance, slightly embarrassing episode.

* * * *

Wise Woman Doesn't Comment on Man's Flirtations.

SO LONG AS YOUR relationship with this man is held by him to its present casually flirtatious basis, in spite of the fact that he must realize you are in love with him, it is the part of wisdom, good taste and common sense to refrain from making any comment whatsoever on his relations with or conduct toward other women. If you were only casually interested in him, you might twit him about his obvious amours as much as you liked, and if nothing was gained thereby, still nothing would be lost. Under the circumstances, however, there are several reasons why you must guard against the appearance of presuming too much.

* * * *

One reason, which you have already touched upon, is that men shy away from proprietary women, and certainly a sense of proprietorship is implicit in efforts to curb, correct or improve. Another reason is that by maintaining a strict hands-off policy now, you will be more easily able to salvage your self-respect if he eventually decides to marry some other woman. In other words, if you keep hands off, you will never be in a position where it can be said of you that you were cast off.

* * * *

It is my belief that a man whose major good points include only being "sweet, gracious, fun loving, etc.," and whose actions supply material for unsavory tales told by diligent tale-bearers is not a very stable person for a woman to pin her affections and her hopes of happiness on. By their fruits, i. e., by their conduct and their reputation, shall ye know the majority of persons. And there is nothing you have told me about this man which gives reason to believe he is other than a lightweight heartbreaker. As I see it, the only way to right this heart problem is to transfer your affections to a more worthy object. M. H.

Reviewing Stand.

March 12.

THE Radio City Rockettes at Music Hall really slay me with their perfection, but the modernistic dancers who haunt the premises there are away over my head . . . For instance, this week, there is a scene on the stage which I assume to represent the gallery in an operating theater . . . The scene opens with perhaps 30 singers seated in the gallery seats, and they chant a very daffy song, of which I heard only one line: "We restore your shattered hopes with our microscopes" . . . As this line is sung, a lady dancer springs off the operating table and goes into her dance, abetted and assisted by two male modernists . . . They scuffle all over the stage, pointing hands and feet, arching their shoulders in symbolical terms that are unfamiliar to me . . . Finally, the lady becomes irked, for no reason at all, and she kills both of the dancers who have been romping with her . . . She must have a very nasty disposition, because so far as I could see, they had behaved themselves like perfect gentlemen . . . Then she rushed back to her operating table and tucked herself in . . . But I still don't know what it was all about, though I paid close attention.

* * * *

"I'll bet you don't remember me" . . . When anybody says that to you, make up your mind that you're in for a lot of trouble . . . I ran into one of those fellows in a florist shop the other day . . . All I wanted was some flowers but the clerk had other ideas when he heard my name . . . "Bet you don't remember when you and me got drunk in Atlantic City?" he said, and winked his eye, a dirty wink if ever I saw one . . "How much are these?" I asked, trying to change the conversation, but he laid a cold, clammy hand on my arm and fixed me with a cold, clammy stare: "Some fun, that night, huh, kid?" he asked . . . "Boy, did we get stin—did we get stiff?" he persisted . . . "And were you drunk?" . . . Again he winked, shutting his left lid in ponderous fashion . . . "All I want is some flowers," I pointed out, "just a few little flowers to take home" . . . He chuckled understandingly: "In trouble at home," he smirked . . . No use explaining to this crackpot that I'd never seen him in my life, never had been drunk in Atlantic City . . . I paid the bill and staggered out of the place, and so help me, I'll never go back again.

* * * *

He kicked his heels this way and that . . . He ducked and swayed at the waist, oblivious of the streams of perspiration trickling down his face . . . He was doing a rhumba, and he and his partner were really going to town . . . From the look on the girl's face, a young, flappish blonde, you could tell that it was all terribly exciting . . . Since my visit to Havana, I do not like the rhumba . . . For three days, 18 hours a day, we heard nothing but rhumba music, and it became as tiresome as "The Music Goes 'Round and Around" . . . In Havana, if you draw your tub, likely as not a little guy will tumble out of the faucet singing "La Cucaracha" . . . Get into a Havana taxicab and you are apt as not to find three Cuban midgets sitting on the back seat shaking and rattling the rhumba gourds . . . I never saw such a nation for singing and shaking, shaking and singing . . . I think it is the shrill, staccato music that is responsible for revolutions down there . . . A nation that waltzes won't fight, but "La Cucaracha" really churns you into a state of social upheaval.

* * * *

A well-groomed announcement from the Savoy-Plaza informs this reporter that Dwight Fiske is to reopen at the Snack Bar any moment . . . He is one of the best of a whole school of eager-eyed young men and women who sit at piano stools and roguishly tell piano stories that are risque . . . Apart from Fiske and Neville Fleeson, few of these piano talesmen are very good . . . I have seen girls attempt it in night clubs . . . Starry-eyed, they face the audience: "It happened in Central Park," they gush with false gayety in their voices . . . Or it happened in Milgrim's or Hattie Carnegie's or the zoo . . . But something always seems to happen to these young piano-squatting ladies, and during their songs, you learn that some ill-bred or well-bred citizen made a pass at them . . . As they sing these would-be shocking ditties, they tilt their heads this way or that, indulge in sly winks or grimaces, and otherwise arrange their own facial scenery to complete the pajama moods of which they sing . . . You can tell from the look on their faces that they really believe they are cut-ups of the worst order . . . Most of them I've heard are of the worst order.

* * * *

A note from the Rainbow Room tenders us an invitation to the Sheila Barrett opening . . . There is another polite bid to the Norma Terris premiere at Versailles . . . Both of these talented mimics are excellent . . . But may the good Lord deliver me from the plague of girls and boys who imitate Amos 'n' Andy, the Shadow, Rudy Vallee, Ted Lewis, etc., etc. . . . They march out on the stage, these juvenile delinquents, with a bland, cold look on their mobile countenances . . . "You are going to get it, and get it good," they seem to say to the shaken audience, and from then on, you are at their mercy . . . They will imitate anything from Baby Rose Marie to the bells of St. Mary's, but finally they make a noise like a train and choo-choo off . . . Never give these youngsters more than a modicum of applause, because on the slightest provocation, they'll rush back and do a 15-minute encore . . . A mimic, like a good pool player, I fear, offers definite proof of a misspent youth.

Shepherd Field Port Fund Aid Is Urged

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 12.—A local delegation returned yesterday from Washington with word that Representative Jennings Randolph had promised them he would seek additional Federal funds for completing construction of the Shepherd Field Airport near this city.

Whiting Faulkner, postmaster of Martinsburg, said the WPA originally allotted $75,000 for the airport, but the figure was cut down to $25,000 by the State Works Progress Administration. He said $25,000 is sufficient to complete grading of the field. Faulkner said the Central Airlines would include Martinsburg on flights between Washington and Pittsburgh if a suitable landing field is provided.

$125,000 Auditorium Is Assured at Weston

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Weston, W. Va., March 12.—A $125,000 auditorium for the State Four-H Camp at Jacksons Mill seemed assured today, after announcement by the Weston National Bank that it would buy $68,750 worth of bonds in the project.

Sponsors of the plan had been informed that PWA officials would guarantee the rest of the cost. The plan has been approved by the board of governors of West Virginia University, Carleton C. Wood, of Clarksburg, has been tentatively named as architect for the auditorium.

Marriage Racket Law Introduced

Annapolis, Md., March 12 (AP).—A bill designed to "cure the most objectional features of the marriage racket" at Elkton, famed Maryland Gretna Green, was introduced today by State Senator Harold E. Cobourn (Democrat), Cecil.

The measure, which applies only to Cecil County, would allow issuance of marriage licenses only during the hours of 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. on weekdays.

Elkton, a town of approximately 3,000 population, has a marriage record of more than 6,000 couples yearly. Senator Cobourn introduced similar legislation last year, but it was "lost" during the closing hours of the session.

Grippe Epidemic.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 12.—A mild form of grippe, but highly contagious, cut heavily into the attendance at one local public school today. One room had only about a 50 per cent attendance. Children were stricken suddenly with high fever and other symptoms common in grippe while in their classrooms. Recovery of most of the cases came within 48 hours.

P. U. C. to Air Plan to Drop Bus Service

Will Meet on Monday to Decide Fate of Chevy Chase Line.

Utility Faces Reprimand for Delay in Making Track Changes.

Abandonment of the Chevy Chase so-called de luxe bus line, on which a 20-cent fare is charged, will be considered by the Public Utilities Commission on Monday.

Complaints have been made that the line does not meet expenses and its abandonment would result in improved service on other bus lines from Chevy Chase downtown. The Capital Transit Co. has expressed its willingness to abandon the line. It has been proposed, however, that the commission also should consider changes in routing and other aspects of the so-called express bus service, on which a 10-cent fare now is charged.

With its program of track changes lagging far behind schedule, the company also is to be taken to task by the commission about delay in beginning the track changes ordered on Fourteenth street northwest, between H street and New York avenue. Delays in beginning other improvements ordered by the commission also are to be considered. Among these has been replacement of the present open plow pit on Wisconsin avenue. The commission ordered the company to provide a cover for the pit so as to remove the traffic hazard several months ago.

The commission also has for consideration the overcrowding of buses. This was one of the major criticisms of bus riders at the public hearings some time ago. Under the plan the commission was expected to adopt a definite limit on the number of passengers which might be carried at any one time in each bus. The number was to be specified on signs in each bus. Fred A. Sager, chief engineer of the commission, submitted a table covering each bus. This made seemingly large allowance for standees in many of the buses.

Some of the proposed limits included a bus having seats for 20 persons was to be permitted to carry 14 standing passengers in addition, another 20-seat bus would be permitted to carry 33 passengers. Limits for some of the others were 29 seats, 43 passengers; 30 seats, 49 passengers; 35 seats, 58 passengers; 36 seats, 61 passengers, and 44 seats, 74 passengers.

Riley E. Elgen, commission chairman; Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman, and other commission officials made a visual inspection of the proposed loads at the bus garage of the company on Thursday and found the proposed limits satisfactory, Mr. Keech said. The company had its employes fill the various buses to the prescribed limit.

Brothers to Show City Models Of Nazareth Hills, Gethsemane

2 Gaucis Covered 'Nearly Every Inch of Holy Land' Preparing for Work.

". . . By donkey and on foot, I think I covered almost every inch of the Holy Land. Judea, Samaria, Galilee. Finally, we are ready to begin work on the first model. And so, my brother Salvatore, and I—we begin."

His sleeves are rolled to the elbows, revealing a pair of short, powerfully molded forearms, the muscles of which rather belie the definitely aesthetic qualities of the man's features. He is standing in a network of two-by-six pieces of scaffolding, on which he and his brother, Salvatore, have been laboring, under lights, during the night.

But neither of the men—short, dark, wiry—appears fatigued. For they are bringing the Holy Land to Washington.

Show Biblical Scenes.

They are setting in place on a raised platform, 20 feet wide and 40 feet long, actual, scaled models of the towns of Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Capernaum. The hills of Nazareth and the plain of Jezreel. Mount Calvary and the Garden of Gethsemane. Scores of others.

And then they will place against this accurately portrayed background of the Holy Land as it was, the modeled miniatures of thousands of men, women, children and animals of the time, grouped to depict more than 100 scenes, episodes in the life and teachings of Christ, familiar to every student of the Bible.

There are 124 scenes in all. There are more than 2,000 tiny figures, from 4½ to 6 inches tall, painstakingly constructed of English chalk, cornstarch, plaster of Paris and Irish linen and amazingly lifelike. Of these, 740 are animated to continuous movement by an intricate system of piano wire, clockwork mechanisms and pulleys.

Real Water in Lakes.

The various seas, lakes and rivers contain real water. On them float tiny ships of the time. And Solomon's Temple is a magnificent structure, despite its diminutive height of 15 inches.

All of it is the work of the two Gauci brothers, by hand, and it all began many years ago when Josef, the older, and Salvatore, the younger, sat by the fireplace in their Maltese cottage and listened to their mother's recitals of Biblical history and events.

They started carving figues in miniature even then, but it was not until Josef Gauci had spent five years in the Holy Land in the company of a famous English archaeologist and Salvatore had worked in the dockyards of Malta as an electrician during the World War that work on the present model was begun.

This model, which has been acclaimed everywhere it has been shown, will be exhibited in Washington at Knights of Pythias Temple, 1012 Ninth street northwest, beginning March 17, at 7 p. m. After Tuesday, the exhibit will be open daily, from 11 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 11 p. m. Sundays, from 1 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 11 p. m. Admission charges are 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children.

Fort Myer Horse Show To Have Many Entries

A greatly increased list of entries is anticipated for the second Indoor Horse Show to be held at Fort Myer St. Patrick's Day at 8 p. m., Col. Kenyon Joyce, commanding officer, announced yesterday.

At least four schools will be represented in the girl student undergraduate classes, Col. Joyce pointed out. These will include Arlington Hall, Chevy Chase, National Park Seminary and the University of Maryland.

Maj. Arthur P. Thayer, director of the show and himself an experienced horseman, has planned an exceptionally sporting series of obstacles in the jumping classes. Judges for the show will be Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Col. Charles L. Scott, U. S. A., and Harry Semmes.

D. C. Child Tuberculosis Tests Thrown on Private Institution

With public health items sharply reduced in the 1937 District supply bill that has passed the House, the campaign for adequate appropriations now veers to the Senate. The Washington Post desires that this city have the best public health conveniences in the Nation. This is one of a series of articles designed to show Congress the District's health needs.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Academically, Washington probably leads the Nation in the child welfare movement. The Capital is the headquarters of more organizations—Federal, municipal and private—concerned with young citizenry, than you can count on your fingers.

Hence it is rather anomalous that the boys and girls who live here are allowed to grow up on a catch-as-catch-can basis, in so far as their health is concerned. Many of them, of course, don't grow up. These are the ones killed off in childhood by diphtheria, meningitis, tuberculosis, scarlet fever or some other preventable disease.

Pinchpenny philosophy, which is far more expensive in the long run, sees to it that the District's school children receive the minimum of medical inspection, that our infant mortality rate is in the upper brackets and that inadequate funds are allotted for the prevention and treatment of children's tuberculosis.

Here, in the Nation's Capital, it is incumbent upon a private establishment to finance a children's chest clinic. In an era of boondoggling and easy Federal money, Congress tolerates the District Tuberculosis Association to shoulder financial responsibility of examining the chests of boys and girls whose parents cannot afford to pay for the service.

The clinic is run by the Health Department, but the bills for children's examinations are paid by the association. Two days a week, Monday and Friday at 9:30 a. m., are set aside for the youngsters. It has been that way ever since 1928, when the association established the unit under the Health Department with the approval of Health Officer William C. Fowler.

Footing the bills for physicians, technicians, field workers, tuberculin tests and X-rays from the unit's beginnings in July, 1928, until the first of this year, has cost the association $16,296, according to figures it made public yesterday.

In 1935, a total of 2,071 boys and girls, the majority of them from homes where pulmonary tuberculosis existed, received free examinations at the 301 C street northwest institution. A total of 589, about 25 per cent, was found to be infected.

In the incipient stage of tuberculosis were 489 children, 274 of them white and the others Negro. One hundred were well along in the dangerous pulmonary form, 40 white and 60 colored.

The fact that in its first six months of operation the clinic examined but 357 cases, compared to 2,071 in 1935, is contributory testimony to the insidious rise of the "white plague" in Washington. For 1936 the Tuberculosis Association has budgeted $4,744 to continue the children's clinic, the largest sum since the unit was created.

This is an activity for which the municipality should be financially, as well as administratively, responsible.

Boys' Clubs Hosts.

The Boys Club of Washington will be hosts to 43 boys from the Navy Yard District Boys Club of Brooklyn, N. Y., tomorrow. The boys are being sent to Washington by the Juvenile Aid Bureau of the Crime Prevention Bureau of the New York Police Department.

O'Brien Belittles Way Parties Pick Presidential Nominees

Robert Lincoln O'Brien, chairman of the U. S. Tariff Commission, told 400 Wilson College alumni at their biennial banquet at the Mayflower Hotel last night that he never understood why Congress abolished the Louisiana lottery and let the Presidential lottery continue.

With dry New England wit, the 70-year-old former editor of the Boston Transcript, then recounted one humorous story after another. He said no business corporation would think of selecting their leaders in the haphazard way party conventions choose their nominees for the Presidency.

He interspersed these with tales of how Calvin Coolidge picked all his wife's hats for her and of their love, courtship and marriage. His imitations of Coolidge's nasal "yes" and "no" brought down the house.

O'Brien was introduced by Mrs. Juanita Winn, president of the Wilson alumni. Among those seated at the speaker's table were Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Dr. Frank Ballou, superintendent of schools; Dr. Edgar Higbie, president of Wilson Teachers College, and Robert L. Haycock, Ballou's assistant.

House Tables D. C.-Virginia Line Report

Committee Sets Aside Boundary Group's Material.

Action on Controversy Is Deemed Unlikely This Session.

The District-Virginia boundary commission's report has been set aside indefinitely by the House Judiciary Committee, it was learned yesterday and it is likely that it will not be reported to Congress this session.

Chairman Sumners declined to forecast the final disposition of the report, but he admitted that no action by he committee is contemplated in the near future.

The report, which cost the Federal Government about $25,000, was under severe attack before the committee by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Justice Department. It was defended by officials of Arlington County, the State of Virginia and Representative Smith (Democrat), Virginia.

Members of the committee, it is understood, have taken the position that the controversy is a matter that should be determined by the United States Supreme Court rather than by Congress, in view of the sharp divisions of opinion among lawyers involved.

By inaction the committee will be following the course recommended by the Park and Planning Commission, the secretary of which, Thomas Settle, said that negotiations could be carried on that will enable the Federal Government to acquire most of the land in dispute by purchase.

The Virginia Legislature has ratified the report as submitted by the commission and has adjourned for two years. Consequently, even if Congress were to adopt an amended report, it would not become effective until the Virginia Assembly reconvenes.

The dispute may be revived and possibly be taken to the courts on a clear-cut issue if the Washington Airport is selected either for a District-Federal airport site by a commission shortly to be named by Congress or as a national park.

The Park and Planning Commission and the Justice Department contend that the boundary cuts through the flying field. The report, however, in effect awards to Virginia all land on the southeastern side of the Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard.

Dr. Wulf Awarded Hillebrand Prize

Dr. Oliver R. Wulf, of the Fertilizer Investigation Division, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, was awarded the Hillebrand prize for outstanding work in chemistry at the annual dinner of the Washington Chemical Society at the Cosmos Club last night. Dr. Wulf was honored for his work on the chemistry of the upper atmosphere.

The prize was presented by Dr. James Hibben, president of the society. Speakers at the meeting were Dr. Henry C. Fuller, Dr. F. L. Mohler and Dr. Wulf.

Dr. Mohler, a physicist at the Bureau of Standards, who was connected with the stratosphere flight of the balloon Explorer II, spoke on "Photochemistry of the Atmosphere." Dr. Wulf chose as his subject "Trace Constituents in the Atmosphere."

Leap Law

1235 Statue on Feb. 29 Is Cited in Court.

Michigan avenue property owners, protesting against condemnation awards for property needed to construct the Michigan avenue overpass across the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks, yesterday cited an English statute enacted 701 years ago in support of their protest.

Under the law 20 days are allowed for appeal from awards. George E. Sullivan, attorney for the protestants, filed an appeal 21 days after the awards. One of the 21 days was the extra day which falls in February each leap year. Walter W. Fowler, assistant corporation counsel in charge of condemnation proceedings, objected to the District Supreme Court's permitting the appeal, and Justice Oscar Luhring took the matter under advisement.

The leap-year law was enacted during the reign of Henry III. It reads: "The day increasing in the leapyear shall be accounted for one year, so that because of that day none shall be prejudiced that is impleaded, but it shall be taken and reckoned of the same month wherein it groweth, and that day, and the day next going before, shall be accounted for one day."

Boy, Girl 13 Today; Not Afraid of Jinx

Eileen Pearcey, Ralph Disney Defy Old-Time Superstitions.

"Boo," he said to Eileen Pearcy, of 6019 Eighth street northwest, friends at a birthday party today.

For some time yesterday afternoon he walked about, daring a black cat, should he find one, to cross his path. None appeared. Perhaps he was in the wrong neighborhood.

Then, in defiance of all taboos, he shattered a mirror, and was photographed in the act.

"I'm not a darned bit superstitious," he smiled, " and I intend to celebrate my thirteenth birthday having a good time."

One thing Friday the Thirteenth

Underwood & Underwood.

daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton H. Pearcy.

"Boo," he reiterated in a stage whisper to Ralph Disney, of the Shoreham Hotel, son of Oklahoma's Representative Wesley Disney.

For, you see, the bogey man is Friday the Thirteenth, and he goes by the alias of "Jinx," and not all of Maj. Brown's gendarmes nor all of the bright young and old men of Scotland Yard could take him into custody.

And both Miss Pearcy and Master Disney are having birthdays today, and each will be 13 years old.

Neither paid any attention to the phantom of ill luck last night, however, and the bogey man went away, probably hissing "curses."

"I've been having birthdays on the thirteenth of March all my life and don't intend to stop," said Miss Pearcy, who goes to the Nativity School. "Of course, I've never been 13 on the thirteenth before, and have no intention of being again."

With a defiant gesture she opened an umbrella right indoors, which is bad luck on any day of the year, any superstitious person will tell you.

She intends to take her father and mother to dinner and to the theater tonight—and there'll be no villainous bogey man in her life today.

It is always bad luck, they said, particularly if a painter or a paperhanger is at work and his bucket falls.

Prettyman Is Honored By Members of Staff

Good Morning!

It must be a thrill to see rich neckwear silks, such as the new patterns for Spring, come fresh from the looms. They are so contagiously bright, that even a last Fall suit takes on a springy atmosphere when you wear these new ties.

Senate Group Backs River Improvement

Committee Amendment Would Allot $167,000 to Begin Work.

The long-sought Washington waterfront improvements and the dredging of the Potomac River will be started in the next fiscal year by the Army engineers if an amendment to the War Department appropriations bill reported to the Senate yesterday is accepted by Congress and the President.

The Senate Appropriations Committee added $50,000,000 to the House bill to take care of river and harbor improvements recommended by War Department engineers. This brought the total appropriations proposed to $603,230,604, an increase of $58,000,000 over the House figure.

While the bill does not break down the $50,000,000 appropriation, the committee report lists the projects recommended by the Army engineers who testified at the hearings.

Among these projects is the dredging of the Potomac River and the improvement of the waterfront on the north side of the Washington channel. The total initial cost is estimated at $167,000.

The report estimates that $152,000 could be expended in the next fiscal year on the river dredging project, which ultimately will cost $325,000 and will be paid for entirely by the Federal Government.

Only $15,000 would be spent to start the Washington waterfront improvements under the recommended appropriation, although the project is estimated to cost $1,650,000 with the District's share at either half or $389,000, the latter figure being the actual cost of replacing municipal wharves.

The waterfront improvements, when completed, will include the construction of commercial as well as District wharves.

Both projects have the indorsement of the Washington Board of Trade and other civic organizations.

Senate Sub-committee Gets Curran Nomination

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday referred the nomination of Edward M. Curran as Police Court judge to a sub-committee composed of Senators King (Democrat), of Utah, and Austin (Republican), of Vermont.

No requests have been made for hearings so it is expected that the nomination will be reported favorably to the Senate early next week.

Club Mayfair's Free Cocktail Marks Birthday

By Chanticleer.

Friday the Thirteenth may be bad news for the superstitious—but not for those who visit the Mayfair today. It's "Birthday Day" at the Cafe of All Nations, and for the dinner hour a very uxtry and specially good cocktail goes just ahead of the victuals, at no additional cost. Yes, sir, that's right; a birthday present from the Mayfair to its guests.

In addition to Milbourne Christopher and his "black magic," Michael and his accordion (he did a turn not so long ago for Rudy Vallee), and Jack and his midget piano, the Mayfair has scheduled for this special birthday party the Rays, last seen at Wardman Park.

It's time you were noticing those Washington murals in the newly redecorated small cocktail room, too. They were done by the Urban Studios, of Chicago, the same Joseph Urban who just completed Helen Morgan's "House of Morgan" up Manhattan way. It's just like taking a sightseeing tour of interesting Washington spots.

Lardies who would "go Hollywood;" husbands who would have their wives look Hollywood starrish, and boy friends who would give their best gals a chance to see what the newest feminine fashions will be like—all will be on hand at the Shoreham for "Movie Night" tonight. It's the Hollywood Fashion Show. With encores tomorrow noon and night . . . When they talk about Southern cooking at Maryland Club Gardens, they're not spoofing. Chef Russell has been preparing fried chicken and corn fritters for South'n gempm'n for years, and he knows all the culinary answers. Ask Jimmy Harris, leader of the band. He gained 5 pounds the first fortnight of association with the Russell ceremonies . . . Susan Hall is doing the most amazing splits, bends and whatnots at the Habana this week in her acrovatic convolutions. She's a redhead, in case you have weaknesses that way. Moe Baer and his boys for dancing . . . Headwaiters sometimes shiver a bit when parties of 20 and 30 persons suddenly pop up in the foyer, hungry and wanting prompt service. Ah, but not so at Matt Windsor's Club Volga Boatman. All season a day hardly has passed without an unusually large party of diners and merrymakers showing up—and the Volga Boatman knows how to give 'em service . . . The Bubble-dance lady of the Dude Ranch, Ursula Martin, knows more about the dance than slithering gracefully about with an oversize toy ballon. She does a very neat buck and wing, too. Babe Lane is a newcomer this week, in acrobatic, toe and military routines . . . Beulah Cromwell, the Amsterdam mistress of ceremonies, will present another group of amateur performers tonight, with aid and assistance of Arthur Fletcher, the Amsterdam host. Last week's winner was Virginia Holden, with Ted Adams running second . . . The next time you're dining at the Russian Troika and don't feel in the mood for shashlick, stroganoff or lobster, just try Chef Schlein's daily "favorite." (Upper right-hand corner of the menu.) You probably won't be able to pronounce it, but Schlein guarantees you'll like it . . . The wisecracking of Al Stone, last week at the Fox, kept the crowds at the Ambassador Hi-Hat entertained, between numbers by the Paradise Islanders, one night this week. And add mysteries: Some unidentified Lothario sends Lou the Hi-Hat's nicotine vendor, orchids every so often—and has for months . . . A really spectacular event is expected Monday night at the Heigh-Ho Club, when Mlle. Illiana makes her Washington bow. La Illiana is known from one end of the continent to the other as a songstress, motion picture star and for her stage work. That usually brings diplomats by the dozens to Heigh-Ho ringside tables. Consuelo Flowerton is delighting the supper crowds this week with sophisticated songs . . . My spies report that rarely do you find as fine a quality voice in a supper club as that of Margerita Cueto, the Madrillon's star attraction for the week. Senorita Cueto has heard the plaudits of crowds at the Barcelona opera house, and in Pan-American concerts. Juanita, young Latin miss, provides the Madrillon's patrons with real Spanish dance interpretations . . . It's a big day today at the La Paree. In addition to the whoopie of College Night, the La Paree presents a brand-new floor show. Following an effective policy, Manager Huie will back the featured performers with a line of dancing honeys. Deronda and Barry danced their way into public approval, and will be held over another week.

English Seek Funds To Assist German Jews

London, March 12 (Jewish Telegraph Agency).—An appeal to British Jewry to contribute £1,000,000 (approximately $5,000,000) to aid in the expatriation and rehabilitation of 100,000 German Jews during a period of four years was issued today. It was signed by Sir Herbert Samuel, Lord Bearsted and Simon Marks on behalf of the British section of the World Council for German Jewry.

The campaign for the sum will be launched officially at a conference here Sunday. It is part of a world drive for $15,000,000, two-thirds of which American Jews have undertaken to raise. Between 20,000 and 25,000 emigrants, chiefly youths and children, will be sent from Germany annually.

Steel Flagpole Falls 13 Floors, Kills Man

Peoria, March 12 (AP).—One man was crushed to death and two injured today when high winds sent a 100-foot steel flagpole crashing to earth at one of Peoria's busiest downtown street corners.

Near panic spread among pedestrians as the huge steel structure, weighing more than a ton, smashed into pieces. It was dislodged from the top of the 13-story Commercial Merchants National Bank Building. The dead man was M. L. Burroughs, 42, life insurance salesman.

Honduras Tax Vetoed.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, March 12 (AP).—President Tiburcio Carias Andino vetoed today a congressional bill passed February 28 establishing a 5 per cent tax on all capital leaving the country.

Gauging the Possibilities.

An exact estimate of one's resources is vital to the proper planning of any kind of campaign, whether financial, military, or merely the bidding of a hand at contract. Without such an estimate it is impossible to apply the nice admixture of courage and caution that are the ingredients of success.

The average bridge player's vacillation between recklessness and overconservatism can be traced to one major fault: failure to take into consideration all the possibilities of a given situation. This fault is particularly glaring in the bidding of "freak hands."

A defensive Cue-Bid.

Almost all bids should be conventional, either in implication or in evaluation of the hand. Unusual situations, however, demand drastic measures.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 club	1 heart	2 spades	3 hearts
3 spades	4 clubs	4 spades	Pass
Pass	5 hearts	5 spade (final bid)

East's bidding was worthy of comment and study as an example of shrewd foresight.

He did not have a strong enough hand to cue-bid clubs directly over North's opening bid. Such a cue-bid would be interpreted by his partner in the conventional manner, to indicate a huge hand. His one heart vulnerable overcall was quite proper at this point.

By the time the bidding had come around to him on the second round a definite situation had developed. South, by his jump free bid, had shown not merely game, but slam aspirations. West had raised the hearts in the face of this danger. Obviously he had tried to indicate that a "save" might be profitable. North had furthered the slam probability by his free raise. With an inferior suit (from at least the denominational point of view) East could not hope merely to outbid the spades, therefore a more subtle defensive measure was demanded. Hence his four club bid, which carried a clear lead-directing message.

South was given a tough problem by this bid. If it were honest and East really would ruff an opening club lead, the enticing slam contract almost surely would fail, as a heart trick probably must be lost also. But he was by no means sure that East was not throwing dust in his eyes by warning of a purely imagiary danger.

South could not decide whether the cue-bid was honest or not, and for that reason swung to the conservatism of bidding only a game. But now that he had definitely set up a defense, East went ahead with his sacrifice plan, feeling sure that five hearts could not be severely punished. He was correct. It could have been defeated only one trick. South refused to be bilked out of the game and went to five spades.

West followed orders and opened a club. East ruffed the king. Since a trick in diamonds appeared out of the question, and two more tricks were necessary for the contract's defeat, East correctly underplayed his act-king of hearts on the only hope that West would have the queen. When that card won the second trick, another club ruff gave the defenders their well earned victory.

On the Air Today

FIVE awards for the best programs on the air, in the judgment of thousands of women listeners, will be made this spring by the Women's National Radio Committee. Four were made last year.

In case you've forgot, 1935 awards went to Columbia's Concert Hall, "You and Your Government," General Motors Symphony concerts and "March of Time." Classifications also are changed this year, as follows: Serious music, lighter music, nonmusical program, educational and children's.

Selection of the winning programs is by popular vote. Organizations receiving ballots range from the American Legion Auxiliary and Association of University Women to the W. C. T. U. and the Young Women's Mutual Improvement Association.

However, a number of men, whose interest in the poll has been aroused through receiving the committee's monthly publication, will be privileged to vote this year. Balloting begins March 15 and continues through April 15.

Presentation of awards is not made to the artists; they go to the commercial sponsors, broadcasting companies or individual station responsible for the winning programs. And awards will go to programs specifically created for radio. This eliminates from voting such programs as the New York, Boston, Cleveland and other symphonies since they are produced primarily for the visual audience.

Conrad Thibault is not squeamish about making his formal platform debut on such a date. He sings at New York's Town Hall tonight.

"Curbstone Queries" probably will not let the day pass without some mention. Passersby at The Post Building will evpress themselves on the subject at 12:15, WMAL, in the daily street forum.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

ONE of the largest and a model organization, the Internal Revenue Federal Credit Union, is looking forward to breaking records in its field this year. During the first ten months of its existence it admitted 1,703 employes to membership and indications point to double that number at the end of this year.

BAKER.

The unit has just paid a large dividend despite the fact as a new organization, heavy expenses had to be incurred, it is pointed out by Ira Y. Bain, president.

"It has not been necessary to charge off any loans as bad since the group began," Mr. Bain declares. "All desirable loan demands have been met, and any member desiring to withdraw funds has been permitted to do so in all cases without the requirement of a moment's notice."

Other officers of this live organization include:

Leslie G. Van Fossen, treasurer, and the following members of the board of directors: Oscar G. Ross, Lloyd Odend'hal, Miss Bertha L. Neff, Mrs. Irene C. Gantt, George C. Cohan, John E. Lynch and Mark Watson.

The credit committee, which approves loans, is composed of Alfred L. Duncan, chairman; Mrs. Mae Kinney and Earl A. Ruth. The supervisory committee includes Miss Eleanor E. Capers, chairman; Charles T. Hoffman and LaRue Tanner.

Navy Department Lodge, No. 1, American Federation of Government Employes, will hold its quarterly meeting at 4:30 p. m. today in room 2215, Navy Building, it is announced by Michael D. Schaefer (F), president.

Mrs. Granger Retires.

After a splendid service record of 18 years, being late to work only twice—and that was this winter—Mrs. Julia Granger (P), was retired yesterday from Insurance Division, Veterans' Administration. On behalf of her fellow workers, Mrs. Granger was presented with a fitted traveling bag and flowers by Harold W. Breining, assistant administrator in charge of finance and insurance.

Mrs. Granger resides with her son at 821 Silver Spring avenue, Silver Spring, Md. She expects to visit her sister in Kansas this spring.

Diary Guest Tickets.

National History.

We view the lion at the Zoo
And hear his hungry roar;
We stand aghast, then at ease,
For food he wants no more.

The Bureau's lunch is crowded
With Guv-ment clerks galore;
Grabbing this and grabbing that,
They've ne'er seen food before!

Is food all that life's meant for
To Nature's highest breed?
I'd love to bring the lions down
And show them how we feed!

French Envoys Cancel Berlin Social Functions

Berlin, March 12 (AP).—Indicating the strain of Franco-German relations, Andre Francois - Poncet, French Ambassador, and Pierre Arnal, counselor of the French Embassy, have called off social functions scheduled for the next few days.

Last Saturday, when the French Ambassador gave a reception, all German army officers, who had already accepted, failed to appear.

According to the French Embassy, a further cause for anger is the fact that Francois-Poncet asked Konstanin von Neurath, German Foreign Minister, point-blank Saturday morning whether troops would march into the Rhineland, and was told "only a few detachments." It was later that he learned that 19 battalions had been sent.

Miller, Sarron Signed for Capital's First Title Bout on May 18

$10,000 Bid Is Accepted By Champ

Challenger Will Receive $1,500 for Battle at Griffith Stadium.

By Bill McCormick.

WASHINGTON'S first championship bout was made last night as Police Department officials agreed to pay Featherweight Champion Freddy Miller $10,000 to defend his laurels in a rematch against Pete Sarron at Griffith Stadium on May 18. Miller's manager, wily Pete Reilly, earlier in the day had refused an offer of $6,000—$1,000 more than he received in a previous title bout against Sarron in Miami—for the return bout.

Accepted by Sarron.

Immediately after Reilly refused the offer of $6,000 for the return bout, Jimmy Erwin, Sarron's manager, filed a request with the New York State Athletic Commission asking that Pete be declared the champion in the Empire State, in which Freddy is not recognized as titleholder. Erwin also forwarded to the National Boxing Association, which has declared Miller ruler of the 126-pounders, a formal application to have Sarron declared the champion of his weight division on the strength of the bout in Miami and Miller's refusal of a rematch at any but an exhorbitant figure.

Once Reilly had agreed to accept the rematch for a flat guarantee of $10,000, Erwin quickly agreed to let Sarron fight the champion for $1,500.

"Thanks for the nice money you are giving us for this bout," said Erwin, speaking for Sarron. "After what we found out about Miller in that Miami contest, we would be glad to pay to fight him. Being paid for the bout, we'd be willing to guarantee Washington the best bout it ever has seen—with a local lad coming out as the champion."

Three Rounds Shortened.

In the Miami bout which created such a furore, Sarron had established a clear lead when Miller sank to the floor in the twelfth round, claiming he had been hit low. Although both contestants were wearing the approved type of "foul proof" cup protectors and had been instructed to fight under the Marquis of Queensbury rules Referee Leo Shea halted the contest for five minutes or more, allowing Miller to recuperate instead of either counting the champion out or awarding him the fight on a foul as the Queensbury rules require.

When action was resumed, the thirteenth round was shortened to 1 minute and 25 seconds, the fourteenth to 2 minutes, and the fifteenth to 2 minutes and 25 seconds. Sarron jarred Miller frequently in those abbreviated periods of fighting and had dropped the title holder to the floor with a left hook when the bell was unexpectedly clanked ending the fight. At the hastened finish Shea helped pick Miller from the floor and held his hand aloft as the winner.

Shea claimed afterward that he gave Miller the rest period rather than allow the foul claim, which would have disappointed the crowd of about 8,000 which witnessed the contest. It was at first said that the last three rounds had been shortened to "make up for the time out in the twelfth," but later it was denied that the rounds had been curtailed, despite the claims of two jockeys who held stop watches on the entire fight and furnished exact figures, and the testimony of many sports writers who noticed the curtailment of rounds at the time.

Dave Herman, Post Writer, Will Cover Tourney in Denver

WHEN the National A. A. U. basketball championship opens Sunday night in Denver, Colo., Dave Herman, Post sports writer, will occupy a ringside seat. He will send home stories on the play of the Rinaldi Tailors, District of Columbia challengers, who competed in The Washington Post-A. A. U. tournament.

HERMAN.

Herman left last night with the Rinaldi team shortly after its game with the District All-Star five at Heurich's gym.

En route to Denver, Herman will file stories on the Rinaldi players, as they plan to stop off at Chicago and Omaha for special workouts. The team will arrive Sunday night.

Although best known through his work as golf writer on The Post, Herman has had several years of experience in covering basketball. For the last three years he has been handling The Post-A. A. U. tournament.

Philadelphia Is 'Out,' Says Olympic Leader

Lausanne, Switzerland, March 12 (AP).—The proposal to hold the 1936 Olympic games at Philadelphia, advanced yesterday, is impossible, Colonel Berdez, general secretary of the International Olympic Committee, said today. Moreover, no such proposition has been received by the committee.

Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia said Wednesday he had wired to Count Henri Baillet Latour, president of the International Olympic Committee, an invitation to transfer the 1936 games from Berlin to Philadelphia.

Dizzy Dean—Feet as a Fiddle

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Behind them thar brogans lurks Dizzy Dean, St. Louis pitcher, who hasn't signed that Cardinal contract yet, but is keeping in fine fettle and good pitching form by working out as shown in Bradentown.

$40,000 Final Offer, Says Dizzy Dean

He Signs 7 Contracts for Advertising; Must Be True to His Fans.

By the Associated Press.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 12.—Dizzy Dean signed seven contracts today—but not one with the St. Louis Cardinals.

The holdout pitching star of the Red Birds, who insists he won't sign for a dime less than $40,000, drove his tan sports car all over Bradenton, scared a score of natives with his blaring horn and talked over his troubles with every shopkeeper. The contracts he signed were for advertising and other sidelines.

As Branch Rickey, general manager and vice president of the Cardinals, neared Bradenton for what may be a final conference with his star, Dizzy announced he was leaving town for a few days.

"I've given them my final offer and it's $40,000 or nothing," he said. "You say Mr. Rickey will be in Bradenton tomorrow? Well, ol' Diz won't. He's leaving. Can't say where. It's a secret. No, it hasn't anything to do with baseball."

Dizzy, his wife prompting every statement, said the $40,000 f was Rickey's own idea.

Was Rickey's Idea.

"When I talked to him last December, he said: 'Why, Diz, you're a piker. Babe Ruth made $80,000. Aren't you worth half of that?' So, I told him I wanted 40 grand."

Furthermore, said Dizzy, he is going to insist that Rickey sign a contract against popping off.

"I'm not supposed to pop off," popped Diz, but he can pop off all he wants to pop. If I do sign, I want him to sign the same anti-popping contract I sign."

"And another thing," went on Ole Diz, "when and if I do sign a contract, I am going to make them take a picture of it so's I can prove to my public that I didn't quit on them and sign at the Cardinal price. I get all kinds of letters every day from people begging me to stick by my guns. And I'm not going to let them down. Not ol' Diz. When I do sign, I want proof that I didn't play dog 'n' quit."

"They won't allow that," he was told.

"The heck they won't," Dizzy shot back as he gave his horn another toot that made this reporter fall off the running board. "I'll promise to show it to you personally."

Werber to Sign; Leaves Today For Camp

APPARENTLY saddler and wiser for his experience, boyish Bill Werber, Berwyn, Md.'s gift to baseball, gave up his holdout stand yesterday and will leave this afternoon for Sarasota, Fla., to take up his third base post for the Boston Red Sox.

"I knew from the start," he said, "that I would probably have to sign at the club's terms in the long run."

"Yes, it looks as though I'll have to sign at their figure. Personally, I think I was not unreasonable in my demands. Last year they gave me a big cut. I didn't even ask for all the cut back, just part of it. And they evidently aren't going to give me that."

Family to Remain.

The figure causing all the trouble is understood to be $1,000. Werber, who sells insurance in his off-season, refused early contracts sent him by Owner Tom Yawkey, the Midas of the Red Sox. The $1,000 is the difference between what Werber wants and what the club is offering.

The former Tech High athlete finally decided to take off for the South upon receiving a telegram from Sarasota. He is not taking his family with him.

"I have been ready to go, anyhow, for some time," Werber explained. "I don't care to impair my own future because of a salary difference, however dissatisfied I may be."

The wiry third sacker declared himself in top-shape, explaining that an entire winter of handball and gymnasium work kept him in the best of condition.

Nat Regulars, Yannigans Tie, 6-6

Holbrook's Failure to Touch Home Plate Costs Victory.

'Battle' Called in Sixth, Probably on Account of Laughter.

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 12.—Washington's regulars and yannigans battled to a 6-6 tie today in an uproarous ball game that was called at the end of six innnigs, probably on account of laughter.

The earned run was as scarce as snowshoes in these parts as captain Buddy Myer's regulars wiped out a 5-2 lead held at one point by Sammy Holbrook's riff raffs, comprised of a curious mixture of veterans, rookies, coaches and Manager Bucky Harris, himself.

The crowning laugh of the game was provided by Manager Holbrook, of the riff raffs, who broke under the strain of his managerial duties and forgot to touch home plate in the last inning with the run that would have won the ball game.

Harris No Aid, Either.

Manager Bucky Harris, demoted to the ranks for the day, was no great help to the riff raffs, either. Attempting to squeeze over a run from third base with a bunt, the play he had been drilling his men on for the past week, he popped the pitch in to a double play.

Buck Newsom contributed to the jollity of the occasion when, inserting himself as a pinch hitter for the riff raffs, he flung his bat away in undisguised disgust after connecting for only a single off the pitching of Harry Oates.

Among the four rookie pitchers who divided the hurling duties, only one distinguished himself. Joe Bokina, a big, bow-legged right-hander, who is the property of the Albany Club, gave the best performance when he held the Yannigans scoreless in his three-inning term and allowed only two hits.

Others Are Wild.

The others—Harry Oates, Ken Raffenberger and Frank Peticolas—either distributed hits injudiciously or marred their performance with bases on balls.

With Johnny Stone and Red Kress each collecting a pair of solid hits, the Yannigans outhit the Regulars, 8 to 7, but shared equally in the half-dozen errors that marked the battle.

The slugging honors went to Stone, Cliff Bolton and Buddy Lewis. Bolton smacked the longest ball of the game, a terrific smash to right center that cleared McNeely's head and would have been a home run with a bit of ambitious base running.

Lewis Hits Triple.

Young Buddy Lewis gave Manager Harris the first concrete evidence of his hitting power when he smacked a vicious line drive into the rightfield for a three-base hit against the pitching of Peticolas.

Manager Harris pressed Huck Wynne, the prize Washington sandlotter, into service as a pinch hitter in the final inning and Wynne did nothing to disturb the confidence in his hitting. He failed to gain credit for a hit, but it required a sensational stop by Cecil Travis on his sizzling grounder to keep Wynne out of the hit column.

Henry Picard, Revolta Win 4-Ball Golf

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., March 12.—For 34 holes today, Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., was the perfect golfer, and so tonight he and Johnny Revolta, of Milwaukee, were the only repeat victors in the 12 years' history of Miami's annual international four-ball matches.

Because the 28-year-old Picard did nothing wrong, he and his partner bested, 4 and 2, Gene Sarazen, of Brookfield Center, Conn., and Jimmy Hines, of Garden City, Long Island, in the 36-hole final of the Florida winter season's tournament classic.

Rewards for the winners, who defeated Paul Runyan and Horton Smith in last year's final, were checks for $1,000 each, commemorative plaques and the huge Roddy Burdine Memorial Trophy, posted this year by friends of the Miami sportsmen and business leader, who died recently.

"Carried" Throughout.

To Sarazen and Hines, who fought stubbornly if vainly to halt the titlists' par-cracking parade to their second straight victory, went checks for $500 each. The remaining $1,000 of the purse of $4,000 was distributed among losers in quarter-final and semi-final play.

Revolta, who won the Professional Golfers Association tournament in 1935 and who played spectacular golf in earlier rounds helping to carry his side to the final, was of no assistance today, winning not one single hole.

For the 34 holes he played, the Hershey professional was nine strokes under par. He was over par at only two holes, the 153-yard eleventh, where he missed the green and needed two putts after chipping on, and the twenty-seventh, where he trapped his second, came out past the cup and needed two to get down.

Appropriately, it was Picard who put the finishing touches on his team's victory.

Win at Table Tennis.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, March 12 (AP).—American men's and women's table tennis teams won international contests today with Yugoslavia and France, respectively. By a count of 5-to-1 the men won the Svaythling Cup, while the American women triumphed by a score of 3 to 1.

Venzke, Back in Shape, Vies in Mile Saturday

New York, March 12 (U.P.).—Gene Venzke, University of Pennsylvania's 1,500-meter indoor record holder, today informed Knights of Columbus officials he will run in Saturday's mile against Joe Mangan and Glenn Cunningham.

Venzke has been confined to his room for several days with a heavy cold. He said he is in fine shape and will arrive here Saturday morning.

Glenna Collett Gains Finals At Belleair

Beats Miss Miley, 6 and 5; Miss Hemphill Wins Over Mrs. Lake.

BELLEAIR, Fla., March 12.—Playing sub-par golf despite a strong wind, Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, the national champion, defeated Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., 6 and 5, today and entered the finals of the annual Belleair women's tournament.

Her opponent tomorrow will be Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., who ousted Mrs. Marion Turpie Lake, of New York, 4 and 3.

Mrs. Vare reached the turn 3 up by shooting a 2-under-par 38. After having the tenth, she won the next three holes in succession to end the match. She was one under part for the four holes coming home.

Off to Good Start.

The dark-haired Kentucky girl won the second with a par 4 after they halved the first in birdie 3s. The third also was square as each carded a birdie 4. A deuce on the 150-yard fourth evened the match for Mrs. Vare. After halving the fifth, Mrs. Vare won the next three in succession in par figures, both had par 5s on nine.

Miss Hemphill, who upset Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, of Miami, yesterday, won the tenth, eleventh and twelfth from Mrs. Lake after gaining a two-hole advantage on the first nine.

McAvoy Choice Over Lewis Tonight

Is Expected to Get Shot at Braddock's Title If He Triumphs.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 12.—Jock McAvoy, Britain's best puncher and perhaps her most formidable prospect for heavyweight consideration since Bob Fitzsimmons, tackles the first objective in a highly optimistic fistic campaign in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

The Lancashire Larruper, following a brief but spectacular New York debut early in the winter, will attempt to lift the world's light-heavyweight crown from the dusky brow of John Henry Lewis, Arizona Negro, in a 15-round match.

McAvoy, the choice of most critics to win—perhaps by a knockout—rules a 9-to-10 favorite in the betting. The odds in the Briton's favor have shortened, however, since Lewis flew East from St. Louis to establish training quarters at Pompton Lakes, N. J., and impress observers with his boxing ability. The rangy Negro may have the antidote for Jock's wallop, but he will need it.

Ernie Dusek Mat Victor; 2,000 Boo

Both Wrestlers Dazed; Foul Tactics Mark Feature Bout.

By George Considine.

ALTHOUGH more than 2,000 spectators nearly raised the roof in protest, Referee Cyclone Burns ruled that Ernie Dusek mastered Handsome Vic Christy last night in the feature match of the weekly wrestling show at the Turner Arena.

The end came by way of a body slam after 37 minutes of the most bruising fireworks seen here this season. At the finish both men were dazed and Dusek was bleeding profusely from the mouth.

Obviously intent upon applying the finishing touches to the youthful Californian, Dusek grabbed Christy by his ankles and swung him around about a dozen times. But, instead of giving up the ghost, Vic weathered the ordeal in fine fashion and came back for more.

Counts Two Three Times.

It was in the series of body slams that followed that the customers raised all the ruckus. Three times Referee Burns counted to two over Christy, but each time Vic would get one of his shoulders up somehow before the decisive count. On the fourth occasion Burns' "three" and Vic's shoulder hoisting apparently occurred simultaneously.

"Dusek wins," shouted the rotund referee. The entire gathering rose as a man in vigorous protest. And when Burns stuck to his decision, the rostrum was buried in cigar butts, cigarette stumps, programs, newspapers and everything else that was throwable.

Throughout the match Dusek consistently resorted to foul tactics. Having mussed up his own hair and affected his most sinister-looking scowl, Ernie tore into his man and administered many kicks in the breadbasket and many, many strangles.

Cheered on by Fans.

From the 10-minute mark on, however, Christy fought back in the same illegal manner, frequently bashing Dusek to the mat, while the crowd cheered him on. Between foul play, both wrestlers exhibited a thorough knowledge of the accepted holds, with Christy holding a slight edge in the latter.

Everyone put on his coat preparatory to leaving at the 30-minute mark, when both men decided upon a flying tackle at the same time, resulting in a double knockout. But they gained their feet and groggily continued.

Sure Mike Mazurki, former N. Y. U. football star, and Journeyman Jawn Katan labored to a well-booed 30-minute draw, and Scotty McDougall outfumbled Ed Meske in the 20-minute opener.

News From Major League Training Camps

Detroit Sends Team of Cubs Against Reds and Carries Off 14-to-4 Victory

By the Associated Press.

TAMPA, Fla., March 12.—The world champion Detroit Tigers sent a team of cubs against the Cincinnati Reds today and carried off a 14-to-4 victory.

Pitchers Al Hollingsworth and Lee Stine, a recruit from St. Paul, yielded 14 this in the first seven innings, during which the Tigers went hitless only in the fifth. Rookie Twirler Francis Wistert, from Fort Worth, finished without yielding a hit.

Before the game, General Manager Larry MacPhail commented on reports the Boston Reds were willing to buy Dizzy Dean by saying, "We'll pay for Dean $25,000 more than any other club in the National League.

Bradenton, Fla., March 12.—Sam Narron, rookie catcher, is either naive or clever, judging from a story they told about him today at the Cardinals' spring camp.

When the training season opened Manager Frank Frisch suggested that each recruit pick out a regular and follow him, doing whatever he did.

Sam, what are you doing?" Frisch wanted to know. "Didn't I tell you to pick out some regular and do what he did?"

"Yes," replied Narron, "I picked you."

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 12. Not only is Manager Roger Hornsby of the Browns stressing the value of the bunt as an offensive weapon, but he is demanding that his pitchers be able to field them.

After each batter took two healthy swings at the ball today in training camp he bunted and the hurlers were required to get to the ball and toss it to first. Hornsby is sending his pitchers through a strenuous daily workout that will develop their legs as well as arms.

Avalon, Calif., March 12.—The Chicago Cubs will return to Catalina Island to train for the 1937 National League season, Owner P. K. Wrigley, who also owns the island, said today as the squad broke camp.

Brooklyn pounded four Philadelphia pitchers for 12 hits, including home runs by Freddie Lindstrom, Vincent Sherlock and Danny Taylor.

George Earnshaw pitched the first five innings for the Dodgers and gave up only four hits. The Phils, however, scored five runs in the third inning on a single hit. Two errors, a walk, a hit batsman and a home run by Leo Norris, young shortstop, gave the Phils their big cluster.

San Antonio, Tex., March 12.—Guy Bush, veteran big-time hurler, picked out young Mace Brown today as one of the most likely prospects on the Pirates' younger pitching staff.

Bush has been spending a lot of time coaching the youngster, and declared:

Sarasota, Fla., March 12.—Mel Almada's homer with two on base enabled Manager Joe Cronin's team to defeat the Yannigans, 8-5 today in the second Red Sox's first practic game.

Racing Would Bring $700,000 Revenue Yearly, Hearing Told

O'Hara Sees D. C. Aided By Bill

Labor Urges Measure; Opponents Will Be Heard Today.

By Walter Haight.

HORSE racing would bring the District $700,000 yearly in revenue, Walter O'Hara told the committeemen at the joint hearing yesterday on the Norton bill to legalize racing here with pari-mutuel betting. Furthermore, O'Hara bet with Representative Dirksen that the District's share would be at least half that amount.

The New England manufacturer and sportsman had set his figure for the expected revenue when Representative Dirksen said, "I'd like to bet you a hat that the District's share will not amount to half that sum."

Willing to Wager.

From the testimony it was apparent that Dirksen made his estimate from the fact that Illinois gained only $553,397 last year. However, that State's revenue is derived from a daily license fee of from $1,000 to $2,500 as compared with the $7,000 daily tax, 1 per cent of pari-mutuel play and 15 per cent of net profits which go to Maryland. The Norton bill calls for 3½ per cent of the betting "take," as is the case in Rhode Island.

Yesterday's session was given over entirely to those on the side of racing, with O'Hara as the principal witness. After expressing a desire that the bill be passed "strictly on its merits," O'Hara renewed his promise to give Washington "a duplicate of the Narragansett track." In addition, he said that the new track, to be built on the site of the Benning oval, the last stand of racing here in 1908, would sponsor steeplechase racing.

O'Hara's testimony did not contain a plea that the bill be passed. He confined his remarks mostly to statistics on the cost of construction of the plant, money to be gained by the District in taxes and the relief of unemployment here both through the building and maintenance of a racing plant.

$2,500,000 Investment.

"It is estimated that the consideration of the track and the installation of expensive improvements which the racing public everywhere is demanding will cost in the neighborhood of $2,000,000, and the cost of the land will necessitate an investment of $2,500,000," O'Hara said.

In answer to press statements that outside promoters planned to "exploit and grow fat" on the citizens of Washington, O'Hara said, "I merely wish to say that if this bill is passed that I shall gladly permit anyone in the city to share in the investment that is required and the risk that is involved, if any local people so desire."

The cross-examination of O'Hara was conducted with some good-natured bantering between the sportsman and the committeemen. At one stage a Representative remarked, "I'll bet you it will not." And O'Hara replied instantly, "You have a bet, sir."

$6,000 Daily Fee.

Much time was given over to a discussion of the amount of tax that would be taken out of the mutuel play, and O'Hara countered with a proposition to pay the $6,000 daily fee now charged nearby Maryland tracks.

Racing scored a point when citizens representing the localities nearest the track testified to their indorsement of the bill. Labor backed the bill in stern fashion and a good part of the morning was taken over to estimates on labor and materials.

The hearing was adjourned before all the witnesses favoring the bill had been heard. At the conclusion of their testimony tomorrow the opposition will have its inning. Churches, civic bodies and reform groups were well represented in the audience, as were many officials of the Maryland tracks.

The committeemen present were Chairman Palmisano, Maryland; Representatives Patman, Texas; Dirksen, Illinois; Brewster, Maine, and Carpenter, Kansas, and Senators Bilbo, Mississippi, and Carey, Wyoming.

LADY GENIE, having much speed after getting into a forward position at the first turn, displaced FULL UP without effort when placed to mild pressure, was shaken up entering the homestretch and drew out at her leisure. CREOLE BIRD was rated within striking distance of the leaders, responded when called on, but could not threaten the winner. LANGUORUS, slow to get going, swung around her company in the last half mile and finished stoutly.

FERVID, rated off the pace for the first six furlongs while on the outside, gained fast when put to pressure and finishing strongly, was up in the closing sixteenth mile. JEZREEL, prominent in the early racing, came through between the leaders entering the homestretch and closed strongly. ENTREE was steadied while setting the pace, raced NED'S AFFINITY into defeat, but weakened in the closing furlong.

THIRD RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $700. For 2-year-olds, colts and geldings. Went to post at 3:34. Off at 3:42½. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Winner, Bomar Stable's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE SHAVER, $10.00, $5.30, $3.90; WISE BUN, $4.50, $3.80; COBE, $4.50.

LITTLE SHAVER, in the thick of contention from the beginning, took command when approaching the homestretch and had something in reserve at the close. WISE BUN found racing room after the opening furlong and closed in determined fashion on the outside of the leaders. COBE saved ground at the stretch turn and came readily under severe urging. BOHANNON was strongly ridden to shake off AMHURST, but weakened in the last quarter mile.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Vernal Handicap. Class C. Purse, $700. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:12. Off at 4:17. Start good (chute). Won driving; place same. Winner, Mrs. W. SIR QUEST, hustled along to keep abreast of ST. MORITZ after losing command, rallied alongside leaving the homestretch, took the lead in the closing sixteenth and came out slowly at the end. BELOW ZERO was rushed hard all the way and came willingly for the final drive. THE HARE dropped back leaving the backstretch, responded to strong pressure and was gaining fast nearing the finish.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; claiming. Purse, $800. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:47. Off at 4:48. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, F. W. Woodman's ch. g. RESERVIST, racing forwardly, slipped through on the inside of the leaders to take command leaving the backstretch, moved clear approaching the homestretch and held WILD TURKEY safe. Latter away well but permitted to drop back going to the first turn, was steered wide to reach field, lost ground, but came willingly in the last half mile. BRANDON PRINCE went in the first flight, but could not gain when put to a hard drive.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; claiming. Purse, $700. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 5:22. Off at 5:23½. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, T. S. and J. S. Mulvihill's b. f. GALLOPING, steadied in pursuit of WESTDAY until leaving the backstretch, responded gamely to move into the lead in the last quarter mile, withstood a hard drive and barely lasted long enough. STEALTH entered contention midway of the backstretch, obtained racing room on the inside in the last five sixteenths, drew on even terms with the winner in the last sixteenth and fought it out courageously. SUN CAMP raced in the first flight for the entire trip and held on stoutly in the closing drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 6:00. Off at 6:00½. Start bad. Won ridden out; place driving. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PARITY, $57.20, $19.70, $12.70; CELIBA, $5.40, $4.20; HURRAY, $6.70.

PARITY moved into an easy lead after reaching the backstretch, stalled off a bold effort from CELIBA and came away under steady pressure at the end. CELIBA went along in closest attendance of the winner, made a strong effort when nearing the homestretch, but weakened during the stretch drive. Rinaldi Beats All-Stars, 23-20; Leaves for Tourney at Denver

College Aces' Late Rally Futile

By Dave Herman.

RINALDI'S streamlined basketball team, contenders for the National A. A. U. championship, was forced to use all of its cunning and scoring power before putting away an all-star college quintet last night at Heurich's gym. The score was 23-20. More than 900 spectators were in the stands cheering the Tailors in their final local game of the season.

Immediately after the contest the nine players—Hal Kieseel and Bill Noonan, centers; Bobby Lucas, Ollie Tipton and Pickles Walker, forwards; Bernie Lieb, Sammy Hook, Carroll Shore and Cliff Keyser, guards—left for Denver to compete in the national championships which open Sunday night.

Coach Davey Keppel and Manager Jim Hennessey also accompanied the team. Several A. A. U. officials, including Basketball Chairman Win Johnson, gave the players a royal send-off at Union Station.

Collegians Take Lead.

As far as the game was concerned, it was a hum-dinger from the start, with the college boys taking an early lead and being in front, 7-6, after ten minutes. Rinaldi put on steam and went 18-11 at the turn.

Rinaldi wasn't so sure of itself in the closing session, as Harry Bassin, Georgetown's all-conference star, and Bernie Buscher, All-Southern Conference choice from Maryland, potted goals. Coach Keppel used ten men, substituting frequently. His new quintet of Lucas, Tipton, Kiesel, Lieb and Shore looked like a million dollars. That is the way the team will open at Denver.

The collegians had about as fine material as a coach would want. Acting Capt. Ben Golfaden, G. W. star, gave each of his eight players ample opportunity to display his wares. Each was good, too.

Fine Teamwork.

Hermie Schmarr, all-District scoring ace, and Tommy O'Brien, all-District forward, showed customers why they are called stars with their playing. Oddly enough, the eight collegians, playing together for the first time, showed plenty of teamwork.

Northeast Boys Club won the 130-pound A. A. U.-Post championship by defeating Macfarland Young Men's Club, 27-15.

Tonight at 7:30 the Sandy Spring and Typo girls meet for the senior championship, and Bovello Plumbers will engage Twin Oaks Black Hawks for the 145-pound crown at 8:30. Both games will be played at Heurich's gym.

Maryland Boxers Off for Wisconsin

Meet Badgers Tonight in Season's Finale.

Keyed to a piccolo pitch, mentally and physically, the University of Maryland's ring team swung its duffle-bag over its collective shoulder yesterday at noon and headed for Madison, Wis., where it clashes with the battling Badgers of Wisconsin tonight in the final match of the season.

Two rookies were in the group that entrained for the scene of battle, but they bolstered the team rather than detracted from its ability. Bob Slye, who quit hurdling long enough ot pick up a few of the finer points of boxing, a 125-pounder, and Blair Smith, football reserve who will fight in the 175-pound division, are the lads.

Inasmuch as this is the Old Liners' final appearance under their present coach they will go into action under pressure, more determined than ever to win. But the flailing fists of four veterans, rather than determination, appeared to be more in their favor.

Co-ed Defends Diving Title

CLAUDIA ECKERT, Northwestern University student, who will defend her national high-board diving crown at the A. A. U. championships at Chicago on April 1-4.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla., March 12.

IT WAS great sport out there for the veterans today as the Washington club staged its first practice game of the season.

They could afford to laugh, and did, at their own discomfiture as they kicked the ball around for half a dozen errors, popped up ingloriously and otherwise paid no heed to misplays that in midseason would have brought the boos of the grandstands crashing down about their ears.

POVICH.

Yeah, it wasn't important. They were immune to criticism and it would all be set down as no more than was to be expected in the opening ball game, a pick-up affair between Manager Bucky Harris' regulars and rookies. And the veterans extracted every last bit of fun out of the proceedings, laughing with the fans as balls were muffed, throws were dropped and easy chances otherwise mutilated.

But out there today pathos was traveling arm in arm with jollity. The crowd applauded as Cliff Bolton smashed a terrific line drive into right-center-field that would have been a home run for any ambitious runner. And as Bolton slipped rounding second base, hesitated in confusion, and barely made third on his long hit, the fans on the sidelines laughed uproariously. Bolton, too, broke into a broad grin. It was funny, all right.

But it wasn't funny to young Ken Raffenberger, the kid southpaw from Oneonta, N. Y., who had pitched that ball to Bolton. It wasn't funny at all. It was pregnant with tragedy. That triple and the way Bolton finally made three bases on it might have been laughable to the fans, but to young Raffenberger it was an awful jolt, bordering on the crash of all his big league ambitions.

You see, he was out there trying to make a favorable impression on Manager Bucky Harris and Owner Clark Griffith. He was being given his first chance to pitch in a ball game after patiently working for almost three weeks to get his young arm in shape for the effort, and he was trying to remember all that Griffith and Harris had taught him, and hope was high within his young breast as he strode to the mound for his debut.

You know what dreams the kid carried out to the pitcher's box with him as he made ready to face the regulars. It's not hard to picture how he set his face with determination and resolved to give the pitch everything he had; how he didn't want, above all, to disillusion the folks back home at Oneonta who had heard that he was with the Senators; how he wanted to make good just this one game so Manager Harris would tab him for further reference.

Well, that sock by Bolton just about wrote the lad a one-way ticket back to Oneonta. He had been a bit wild before that, but he still had a chance to redeem himself if he could get by that last inning. But a three-base hit that meant no more to Bolton than a birth in China brought ruin to all of Raffenberger's hopes.

Managers take not to such things when rookies are working on the mound, Raffenberger knew. He had been told that his fate with the Nats would depend upon his success in these early practice games and he knew full too well what it all meant. Bolton had made an unimportant, if swell hit, the fans laughed as he barely stretched a home run into a triple and it was indeed all very funny—to everybody except the lad out there pitching. One look at his sorrowful pan and you knew that with him it was dead serious.

In Short—

Manager Bucky Harris is so dissatisfied with his reserve catching talent that he visited the Phillies' camp at Winter Haven today in an attempt to pry a surplus catcher away from Manager Jimmy Wilson . . . Emmet Ormsby, red-headed hero of Belleau Wood and father of 11, is umpire assigned to the Nats' camp by the American League . . . Lee Meadows, now retired from baseball, witnessed the Nats' game today . . . he was one of the Pittsburgh pitchers who beats the Nats in the 1925 World Series . . . League President Will Harridge and Umpire in Chief Tommy Connolly also sat in on the proceedings . . . they will remain here to see the Nats play the Red Sox on Saturday . . . For the first time in ten seasons, the Nats may show a profit on their Southern training trip . . . Orlando and the vicinity to the number of 3,000 is expected to witness Saturday's game, in contrast to the attendance figures of the Nats at Biloxi, where the largest crowd in history numbered only 1,000.

Post Mortems . . .

Pat Hunt, the beauteous diver from Alexandria, is studying Polynesian and Tahitian dialects in her spare time . . . Popeye Karpowich, captain of the Catholic University Orange Bowl champions, says that he is organizing an All-Lithuanian football team to play in Lithuania next fall . . . just lithen to Popeye . . . It was Cap Anson who started this spring training for baseball players way back in 1886 . . . he startled Chicago sports fans by taking the White Sox to Hot Springs, Ark., to have the whiskered players take Turkish baths and to tune up for the season . . . Did you know that Gabby Hartnett, the great St. Louis catcher, has not dropped a foul fly in five years? . . . It is estimated that a visiting team's "take" for one basketball game at Madison Square Garden is ten times as much as it receives for any other game . . . The University of Tokyo's fast-fielding but weak-hitting team will tour the United States this summer . . . Worst pun of the week—there is no question but that Steve was Halaiko'd by Phil Furr . . . Hialeah's $14,000,000 in bets during the late lamented season is nearly half as much as all the money bet at all the British tracks during 1935 . . . A double dribble was called on a University of Washington basketball player recently when the ball skidded up his arm and bounced twice on his head.

'Dub' Sweeps Are Booked Tomorrow

Buck Dodge Rolls 195 in Legion League; Suess Sets Record.

COL. BILLY WOOD is throwing his annual duckpin party for the mediocre bowler tomorrow night, launching the first block of his seventh annual "Dub" sweepstakes at 8 p. m. at the Lucky Strike alleys.

With the ever-increasing popularity of events for duck-pinners in this class, under 107 average, the entry list is expected to exceed the stakes of last season when 58 bowlers participated.

Fifteen games will be rolled on three successive Saturdays, all on the same drives, and an exceptionally small fee of $5 will cover both the cost of games and boost the prize money.

The echo of a 195-game spread like wild-fire last night at the Lucky Strike drives when Charley (Buck) Dodge, of the Bunker Hill team in the American Legion League, hit for the sensational score. "Buck" accumulated the total with a spare in the first frame, a triple-header strike and five more successive marks. The score is but two pins short of the recognized league record game for the District, chalked up by Eddie Keith. Spurred on by Dodge's efforts, Bunker Hill established an all-time league record game of 670.

Woodward & Lothrop withstood the challenges of S. Kann Sons to boost its lead to a game and a half in the Department Store League last night at the Recreation drives, taking an odd-game decision by shooting a set of 1,784 to tie the all-time total pinfall record of the Hecht Co. team. Johny Anderson led the assault of the pace-setters with a 386-set, being ably supported by Dan Hopper's 141-game.

Carroll Daly (Auditors) and Joe Gauzza (Hydrographic) share individual honors in the War Department League last night at Arcadia, tieing for high game with 141. Gauzza's 384 captured high set. Statistics annexed high-team game and set laurels with 623 and 1,687, respectively.

Despite the efforts of Tony Suess, who chalked up games of 137, 158 and 118, for a record set in the Daylight League, at the Covention Hall alleys, The Washington Post team was forced to bow twice to the News.

Gilbert and Fator Banned by N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 12.—Laverne Fator, former well-known jockey and now a trainer, and Johnny Gilbert, rated among the ranking present-day riders, today were refused licenses by the stewards of the Jockey Club.

Without giving any reason for their action, the stewards voted to table the applications of both Fator and Gilbert along with those of Jockeys Charles Landlot and Thomas Hallen and several lesser-known trainers.

Maj. Algernon Daingerfield, assistant secretary of the Jockey Club, explained that the action was not final, however. Fator and Gilbert, as well as the others, will be given a hearing before the New York State Racing Commission if they so desire. Whether they are definitely refused licenses to ply their trade in New York and co-operating States depends on the action taken by the commission.

Capital Women's Horse Wins Race

By the Associated Press.

Aiken, S. C., March 12.—The Mole, 7-year-old chestnut gelding owned by Mrs. Grace Eustis, of Washington, won the annual Aiken point-to-point race over a 2½-mile drag line course in Hitchcock Woods today. The time was 4 minutes 29 seconds. Howard C. Fair, of Aiken and Westbury, Long Island, was the rider.

The Mole, a 3-to-1 favorite, finished three lengths ahead of Vauxtoi, owned and ridden by Capt. Demetri Ivenenko, of Westbury. The third place winner was Mr. Gingo, owned and ridden by Howell H. Howard, of Dayton, Ohio.

Richmond Bowler Shoots 'Flat 100'

Richmond, Va., March 12 (AP).—C. D. Gray, lanky, gray-haired Richmond bowler, last night rolled a perfect flat game of 100, thereby entering into what is said to be a three-way tie for a world record.

The performance was Gray's contribution to the Hofheimer's team total in the Merchants' League competition at the Health Center alleys here.

The mark is said to have been equalled once before in Norfolk and once in Washington.

Heurich to Oppose Sun Radio Booters

Heurich Brewers and Sun Radio will clash Sunday in the opening game of the city soccer championship series at Benning Field, at 2:30 p. m.

Although numerous challenges have been bandied to and fro between these crack elevens in the last two seasons, they have never met each other in competition, but the rival players are familiar with most of the art and ability of their opponents through contact with and against them in international and other games.

Heurich had most of its regulars in last week's line-up against the Recreation League team and expects to be at full strength Sunday. Considering the long lay-off because of bad weather, the players were in good condition and will approach tip-top shape this week-end.

Sun Radio will be minus the services of Sammy Hook—en route to Denver, Colo., to help Rinaldi Tailors bring the national A. A. U. basketball title to Washington—but plans to fill his place with Bernie Forney, the aggressive center-half, whose stellar work kept the Mitchell Brothers' team among the leaders during the last two seasons.

4 Hilltop Trackmen In K. C. Races Saturday

Hopeful of redeeming a shred of their alma mater's lost track prestige, a quartet of Georgetown trackmen will invade New York Saturday night to run in the annual Brooklyn Knights of Columbus games.

Coach Jim Mulligan yesterday selected Doug Hanks and Al Frey for the 1000-yard handicap run, and George Bogan and Vincent Healy for the 80-yard handicap. Bogan, a freshmen, is a former Tech High School star.

Owls Awarded 3 Places on Star Team; Bassin in Second Group.

POLLING 18 points in a vote of team coaches, Harry Bassin, Georgetown forward, won a position on the second team in the annual All-Eastern Conference team, league officials announced last night. Bassin, according to the vote, was ranked seventh best in the loop.

Temple, which placed three men on the first team, dominated the selections, although the Owls failed to win any secondary ratings. Pittsburgh and West Virginia each won a berth on the first five.

Other Georgetown players, whose ability was recognized by the coaches, were Don Gibeau, forward, and Mike Petroskey, center. The selections and final team standings:

Hillendale Gets Open Trials On May 11

4 Berths May Be Awarded Qualifiers; 20 From D. C. to Compete.

HILLENDALE COUNTY CLUB has been awarded the sectional qualifying trials for the National Open golf championship, it was announced by William D. Waxter, jr., president of the Maryland State Golf Association.

Waxter was notified yesterday by the United States Golf Association of Hillendale's selection for the 36-hole medal test, the date of which is May 11.

The National Proper is scheduled June 4, 5 and 6, at Baltusrol Golf Club, Short Hills, N. J.

Although in the past only from two to three qualifying places have been open in the sectional trials, it has been bruited about in local professional circles that the Middle Atlantic sector would be awarded at least four berths this season.

Held at Suburban.

Last year's Open trials were held at a Baltimore course, Suburban, three Washington pros—Al Houghton, Cliff Spencer and Leo Walper—winning qualifying places.

Selection of Hillendale for the Open trials means that a District course will get the National Amateur qualifying test. Columbia Country Club is in line for the simon-pure trials, and likely will be awarded it by the U. S. G. A. in a few weeks.

At least 20 District professionals will enter the National Open trials.

Rain yesterday merely added insult to injury as far as District public links golfers were concerned. The Rock Creek and East Potomac courses were to have had their official openings this week-end, but Managers Harry Graham and Ed Burns stated that they wouldn't be playable until March 21.

Hyattsville Plays In State Tourney

Hyattsville High School, newly crowned basketball champions, representing Prince Georges County in the Maryland State tournament, meets the winner of Carroll County, New Windsor High School, on the latter's floor tonight at 8 o'clock in the first-round play for the Western Shore honors.

Coach William Yarnall stated yesterday that all his lads were in the pink of condition and that he expected to return home with a victory. If Hyattsville should win today it plays host to Annapolis High, the title holders in Anne Arundel County.

Hyattsville will start the same line-up that downed Mount Rainier for the county laurels. At the forward positions will be Johnny Moran and William Burke. Elwood Ogle will be at the pivot post. The guard positions will be occupied by Nathaniel Mostow and Oswald Joyce.

Huck Wynne Gets More Work And Likes It—Still Meeting Ball

(This is another in a series of stories from the Nationals' training camp at Orlando, Fla., written by Huck Wynne, Washington sandlotter whose trial is being financed by The Washington Post.)

By Huck Wynne.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 12.—Things are beginning to get a great deal more interesting for me in the Washington training camp nowadays. I'm getting more work than ever before.

When Manager Harris sent Floyd Prettyman to Chattanooga and Alex Sabo to Albany yesterday it left me as one of the four catchers still with the squad and its keeping me a lot busier.

With a half-dozen catchers always around, none of us had much of a session behind the bat or in infield practice, but today I began to feel like a big leaguer. Harris had me handling pitchers all over the place and I was in there for a half hour behind the bat during batting practice.

I don't know what it means to me, but it made me feel pretty good, needless to say, when Harris kept me in preference to the other catchers. At least, it made me feel that he wanted a longer look at me, and that's something.

Of course, I'm wondering what impressions Bucky is gaining from my work. Sometimes I feel so curious about it that I want to rush right up and ask him, but I've never been able to work up that much nerve, and I guess it wouldn't be the best thing anyway.

But there's one thing I feel sure of. There hasn't been any complaint yet about my hitting. I feel certain. We're looking at better pitching now and I'm still meeting the ball solidly. If that counts for anything, I hope Harris has been paying attention.

Jobs and Wages Show Decline For January

Man-Hours Drop 1.9% and Pay Rolls 2.4% From December.

New York, March 12.—Average weekly and hourly earnings, hours of work per week, employment, and pay rolls were lower in January than in December, in 25 manufacturing industries, according to the monthly survey of the National Industrial Conference Board.

Total man-hours worked in January were 1.9 per cent less than in December. Employment dropped 0.7 per cent, and pay rolls declined 2.4 per cent. Average hourly earnings fell from 60.5 cents in December, to 60.0 cents in January, and average weekly earnings dropped from $23.47 to $23.07. Since there was no change in the cost of living from December to January, real weekly earnings declined to the same degree as nominal weekly earnings.

Despite the general decline in manufacturing activity from December to January, a number of industries made gains. In 11 of the 25 industries average weekly earnings were higher in January than in December. In 9, average hourly earnings were more, and in 8, employment was higher. In 11 industries the average hours of work per week were higher in January than in December, but in only 4 of them were they more than 40.

Compared with January, 1935, substantial improvement was made during the 12-month period. Average hourly earnings rose 1.0 per cent, average hours of work per week were 5.5 per cent more, and average weekly earnings in January, 1936, were 6.8 per cent above those of a year before. Because of an increase in the cost of living during the year, real weekly earnings were only 2.7 per cent above those of January, 1935.

New York, March 12.—Net profits of Transamerica Corporation, consolidated companies, and controlled subsidiaries for 1935 increased 77.45 per cent over 1934, according to the annual report made public today.

Bank Balances Continue Drop; Gold Increases

Reserves Off $27,000,000 in Week; Excess Still Over 3 Billions.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Banks' condition statement disclosed last evening that member bank reserve balances continued to decline during week ended March 11.

A decrease of $27,000,000 during the week reduced the total reserves to $5,786,000,000. This total, which was $1,198,000,000 in excess of last year, was still about $3,010,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

The normal gold inflow was resumed during the week which showed American stocks augmented by $3,000,000, bringing the total to $10,170,000,000. The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended March 11, as reported by the Federal Reserve Bank, was $2,474,000,000, a decrease of $4,000,000 compared with the preceding week and an increase of $11,000,000 compared with the correspinding week in 1935.

"On March 11 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,473,,000,000, a decrease of $2,000,000 for the week. This decrease corresponds with decreases of $8,000,000 in money in circulation and $27,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and an increase of $3,000,000 in monetary gold stock, offset in part by increases of $11,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve Banks and $21,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and a decrease of $3,000,000 in Treasury and National Bank currency. Member bank reserve balances on March 11 were estimated to be approximately $3,010,000,000 in excess of legal requirements."

Chicago, March 12 (AP).—Not a single egg remained in Philadelphia storage warehouses at one time today, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics here reported. Traders on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange said this was the first time in many years that the egg box in the Quaker City was entirely empty.

The report showed 66 cases were taken out of Philadelphia warehouses yesterday. A year ago there were 9,933 cases in storage there.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Stocks and Bonds Decline With Less Favorable War Developments; Wheat Higher.

New York, March 12.—The financial day was about as dismal as the weather. Stocks were hard-pressed at two stages in the trading and were treated coolly the rest of the time. A selling shower struck the market just before noon and again shortly before the last hour of trading. Prices closed above their worst, but with general declines and many losses of 2 to 4 points. Stock turnover was around 3,000,000 shares. Bonds also were droopy. May wheat closed 1⅛ cents a bushel higher at 100¾ cents.

Newspaper headlines on the war news looked more unfavorable and that may have started a fresh decline in stocks and bonds, but in view of the prevailing calmness among leaders in the financial district over the prospect for early fighting in Europe the news was not convincing. It is fairly certain that until at least surface indications become more reassuring as regards the Italian war in Ethiopia, the German menace to Europe, and the Japanese and Russian dispute, the markets will continue to be nervous at best and weak at the worst.

The advance in stocks had run for nearly a year without important interruption, in spite of many opportunities offered from time to time to give the bears a chance. The pouring of money into securities in realization of business improvement and expectation of further recovery, as a hedge against inflation of credit if not of the currency, and the influx of foreign funds have until now been sufficient to stave off a downward reaction.

Excuse for Selling.

Regarded from its technical position, the market has been advancing well beyond its period for a break. One other reason why it has done so has been the capital gain tax, which has deterred those with larger paper profits from taking them. All those forces continue at work and the bulls look for them again to halt the current decline before much damage is done to recent purchasers. Meanwhile, many in Wall street are not particularly unhappy at the sight of a market setback, as they would rather see a little sobriety result from an obvious cause, such as the war talk, than from a public speculating spree, such as was rapidly developing up to a fortnight ago.

Whatever may have been responsible for the selling of stocks and bonds, the less favorable tenor of the war news obviously was to blame for a further slide in European currencies against dollars. Doubtless sterling was supported, but the rate along with those for the gold currencies declined, partly under the pressure of transfer of funds to this country. Japanese money had a hard time and lost several points. It is altogether probable that gold imports once more will come here, and if they do they would nullify other influences now working to cut down excess bank reserves. Gold coming in is the great upbuilding of bank reserves.

Weakness struck virtually all stock groups. Oils were helped by an advance in the middle of the day, but they could not maintain their absolute strength. Metals were depressed by a break in Federal Mining and considerable selling of International Nickel. Foreign sales were reported among the brokerage houses as being an important factor in the decline, but at the same time the foreign exchange markets professed to note a gain in foreign funds. The trader was left to take his choice and make what sense out of it he could.

Ticker Falls Behind.

Leading issues, such as Steel, General Motors, General Electric and Telephone, lost 1 to 2 points, but recovered a little in the last hour after a late onslaught of selling had been checked and the tickers caught up with their reporting job. As usual, that added to the confidence of the market. Tobacco issues continued their long decline.

Rubber shares looked for a while as though they might follow the oils upward. Some of them made good gains. Rails were hard hit in spite of expectation of good earnings reports for February, with allowances made for higher operating costs because of the storms. Recent specialty favorites dropped from 3 to 5 points. Included in that list were Chemical, Douglas, Wright, Case, Amerada and Harvester.

Rail losses amounted to 1 to 4 points, with Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Santa Fe the chief sufferers. Nickel Plates were woozy. Central lost more than 2 points and Great Northern gave up as much. Chemicals dropped 1 to 5 points, Chrysler broke 3 points, Steel 2 points and General Motors 2 points. American Smelting was weak in the metal list. Mail orders and airplanes fell away 1 to 2 points. Fractional losses were the rule for the foods, amusements and merchants.

A few exceptions to the downward drift were Electric Power, General Foods, United States Rubber, Gimbel and Keystone Steel. The latter was quite active in the early trading.

Annual Reports.

The "K" forms of the SEC, for annual reports by listed companies, are beginning to trickle in. So far nineteen companies have filed, only two (Cincinnati Union Terminal and Gulf States Steel) being Stock Exchange companies. The SEC standard of accounting for original registrations have had little effect on the amount of information included in reports to stockholders for 1935, although Allis-Chalmers today presented adjusted figures for previous years in order to conform to the accounts it had submitted to the SEC. The Stock Exchange's expressed desire for comparative statements has not been taken seriously by many companies. If the exchange makes its request a little stronger it would do no harm to add a wish for a statement of earnings per share. This is a figure that the exchange insists upon in listing applications; it is not unreasonable to ask the same service to stockholders.

Oil Shares.

Shortly before noon the market was enlivened by a rush in Standard Oil of New Jersey, the stock climbing above 65 for a gain of 2⅝ points. That price was the highest paid since 1930. Standard's strength, according to board-room gossip, was said to be due to buying on an investment order for several million dollars for account of an important firm. That buying, the story goes, has been takin place quietly for some time. Naturally other rumors sprang up to garnish the tale, especially the one about distribution of Imperial Oil holdings, which was denied, and Jersey's strength touched an all-round rush for the oil shares. Many of them gained 1 to 2 points.

Federal Mining.

Announcement by President Brownell of Federal Mining that no payments would be made on the preferred for "some time ot come" and that it was proposed to reduce the par value of the common from $100 to $10 a share brought a sharp break in the stocks. The common opened 13 points lower and then sank about 10 more. The preferred began 7 points down and soon lost 3 more. The preferred sold yesterday, but the last previous sale of the common was Friday. Inasmuch as the company's earnings have been rising the announcement was disappointing to the market and did not seem to do other metal shares much good. Federal is controlled by American Smelting.

Brokers' Loans.

Since the big jump in brokers' loans last week was caused largely by Government financing, this week might be expected to bring a decline, and especially since the market has drooped. However, a partly offsetting factor may have been the accumulation of money for payment of the first installment on income taxes. Frequently at the quarterly income tax payment dates a bulge in brokers' loans takes place.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Trading in the stock market was sensitive, due to the political situation, and business was restricted. Prices generally were lower. British funds, declining one-half point and industrials, foreign bonds and speculative issues sold off on realising. Argentine rails were one exception, prices for which held steady. The market closed weak.

Paris—Stock traders were hesitant today awaiting the outcome of the London conference. Rentes held steady, while bank shares declined fractionally. The closing was resistant.

Liverpool—Wheat futures advanced more than a point on better milling demand for Australian and Canadian wheat and prices asked for by exporters. The cotton market was dull with some Bombay and local selling which was absorbed by trade calling at the decline.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

Research Urged To Help Solve Rail Problem

Budd, Burlington Head, Proposes Co-operative Laboratory.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 12.—A co-operative research laboratory for the industry was proposed today by President Ralph Budd of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy as one avenue to solution of what he called the "railroad problem."

"We need a highly organized research department to take advantage of developments that are now proceeding at an accelerated pace," said Mr. Budd, himself one of the pioneers in extensive use of lightweight, streamlined trains.

"The motif of this decade is speed and our work must be keyed to a new tempo," he added in an address at the annual meeting of the American Railway Engineering Association.

"My idea is that research in connection with improvements in fixed property should be amply financed by the Association of American Railroads and in charge of a competent director."

Service Tests.

With the association providing the laboratory, the rail lines could give the service tests for such items as improved rail joints, tie plates, the employment of alloys and new materials, and other innovations which would better service and lessen maintenance costs, he said. In that manner, he said, the entire industry could benefit from the advances made by individual roads.

Pointing out that heavy expenditures for maintenance can be deferred for somewhat lengthy intervals, he said there "must come a period of much larger outlay," adding:

"It is safe to say that several hundred millions of dollars will be put back into properties during the next few years. Therein lies our opportunity. The expenditures that will be made will go much farther because of these improvements and inventions."

A. R. Wilson, of Philadelphia, engineer of bridges of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was elected president of the association.

Mrs. R. H. Field Joins Mass. Mutual Agency

United Seaway Action Is Urged By Conference

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 12.—The Detroit Seaway Conference urged unification of groups seeking completion of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, and commended the "splendid leadership" of President Roosevelt in promoting the seaway at the close of its two-day session here today.

The resolution assuring the President of "our continued confidence, co-operation and support in the realization" of the 2,000-mile deep-channel project to bring ocean-going shipping to Great Lakes ports, came ten minutes after a number of delegates cheered a demand for immediate action on the St. Lawrence Treaty with Canada.

Wilber M. Brucker, former Republican Governor of Michigan, and a possible candidate for United States Senator, charged the President with "faltering and turncoating" in his attitude toward the waterway.

"Brucker asserted the "excuses offered by Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, for not bringing up the treaty for a ratification vote in the present session of Congress "are miserably lame."

The conference urged that the agencies represented, including the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater Association, the Great Lakes Harbor Association, and other lake commerce groups, "be co-ordinated and unified in some form of central organization to the end that a definite and practical program for insuring the further progress of this project be formulated and carried out."

A motion by R. J. McLean, of Detroit, demanding a vote on treaty ratification at the present session of Congress, was tabled by the conference after a retort by Mayor Daniel W. Hoan of Milwaukee, president of the harbors association, that "everything is being done that can be done."

Louis Taber, master of the National Grange, pointed out advantages accruing to agriculture from cheaper transportation, and said he favored "adoption of the treaty at this session of Congress, not at some future time."

The conference at its closing meeting also adopted a resolution expressing appreciation of the efforts of the late Charles Patton Craig, of Duluth, Minn., a pioneer in the waterway movement.

Egyptian Wants to Work for New Deal

Even from far-off Egypt they want to come and work for the New Deal. U. S. Marshal John J. Murphy received a letter the other day from "Dr. Hafez Zaky" who wants Murphy to get him a job when he soon returns to the United States.

A few weeks ago, Ollie Martin thought he would write an ad and not a letter to get a job. He inserted this inexpensive ad in The Post's "Situation Wanted" Columns and secured a job the first morning his ad appeared:

"Situations Wanted" Ads in The Post cost only one-half of The Post's regular want ad rates. For instance, a 3-line ad costs only 27 cents. If you're looking for work, take advantage of this modest rate to reach the thousands of employers who read The Post every morning.

Crisis Prompts U. S. to Retain Envoys at Posts

Phillips Cables Embassies To Restrict Leaves During Tense Period.

By the Associated Press.

The critical Franco-German situation yesterday prompted the State Department to make certain that American embassies, legations and consulates in Europe remain fully manned.

Over the signature of William Phillips, acting Secretary of State, orders were cabled to all diplomatic and consulate chiefs in Europe to scrutinize carefully applications by members of their staffs for leaves of absence, and to grant them only in cases of absolute necessity.

Officials asserted the action did not mean necessarily that trouble in Europe was anticipated here. They explained that it was taken as a matter of precaution, to avoid weakening already undermanned offices during a time of tension.

Although declining to comment publicly on the situation growing out of Germany's remilitarization of the Rhineland, Government quarters hitherto have been represented as believing that armed conflict was not an immediate threat.

Robert W. Bingham, Ambassador to Great Britain now on leave in the United States, who yesterday conferred for the second time in a week with President Roosevelt, said after his first talk that he did not regard war as likely in the near future.

Whether late developments in London and Paris had caused any alteration in this official attitude was not made apparent here last night.

Similar Orders.

Officials explained that similar orders restricting leave of absence had been issued in the past to foreign service offices stationed in countries where extraordinary political or diplomatic tension prevailed.

Yesterday's edict will be effective indefinitely.

On the embassies and legations in European capitals falls the duty of keeping the State Department fully informed of all significant developments of the present crisis.

Since Germany renounced the Locarno treaty and moved troops into the demilitarized Rhineland last Saturday their cables have been pouring into Washington with increasing frequency.

Green Protests, Berry Council Revises Report

Stand on U. S. Competition Modified; Commission on Wages Is Urged.

By the Associated Press.

A protest by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, led to modification yesterday of a report to George L. Berry's industrial council, favoring complete withdrawal of the Federal Government from competition with private enterprise.

The council adopted the modified report of one of its committees, along with other committee reports favoring modification of the anti-trust laws and creation of a commission to regulate wages and hours in industry.

Green told the council in executive session that the Government had greatly aided recovery through such agencies as the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Home Owners Loan Corporation that might be considered competitors with private enterprise in normal times.

After yesterday's session, Berry, the President's co-ordinator for industrial co-operation, said:

"Having outlined its policies, the council has finished the first phase of its endeavors and, with the indorsement of official sources, will be ready to proceed with long-term studies with a view to working out actual solutions of these most vital questions."

Comptroller, Critic of New Deal, Suggested for Senate Committee Post.

By the Associated Press.

Engagement of Comptroller General J. R. McCarl, critic of many New Deal expenditures, as a technical advisor, was placed for consideration yesterday before the new Senate Committee on Government Reorganization.

Chairman Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, said he presented "the question of obtaining the advice of Mr. McCarl as soon as his term expires June 30." He added that action would be taken at the committee's next meeting, "in a few days."

The possibility that Lewis Douglas, former Director of the Budget, who resigned because he could not agree with President Roosevelt's policies, might also be invited to serve with the committee "was not mentioned today," Byrd told reporters.

To Recommend Men.

"I will recommend such men as Harold W. Dodds, president of Princeton University; Luther Gulick, director of the Institute of Public Administration, and Louis Brownlow, director of the Public Administration Clearing House," the Senator added.

Byrd said nearly two-score Federal agencies would be scrutinized by his new committee.

"I regard these as a good starting point for our investigation, to the end of eliminating duplicating activities, reduction of costs, and increasing efficiency in the Federal Government," the Virginian said.

Under action by his committee, upon its organization yesterday, Byrd, as chairman, was authorized to "confer with fact-finding agencies" such as the Brookings Institution, so as to present to the committee a plan of reorganization, and to present names of "five outstanding students of governmental reorganization" to serve as technical advisors.

Committee Intact.

Byrd said he hoped the committee named by Vice President Garner would remain intact. Minority Leader McNary was reported as wishing to be relieved. Other members are Majority Leader Robinson and Senators O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, and Townsend (Republican), Delaware.

Byrd had requested the investigation, as being in keeping with the Democratic platform of 1932, calling for abolition of "useless agencies" and consolidation of "overlapping bureaus" in a "drastic reorganization" of the Federal Government, at a saving of "not less than 25 per cent" of governmental costs.

"I believe the plan to be reported to the Senate next year will provide for the savings of hundreds of millions of dollars," the Senator said.

Senators Investigate Government Agencies

2 Blocs Fight Taxes

Although the sub-committee has not formally determined whether the undistributed profits tax should be based upon percentage brackets, or upon the present principle of taxing corporate income according to amount earned, members lean heavily toward percentage rates imposing a 15 per cent tax on the first 5 per cent of undistributed net income, ranging up to a 55 per cent tax on all over 35 per cent.

The Treasury consented to present more information on this question today. It was learned, incidentally, that the Treasury, which formerly had been represented as very much opposed to any tax "cushion" for small corporate surpluses, is no longer actively opposing the principle before the subcommittee.

Formal Action Not Taken.

Although the sub-committee has taken no formal action exempting banks and insurance companies from the corporation tax, it was confirmed in an informed quarter that there are sufficient sub-committee votes to write the exemption into the bill.

Administrative difficulties in the path of enforcing the proposed corporation earnings tax, with respect to foreign shareholders in domestic corporations, offered a perplexing problem at yesterday's sub-committee session. Members do not believe that dividends sent abroad should escape tax free, while American stockholders are taxed on their share. They considered several proposals to tax these foreign dividends at the source.

Chairman Hill said there was no particular problem regarding foreign corporations operating in this country, which he said are in the same position with regard to a present or future tax as domestic corporations.

Coinciding with the Rocky Mountain House bloc action yesterday against proposed processing taxes on beef and mutton, was a statement by Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, vehemently opposing re-enactment of any processing taxes, and growing opposition to processing taxes in the Hill sub-committee itself.

"A Fool Thing."

"It is a fool thing to come in here and propose increasing the cost of living at this time by such schedules," King said.

The House Rocky Mountain bloc appointed Representative Robinson chairman of a sub-committee to oppose the beef and mutton levies. Serving with Robinson will be Representatives Greever, of Wyoming; Roy Ayers, of Montana; Coffee, of Nebraska, and Ferguson, of Oklahoma, all Democrats.

Robinson said they were opposing the cattle and sheep taxes not alone because these commodities had never shared in benefits under the farm program, but because beef and mutton, both perishable commodities, were not susceptible to such a tax, and in the final analysis "the working man and the poorer classes will have to pay it."

The House mining States bloc named a sub-committee, headed by Representative Scrugham, and including Representatives Isabelle Greenway, of Arizona, and Theodore B. Werner, of South Dakota, to seek a lower rate of corporation taxes on small mining company surpluses. Scrugham said such corporations, which operate entirely on reserves during lean periods, should not be classed with other industrial corporations.

Simmering sub-surface for days, the tax controversy flared violently to the front on House floor yesterday in a pitched verbal battle between Chairman Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, and Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority members.

Doughton took sharp exception to statements by Treadway that the tax sub-committee was "making progress rapidly backward," and to his inferences that it will O. K. the Administration recommendation. Doughton said he resented Treadway implying the group has not "done a blamed thing," and asked if he dared to say that the Ways and Means Committee "is a rubber stamp."

"A member of the committee, and I mention no names, refuses to sit in and help write this bill, Doughton charged. "His is the greatest blame."

Answering Doughton, Representative Charles L. Gifford (Republican), of Massachusetts, charged that the Administration's tax plan "is the answer to a politician's prayer." Even if Republicans offered constructive suggestions they would never get anywhere with the Democratic majority, he charged.

Hoover Advises Life Insurance Tax Exemption

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 12.—Former President Herbert Hoover, skirting political discussion in his address before the Life Underwriters Association of New York City, suggested tonight that life insurance should be free from taxation.

The former President, a director of New York Life, said he would not talk politics, "for there is no politics in life insurance. Every race, creed and political faith are its beneficiaries and every race, creed and political faith are represented in its management."

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, who opposed Hoover for the Presidency in 1928, is also a director of New York Life.

"It would seem," the former President said, "that when our Federal Government and our State governments are endeavoring to build up economic security for the individual through old-age pensions and through unemployment insurance, that this great segment of economic security represented by life insurance might well be freed from taxation.

"I regret that that is not the case. The tax collector has found it is a fertile field for easy taxes. And such taxes come out of the poor, for only 5,000,000 persons pay income taxes, yet 63,000,000 have insurance.

"It would be just as logical to tax old-age pensions, savings bank deposits or any other provision of economic security."

At one point, Hoover alluded to his previous speeches on monetary policies of the Roosevelt Administration but did not go into them deeply.

"The Government has a peculiar responsibility to this vast majority of Americans who have denied themselves and scraped and saved that benefits might come to others," he said. "That is the obligation to establish a stable currency and a stable credit system and the safeguard that is a balanced budget.

"But this is not an occasion for more comment on that. Moreover, my views on those particular subjects are fairly well known."

Hoover described life insurance as "the first line of economic security to the average man as a whole, for the average of insurance is less than $1,600."

"Today one of the major questions to all peoples of the world is economic security," he said. "Revolutions haves wept a third of the world during the last 20 years in search for just that. And we have here in America quietly built up one of the greatest agencies of economic security that the world has known.

"There is no stronger evidence of this than in the fact that I see in some publications that the life insurance companies have paid out many billions to their policy holders during this last six years of distress."
